Doctors tell of Ike's alertness as he lay dying

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Doctors of the late President Eisenhower say that Ike maintained his intellectual functioning during his terminal illness despite 14 heart arrests.

Never at any time during his final illness was he unable to appreciate life as was charged by some observers, the doctors disclose in an article in Annals of Surgery, a medical journal.

The report, published with the permission of Eisenhower's widow, was authored by four Army medical officers.

One of the writers, Maj. Gen. Carl W. Hughes, commanding general of Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D.C., commented on some of the public criticisms concerning how Eisenhower's treatment was handled.

"As you might guess, we received many, many communications from all the world relative to his care, and criticisms as well," Dr. Hughes said. "Among the criticisms were those that we were keeping alive at great expense an individual who couldn't appreciate life.

"But this was farthest from the truth . . . He didn't change mentality whatsoever, in spite of being resuscitated 14 times."

During Eisenhower's final illness, and after his seventh heart attack, his heart stopped beating properly no fewer than 14 times. On one day, August 17, 1958, his heart was defibrillated (restarted by electrical shock) four times.

It is scarcely an exaggeration to state that Eisenhower died 14 times, the doctors relate.

They continue:

"One of the most remarkable and fortunate things about all this is that although he was unconscious a number of times, his intellectual functions, memory and recall were not compromised . . . His morale and spirits were magnificent considering all he had been through."

All of Eisenhower's intestinal operations are described in detail, including one he underwent for intestinal obstruction six months after he had been successfully resuscitated on 14 separate occasions.

Details of the autopsy are also given.

General Hughes, in a concluding statement at the end of the special medical report, says:

"I do want to say this man lived to see President Nixon elected, which was very dear to his heart.

"He lived to see his grandson David married, and I know that all of you know how very close he was to his grandson.

"He also lived to see his son John appointed ambassador to Belgium — all of these events just shortly before he died.

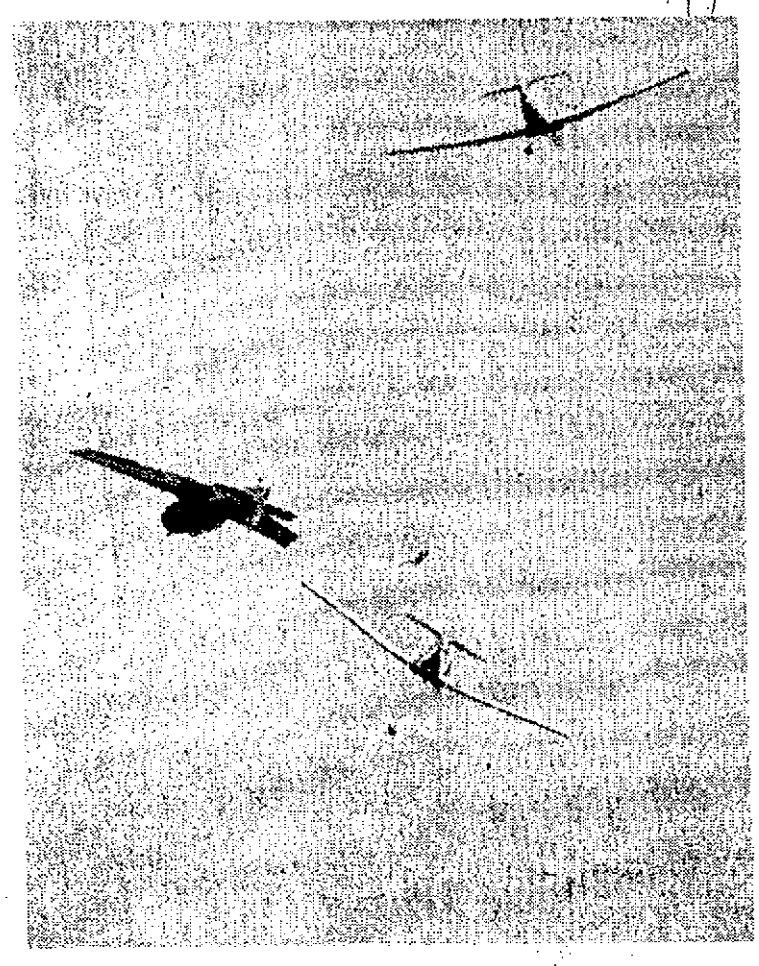

"So it was very, very worthwhile."

PLANES COLLIDE IN MID AIR AT AIR RACE

2 in-flight collisions at air races kill four pilots

CAPE MAY, N.J. (AP) — Four World War II-style fighter planes were involved in two in-flight collisions within minutes of each other at the National Air Races here Saturday and crashed in flames, killing all four pilots.

The four planes, T6 Navy trainers, were among seven that took off about 3 p.m. for a heat of the races. About 15 minutes later, as they flashed over the starting line 50 feet above the ground, one of them scraped another, lost a wing, and plummeted vertically to the ground, bursting into flames. The scraped plane landed undamaged.

The remaining planes completed one three-mile lap when three more were involved in an in-flight collision and crashed in a wooded area adjacent to the airport.

About 15,000 persons watched the disaster, but the accidents occurred far from the spectator area and race officials said there was never any danger to the onlookers.

The dead were identified as Richard Minges, 34, of Fayetteville, N.C.; Victor Baker, 43, of Glendale, Calif., a lawyer; Edwin Snyder, 47, of Jacksonville, Fla., an electrical engineer, and Joseph Quinn, 39, of Saugus, Calif., a fireman.

Officials said Minges was killed in the first collision and the three others in the second.

Race officials had said at first they would continue the races, which involve about 50 planes and pilots. They had begun Wednesday and were to conclude Sunday.

"They don't stop the Indianapolis 500," a spokesman said.

However, Stephen M. Cicala, the race director, said he would meet with state and federal aviation officials to determine whether to resume competition today.

Bob Moeller, an Air Force colonel who had flown in the previous race, said the first crash appeared to have resulted from a mid-air collision.

"The other ones, I don't know what happened," he said. "They just went 'woosh.'"

The planes fly only 50 feet above the ground around a course marked by six pylons. The T6 class races at speeds of just above 200 miles an hour.

Larger planes, like P51 Mustangs and Grumman Bearcats fly in the unlimited class around an 8.3 mile course at speeds of more than 500 miles an hour.

This is the first year the races had been held in Cape May. They were scheduled last year but canceled when the promoters couldn't meet state requirements on schedule.

Most air races in the past have been held in Reno, Nev.

Clay Lacy of Van Nuys, Cal., president of the Professional Race Pilots Association, had said in an interview last week that such races

Grave hunt abandoned as suspected plots prove empty

YUBA CITY (AP) — A search for potential graves in the riverside orchards that have yielded 25 bodies was abandoned Saturday when suspicious looking plots detected by aerial photographs revealed nothing.

"The search is over for today," said Deputy Sheriff Roger Mason. It was not immediately known if deputies, using other infrared photos, would continue the hunt this week.

Sheriff Roy Whiteaker was unavailable for questions by news reporters. Earlier in the day he said "the search is over itself except for the checking of the infrared."

Mason, emerging from an orchard, said a suspicious-looking plot detected by the photographs turned out to be spots of dead grass with chemical residue.

For more than two weeks, Whiteaker's deputies have tramped through peach and plum orchards along the Feather River, unearthing slashed bodies of transient men in one of modern history's biggest mass murders. The first body was found May 20.

All but two of the bodies were found in individual, unmarked graves on the Jack Sullivan Ranch.

Whiteaker had no comment on reports that some of the victims may have dug their own graves, thinking they were digging garbage pits.

One man on skid row had said the man charged with 10 of the deaths had been looking for a worker to dig a garbage pit.

Farm labor contractor Juan V. Corona, 37, has been charged with murdering 10 of the men and is in the Yuba County Jail. His next court appearance is set for June 16.

SACRAMENTO psychiatrist Walter Bromberg visited Corona at the jail for about two hours Saturday. Bromberg testified at the 1964 trial of Jack Ruby in the slaying of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald.

He refused to talk with reporters as he left the jail.

Ages of the victims ranged from about 40 to 63. All had been hacked in the back of the head with a machete or meat cleaver and stabbed in the chest.

Whiteaker said with the exception of one Negro, all the bodies appeared to be white men. He said it would take a later autopsy to determine if they were Anglo or Mexican-American, but he believed they were Anglo.

MANY bodies remained unidentified since most of the men were drifters and itinerant fruit pickers.

Deputies said they had received more than 1,700 letter and telephone inquiries asking information about missing relatives who could be among the dead.

Most of the men were buried with their arms outstretched and shirts pulled over their heads. Authorities have refused to speculate why.

Deputies and orchard laborers were able to spot graves by looking for depressed areas in the ground, where looser dirt had settled in the spring rains.

Holland tube

Q. We are moving to the Netherlands this summer. We own a two-year-old color television set and have been told that we won't be able to use it over there. Is this true? J.L.F., Cerritos.

A. Yes, unless you have the set converted when you get to the Netherlands. A spokesman for Norelco Service Inc., 721 W. Seventh St., Los Angeles, an American subsidiary of a Netherlands firm, told ACTION LINE that European TV sets operate on a 50 cycle power supply and American sets are designed to operate on a 60 cycle supply. "The price he would pay to have the set converted once he reached his destination, plus the shipping costs, would make it more practical to sell the set here and buy another when he gets to Holland." He said that Dutch television sets, either color or black and white, are priced about the same or perhaps a little less than American sets.

Pool precautions

Q. My husband and I have a new baby and we are panicked about the possibility of her falling into our swimming pool. What is the price involved in a really safe, walk-on pool cover? Mrs. J.B., San Pedro.

A. ACTION LINE learned of two types of pool covers that might fill the bill. The Sparton Aqualon Corp., 211 S. Seventh Ave., City of Industry, makes the heavy vinyl plastic Pool Guard cover. It is anchored with large water-filled seams around the outer edges and it is reported able to support the weight of several adults. A cover for a 16 by 32-foot pool costs $145. The Liftomatic, an automatic opening pool cover, appears to be the safest, but

N. Viet rockets again hit refugee-filled Da Nang

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese rockets again pounded refugee-swollen Da Nang Saturday in what appears to be a stepped-up campaign of fire since the U.S. Marines there began packing to go home.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported five 100-pound missiles hit the Da Nang air base and another five landed in civilian areas of South Vietnam's second largest city.

Military officials said five Vietnamese civilians were killed, seven civilians and three soldiers were wounded and three homes were destroyed in the attack on the northern base city. The U.S. Command reported no casualties or damage at the air base.

THE RARE daylight bombardment was Da Nang's second rocket attack in a week and the sixth since April 26. Last Sunday, North Vietnamese gunners killed 12 civilians and wounded 11.

The civilian population of the port city has been augmented by several thousand refugees, who began streaming in from the countryside when they heard of the impending Marine pullout.

About 4,000 Marines still remain in and around Da Nang but they have ceased all combat and support operations while packing to leave. South Vietnamese troops and militiamen have largely taken over their security role.

The shelling campaign against Da Nang has been accompanied by continuing pressure on Allied positions guarding the demilitarized zone that separates the two Vietnams. Two U.S. and two South Vietnamese bases were hit Friday.

ENEMY gunners sent 15 rounds of 122mm rockets into Charlie 2, an American base four miles south of the DMZ. It has been hit nearly a

President dedicates gigantic new inland waterways system

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — President Nixon dedicated the $1.3-billion Arkansas River Navigation Project on Saturday and envisioned a reversal of rural-to-urban migration trends through development of less populous areas of the country.

Cheered by a crowd estimated by port officials at from 25,000 to 30,000 persons, the President praised the new 440-mile inland waterway as a boon to industrial development and an outstanding example of a clean river. He said it would give birth to the "new maritime states of Oklahoma and Arkansas."

"It has been estimated that this region could absorb as much as 10 per cent of America's population growth through the year 2000," Nixon said.

"This region can become a new magnet for people seeking the good life, so that we begin to see a reversal of the decades-long migration trends from rural America to urban America."

The massive waterway system, utilizing a series of locks and dams on the Arkansas and Verdigris rivers and manmade canals, stretches from the Port of Catoosa, near here, across Arkansas to the Mississippi River.

It opens the formerly landlocked Midwest area to the ports of the world through the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico.

While hailing the "benefits of economic growth and expanded prosperity" which the new waterway should bring, the President added: "We can be grateful and proud that this river system today remains largely unpolluted.

"It still retains much of the natural beauty it had when the French

2 Panthers held in police deaths

NEW YORK (AP) — Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy said Saturday night two former defendants in the Black Panther 13 bomb-conspiracy trial have been linked to the May 19 machine gunning of two patrolmen here.

The two men, Richard Moore, 25, and Edward Josephs, 18, were arrested early Saturday with two other men in the holdup of a Bronx social club. One of the four men carried a submachine gun, police said. The others were armed with two shotguns and a rifle, according to police.

Moore and Josephs had disappeared earlier this year after jumping bail. Moore, who forfeited $100,000 bail in the midst of the trial, had been reported to have fled to Algeria. (Earlier story on Page A-5).

Hospitals key to budget row

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

A crisis in county hospitals plus runaway welfare costs shape up as the most crucial issues when supervisors open hearings Monday into the record $2.6-billion budget and 7-cent tax boost proposed for 1971-72.

The interest, or perhaps ire, that a further tax hike has evoked was reflected in the large number of persons requesting time to speak at the hearings this year.

By midafternoon Friday, Mary Lou Bangar, secretary to Executive Officer James Mize, had already arranged more than 55 speaking appointments which threaten to draw the hearings out through Thursday or Friday.

This is in stark contrast to the handful of speakers who appeared last year when the hearings ran for only two days. That budget finally produced a record $1.18 tax hike to bring the current rate to $4.08 per $100 of assessed valuation.

In the past few months all five supervisors have made sporadic vows they would take any available step to keep the taxes from rising. But a glance at the complexities facing them imbues the vows with a somewhat hollow ring.

Already locked into the budget is a $50-million pay raise package for employes passed by the board last week which could account for up to 20 cents on the tax rate if comparable cuts are not made elsewhere.

Though Supervisors Frank Bonelli and Kenneth Hahn made an attempt to reduce this payload by

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Solon says banks overcharging on loans by millions

Combined News Services

Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., of the House Banking Committee, said Saturday that banks through calendar manipulation collect interest overcharges he estimated at $150 million a year.

"The scheme is very simple. The banks are charging interest over the full 365 days but are giving the customer the use of the money for only 360 days," Patman said in a speech prepared for a meeting of the D. D. Bankers Association at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Patman said that when he learned recently that some financial institutions had been manipulating the calendar to collect additional interest charges from customers he asked the Federal Reserve System to help him in a survey of banks across the nation.

He said the survey indicates that the practice of using a 360-day year is widespread and that the overcharges have affected homeowners, consumers, and small and large businessmen in many areas.

Patman gave an example of a $7,300 one-year loan at 5 per cent interest.

"The interest would be $365, or $1 a day using the normal calendar year basis of computing interest. But the interest would be $370.11 when the 360-year basis of computing interest is used. This is $5.11 more than the calendar year basis, which is equivalent to collecting additional interest of slightly more than $1 a day for an additional five days.

Patman noted that his example was on a one-year loan and said "it is obvious that the situation becomes much worse as the maturities lengthen into 5 and 10 and 20 years."

9TH VICTIM

William "Junior" Pierce, who was paroled from Georgia State Prison over the objections of a prison psychologist who warned he was unstable and potentially dangerous, was charged Saturday in the ax slaying of James L. Sires last Aug. 10, near Beaufort, S.C. Officers said Sires was killed by a blow from an ax and $970 was taken from his service station.

Only Friday, Pierce was charged with the Aug. 21 murder of Virginia Carol Mains, 20, of Gaston County, N.C. Her nude and partially decomposed body was found about 10 days after death near Dallas, N.C. She had been shot three times and acid had been poured on her body.

Pierce also faces seven other murder charges in Georgia and South Carolina.

UPS, DOWNS

After a week of ups and downs, White House chef Henry Haller Saturday began to bake Tricia Nixon's 350-pound 6-foot wedding cake.

Only the bride-to-be was on hand from the First Family to oversee the project. Other members were spending the weekend at Camp David, the presidential retreat in nearby Maryland.

Mrs. Nixon and her other daughter, Julie Eisenhower, flew to the mountaintop hideaway Friday night after a reception with the Diplomatic Corps honoring Tricia and her fiance, Edward Finch Cox. They will be married in the Rose Garden Saturday.

Tricia has confidence in Haller's skill, although his reputation was at stake earlier last week when food editors around the nation questioned his recipe for old-fashioned pound cake, using only egg whites instead of whole eggs.

GOP SITE

Republican National Chairman Robert Dole said Saturday President Nixon "will have some voice" in where the 1972 GOP National Convention will be held, but has expressed no preference so far.

Dole, a Kansas senator, said reports that the President favors San Diego were being circulated for political reasons by White House Counselor Robert Finch and California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke.

"Finch and Reinecke have political ambitions and they've been playing up the San Diego bit," he said at a Seattle news conference. "It doesn't hurt to boost your own state as a convention site."

NEW CLIMB

Dean Caldwell, one of the two mountaineers who conquered the "Wall of Early Morning Light" on the granite monolith El Capitan in Yosemite last year, left San Francisco Saturday on a new expedition to scale an "unclimbable" 4,000-foot ice wall in the Peruvian Andes.

Caldwell, 27, a Milwaukie, Ore., photographer, and his climbing companion, Joe Smith, 24, a Duluth, Minn., climber and skier, hope to top the west face of 20,100-foot Mt. Jirishanca on the Fourth if July.

Caldwell and Warren Harling, 48, West Sacramento, ascended the unclimbed southeastern wall of El Capitan last November in a 30-day epic of American mountaineering.

NOT WANTED

Swiss police sources said Saturday LSD prophet Timothy Leary and his wife were ordered to leave Switzerland on May 14 as "undesirable foreigners" after a two-week stay.

A friend of the couple in Algiers had said earlier they apparently had been kidnaped.

Their whereabouts remains unknown.

According to the friend in Algiers the Learys were seized in Zurich on May 4 after disembarking from a Swissair jetliner while enroute to a lecture engagement in Denmark. Earlier story on Page A-17.

Hot summer weather hits most of East

United Press International

Hot summerlike weather Saturday gripped most of the eastern half of the nation.

Temperatures climbed to near or above the 90 degree mark from the Gulf States to the Great Lakes.

Chicago recorded a new high of 97 for this date, surpassing the previous record of 96 set in 1925.

Most of the rest of the nation was dry and warm except the North Atlantic states.

The National Weather Service issued a tornado watch in portions of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

The weather service said the hot and humid weather presents a dangerous situation for livestock. Livestock handlers were urged to take precautions to prevent animals from suffering heat shock and possible death.

Afternoon temperatures around the nation ranged from 50 in Cut Bank, Mont., to 95 in Macon, Ga.

Belfast police site bombed; 4 injured

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A powerful bomb ripped the front of a Belfast police station Saturday night, injuring two children and two other persons across the street. A family of four also was injured in a bomb blast at a power sub-station.

An estimated 10 pounds of gelignite (gelatinous dynamite) exploded on the window ledge of the police station in a Roman Catholic residential neighborhood, shattering windows and tearing off a door, police said.

No policemen were hurt, but a man in a house across the street was hospitalized with head injuries after the concussion of the blast sent his ceiling crashing. Two children were knocked from their beds and were cut by flying glass. A pregnant woman was taken to the hospital in shock.

Half a dozen nearby homes were damaged by the bomb attack, the third on the police station this year. Army troops rushed into the area, sealed it off and began hunting the bombers.

Eleven days ago, a bomb attack on a Belfast army and police barracks killed a British army sergeant who tried to protect children with his body and injured 27 soldiers, policemen and civilians — three of them children.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army, which forcibly seeks to unite predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland with the mainly Catholic Irish Republic, claimed responsibility for the attack.

Refugees bring cholera to Calcutta; 3,220 dead

CALCUTTA, India (UPI) — A cholera epidemic reached Calcutta on Saturday, along with thousands of new East Pakistani refugees who had fled to the city in an attempt to escape the disease.

West Bengal health officials said there were 3,200 confirmed deaths from the week-old epidemic, which first broke out in many refugee camps near the India-East Pakistan border.

Unofficial, but reliable, sources put the toll at more than 5,000, based on deaths outside registered hospitals and first aid centers

HOPES THAT the disease — and the refugees — could be confined to the border areas evaporated with the arrival in Calcutta in the past three days of about 100,000 Eat Pakistanis — out of an estimated 4½ million on the Indian side of the border.

Confirmation that the disease had actually broken out in Calcutta, where a mass inoculation campaign was under way, came when 20 refugees died of cholera at a temporary camp that has sprung up on the edge of Calcutta International Airport, only 200 yards from the main runway.

The officer in charge of the camp, Manoranjan Roychoudhury, said 80 other cholera victims had been sent to a hospital.

HE SAID in an interview that he had banned the entry of any more refugees into the makeshift camp, which he said has 40,000 residents, to prevent possible new cholera carriers from spreading germs.

Outside Roychoudhury's office, 100 refugees waited, with their belongings on their heads, begging to be allowed to stay.

The airport camp is named "Sahara," after a nearby village. The word means "help" in Hindi.

After two straight days of rain, "Sahara" resembled a mud swamp.

THROUGHOUT the storm, men and women in ankle-deep mud built shacks made of grass, palm leaves and tree branches.

Luckier refugees used tarpaulins and bamboo canes brought by local relief agencies and the state government.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi landed on the opposite side of the airport Saturday morning, out of view of the camp, and held discussions on the refugee problems with local officials. Her return to New Delhi was delayed overnight by the continuing rains.

She told newsmen that the influx of refugees into India had created a "very grave situation with serious consequences for the nation."

"BUT WE should not be alarmed at a time like this," she said. "We should remain cool so that we can take the right decision every hour."

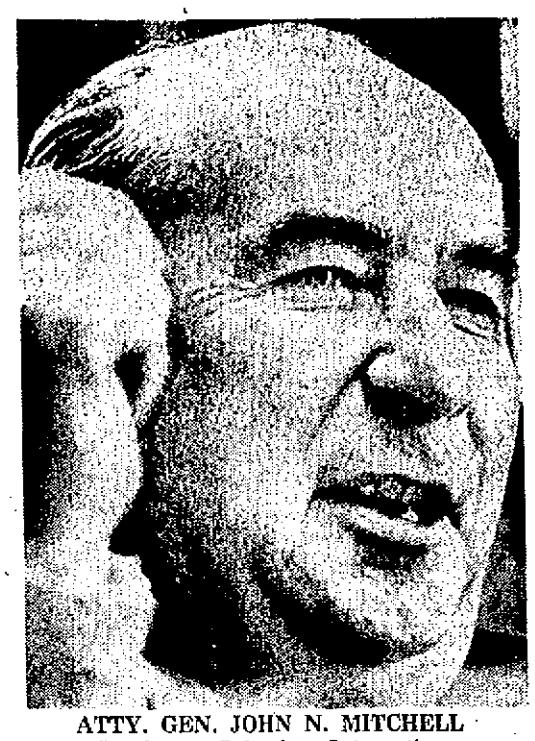

As she has said previously, Mrs. Gandhi maintained that the refugees would be cared for "on a temporary basis," until they could return to East Pakistan when political conditions permit.

The refugees fled to India after the outbreak of civil strife in their native province March 25 between the Pakistani army of President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan and partisans loyal to independence leader Sheik Mujibur Rahman.

The deputy chief minister of West Bengal State, Bijoy Singh Nahar, told newsmen that Mrs. Gandhi had agreed to have many of the refugees now in the state dispersed to other parts of the country, in some cases converting abandoned airstrips into new relief camps.

BRITAIN started airlifting emergency supplies of vaccine to India to combat the cholera epidemic. The Soviet Union, United States, the Vatican and Belgium have also sent aid, and Norway has been asked by the Red Cross to support the relief effort.

Oxfam, the British relief organization, was sending 858,000 doses of anticholera vaccine and 45,000 doses of another drug called Tabc.

Zoo polar bear shot as it bites tormenter

NEW YORK (UPI) — A polar bear was shot to death by a policeman Saturday when it bit the arm of a man who had reached into the animal's enclosure at the Central Park Zoo.

"The cop should have got the guy instead. He was the one who provoked the attack," an angry zookeeper said. Several keepers said the victim, identified as Oliver Jones, 29, had been warned before not to annoy the animals.

Jones climbed the high fence of the bear's enclosure at 12:45 p.m. and pushed his arm between the bars, witnesses said.

Patrolman Charles Dlugokeckio, assigned to the Central Park detail, heard Jones' screams and ran to his aid. Police said he killed the animal with a shot in the left shoulder only after attempting unsuccessfully to drive him off with a passerby's cane.

Nixon won't widen role in suburb integration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell says forced economic integration of America's suburban areas "would be flying in the face of the Supreme Court."

Indicating the Nixon administration's forthcoming policy statement will not broaden substantially the government's role in housing, Mitchell scorned emphasis on suburban integration as "a oversimplistic approach."

The statement will be made public by the White House this week. It has been under consideration by the Justice Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development since late last year.

In an exclusive interview, Mitchell said civil rights groups want to "beat up on this administration because of the fact that they're aligned with the other political party."

Despite the criticism, he said, "our record stands well ahead of anybody else who's been here before."

Mitchell said also that should FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover retire — a situation he does not foresee in the immediate future — he would want as a replacement "another J. Edgar Hoover."

In his reference to forced integration flying in the face of the high court, Mitchell did not cite the case by name but referred to the court's April 26 decision affirming the right of California residents to veto low-income housing projects in referendum elections.

President Nixon last February told a news conference "this administration will not go beyond the law . . . by using federal power, federal coercion or federal money to force economic integration of neighborhoods."

The Civil Rights Commission, in a report last month, accused HUD of regressing in open-housing enforcement, and noted that HUD officials cited Nixon's February statement as an explanation.

Still subject to speculation is whether or not the administration will attack suburban housing segregation that results from action of local officials. The justces recently refused to revew a lower-court decision that prevents officials in Lackawanna, N.Y., from blocking construction, of a Negro-sponsored housing dvision in a predominately white neighborhood.

A similar case involving Blackjack, Mo., a St. Louis suburb, has been forwarded by HUD to Justice, but so far no action has been taken.

FUTURE AID FOR HANOI

4 fly to Laos in free-POWs bid

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Four Americans quietly left Los Angeles Saturday on a flight to Southeast Asia on a mission that for others usually has ended in failure — a private effort to help U.S. prisoners of war.

The four carry proposals to help rebuild North Vietnam and treat its sick and injured when the Vietnam war ends, said a spokesman, Larry Crosby, who with his famous singing brother, Bing, sponsored a similar trip in February.

Their offer is contingent on Hanoi's release of all American POWs or, at the least, their interment in a neutral country until an end to the Vietnam war is negotiated, Crosby said.

THE FOUR men are members of a new group called PEACE—Prisoner in Excahnge for American Construction Enterprise—and hope to meet with North Vietnamese officials in Vientiane, Laos, sometime after their arrival there June 8.

Two of the men were doctors who requested anonymity, Crosby said, and the two others are construction experts from Los Angeles, George E. Fischer and R. M. Tomb. All are paying their own way.

Fischer is president of the Overseas Craftsman's Association, which Crosby said has several thousand members, and Tomb is an OCA official!

Fischer has said funds for labor and material to rebuild nonmilitary facilities in North Vietnam would be sought from American civilians if Hanoi agrees to his proposals.

THE GROUP'S trip to Vientiane follows one made nearly two months ago by six Californian men who offered to exchange themselves on a man-for-man basis for sick and wounded American POWs.

Their offer was rejected by North Vietnamese officials who said any prisoner release hinged on a firm date set by President Nixon for the withdrawal of all U.S. troops from South Vietnam.

In February, an emissary for Crosby and a group of wealthy American businessmen went to Vientiane and proposed a guaranteed postwar nation-rebuilding fund for North Vietnam in exchange for the freedom or internment in a neutral country of U.S. POWs.

Crosby said Saturday he has received no reply to date from the North Vietnamese, despite a number of followup cables he sent the North Vietnamese embassy in Vientiane.

THE LAST MAJOR private effort to ease the plight of the POWs was made in late 1969 by Texas millionaire H. Ross Perot, who chartered a Boeing 707 jet in an unsuccessful ful effort to bring them food, clothing and medicine from their families.

Man, dog fall in tar pit, saved

A hunting dog and its owner sank neck deep in a pit of tar off the Pacific Coast Highway late Saturday and almost lost their lives before friends and firemen rescued them.

Charles Gonderman, 29, of 4388 Trimble Court, was taken to Long Beach Community Hospital where late in the night attendants were still working to remove the tar from his body with special chemicals.

His dog, a gray and black pointer, named "Blue," was undergoing the same treatment at a veterinarian's.

Gonderman, a messenger for North American Rockwell, was walking in a field about 7:15 p.m. with Blue, a cousin, Doy Bloyd, 23, and a friend, David Ford, 20.

THE FIELD said Fire Captain Roland Lingo, is off the 6200 block of East Pacific Coast Highway. On it, he said, is a "settling pit," a black mass of waste and crude oil which, he said, has become a tar possessing the consistency of quicksand.

Blue sank into the mass, Lingo said, and Gonderman—clinging to a belt held by his cousin—was leaning out to rescue the dog when the belt broke and sent him plunging into the tar.

Bloyd and Ford, using poles and sticks, managed to pull Gonderman out. But it was not until firemen—summoned by a passerby—arrived that Blue was rescued.

Firemen Pete Brown and Robert Minnott walked out on a ladder suspended above the pit, hooked a pole into Blue's collar and lifted him out. At the time, Capt. Lingo said, little more than the dog's nose was above the surface.

Maryland GOP backs President

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Maryland Republican Central Committee endorsed a Nixon-Agnew ticket Saturday, eleven months ahead of the state's first presidential primary.

3-CAR CRASH KILLS FAMILY

SOUTH BAY, Fla. (UPI) — Six persons, including five members of the same family, were killed Saturday in a three-vehicle accident on U.S. Highway 27 about seven miles south of here.

State troopers said Samuel Evans Jr., 26, of Fort Lauderdale, his wife and three children and Grady Henderson, 56, of Miramar were killed.

After the head-on collision a third vehicle driven by John C. White, 47, of Lake Alfred slammed into the two cars from behind. White escaped injury.

Troopers said two unidentified passengers in the Henderson car were critically injured.

South Bay is a small community on the southern tip of Lake Okeechobee.

Definitive book on Normandy landing issued

The following was written for The Associated Press by Henry B. Jameson formerly an AP war correspondent who covered the Normandy landing and now editor and publisher of the daily Reflector-Chronicle in Abilene, Kan.

By HENRY B. JAMESON

ABILENE, Kan. (AP) — Twenty-seven years ago, along the rugged coast of Normandy, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower set in motion the biggest combined military operation of all time.

We have come to know it as D-Day and historians have spent a quarter century reviewing it.

Scores of books and articles have been written about it. Now comes what has been described as the most authoritative and best single volume on the subject, released June 4, two days before the 27th anniversary of D-Day. The book is titled, "D-Day: The Normandy Invasion in Retrospect."

What makes it especially significant is that under one cover 11 leading military historians, authorities and key participants in the D-Day assault — from Gen. Omar Bradley to a former German admiral — combine to tell a comprehensive story of the invasion from the perspective of 25 years.

THE BOOK was published by the University Press of Kansas for the Eisenhower Foundation in Abilene, home town and burial place of former President Eisenhower.

On D-Day things went slower than expected, the authorities recall.

I went ashore on Omaha Beach at H-Hour plus two and found the troops still struggling to secure a toehold on the beach, despite assurances everything would be well cleared up.

Don Whitehead, another AP correspondent who went ashore with the Army's 1st Division, writes in the book:

"As I saw it, the battle of the beach was won seven hours after the first wave hit" when a key blockhouse covering Omaha Beach was knocked out.

IN DIFFERENT ways all 11 historians focus on the same theme: that the real keys to success of D-Day were surprise and fantastic advance planning by Eisenhower and his staffs. There was overwhelming manpower and tools, but it was how they were coordinated and used that turned possible disaster into victory.

Dr. Forrest C. Pogue, who was a combat historian with the U.S. 1st Army from Omaha Beach to Czechoslovakia, wrote that besides all the expected military supplies of guns and tanks and fuel to run them, the planners even figured how many Purple Hearts and Bronze Stars would be needed in the field.

Dr. Pogue, now director of the George Marshall Research Library in Lexington, Va., further noted:

"We were told where the Germans had their chief installations and administrative offices, which local officials to contact, the location of pigeon lofts, and names of prostitutes who might be able to supply information about the Germans."

GEN. BRADLEY wrote the foreword and is critical of a segment of today's youth who find nothing of consequence in history and clamor for destruction of the institutions they challenge as imperfect. "They would destroy the very institutions which provide them their freedom to challenge."

The various writers agreed a major factor was the air bombardment in advance of the invasion, during which the Nazi war machine was stunned. The Allied Air Forces so dominated the air by D-Day that it was almost nightfall before the first Luftwaffe plane reached the invasion area.

The deception carried out by the air arms was vital in misleading the Germans on the place of invasion, writes Dr. Alfred Goldberg, an Air Force historian now with the Rand Corp. "The Germans continued to believe for days and even weeks after the actual landings in Normandy that the main blow would still fall elsewhere," he said.

It is almost unbelievable that an operation involving more than 4,000 ships and thousands of aircraft could be kept hidden. However, these authorities say the first positive knowledge of the invasion armada came when German soldiers saw the ships looming out of the darkness the morning of June 6, 1944. The bombers had knocked out all the German radar along the coast.

THE U.S. and British air forces plastered the Pas de Calais area — narrowest point across the Channel — for weeks and convinced the Germans this was to be the invasion point. This tended to hold in check several Nazi divisions which Goldberg says "might have turned the tide" in Normandy.

In one chapter Friedrich Ruge, retired vice admiral of the German Navy who was an adviser to Gen. Erwin Rommel, says that on the morning of June 7 he realized the Allies had established a permanent beachhead and that the war was lost. Hitler flew into rage at such suggestions.

DR. ROLAND G. Ruppenthal, deputy Army historian who was attached for some time to Gen. George Patton's 3rd Army, comments on the rapid advance after Normandy.

Despite a month's lag fighting through the hedgerows of Normandy, he discloses that when the breakout was accomplished the Allies actually liberated Paris 55 days ahead of schedule. By D plus 100 days German territory was being gobbled up eight months ahead of schedule.

Holdup 'bared;' four held

NEW YORK (AP) — Two patrolmen interrupted a holdup of a social club in the Bronx early Saturday, arriving as four armed men were forcing about 15 persons to get undressed.

When the officers made their presence known from the outside, the police account said, the gunmen put their weapons down and quickly stripped down their own clothing, then mingled with their victims in an attempt to avoid capture.

The patrolmen ordered everyone to come out one at a time and were able to isolate the holdup team, police said.

The four were taken to a stationhouse, but further details of the investigation and detention were not given immediately.

Recovered from the floor were a .45-caliber submachine gun, two sawed-off shotguns, two handguns and a hand grenade, police said.

The patrolmen were alerted to the holdup by a passerby shortly before 5 a.m.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

A MILLS STORE

Not only are weddings in June traditional, but the jeweler plays an important role in every wedding. There must be plain gold wedding rings for the ceremony and gifts for the bridal attendants, as well as the bride and groom.

Last week we explained why Cultured Pearls are an ideal gift from the groom to the bride.

What should the bride give the groom?

We suggest a WRIST WATCH. A watch is personal, an adornment which will last many, many years, a gift that will be treasured and remembered forever. You may choose from a wide variety of styles and obtain a good quality watch for $50.00 to $75.00.

Other appropriate gifts would be solid gold cufflinks, a genuine stone ring such as a black star sapphire, or a diamond tie-tac. All these gifts can be obtained for $50.00 to $100.00.

As for the other members of the bridal party - bridesmaids and ushers—again, jewelry costing $5.00 to $10.00 would be ideal as the item is personal and will be long remembered.

For the bridesmaids, we suggest precious stone pendants such as cultured pearls, black star sapphires, opals, jade and the like. Try to get them all within the same price range.

For the ushers we suggest cufflinks, wallets, or genuine stone tie-tacs such as black star sapphires. Again, try and stay in the same price range.

The maid-of-honor and best man should receive a better gift — a solid gold pendant for $20.00, and cufflinks for $20.00. Thus, everyone at your wedding will be as happy as the bride and groom.

If we can be of assistance in any way, please inquire at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only.

Mars race like that of Columbus' era, scientist says

PASADENA (UPI) — "I think we're in a race like Columbus."

Space scientist Tom Hayes, mission chief for the Mariner 9 space probe, said Saturday he considered the race to Mars by America and Russia not as a track and field event, but part of the historical chain of quests for new worlds.

Hayes, of Cal Tech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, said of the international competition, "we're like England and Spain in the 15th century — racing for new vistas and knowledge."

DEEP inside the glassed-in lab in the Pasadena foothills, Hayes' staff and a worldwide network of tracking stations Friday made a critical but reportedly successful midcourse correction to steer the Mars probe closer toward the Red Planet for a three-month orbit in November.

The green-and-white, windmill-shaped Mariner, launched from Cape Kennedy last Sunday, is playing space tag, more than a half-million miles from earth, with one of two Soviet probes.

Mariner is supposed to map and photograph the mysterious planet from an altitude of 750 miles starting Nov. 13, a feat comparable to hedge-hopping in an ordinary aircraft. One of the purposes will be to find clues to possible life on Mars.

U.S. air chief calls SST vital; Soviet, Anglo-French models fly at Paris show

PARIS (UPI) — The rival supersonic airliners — the Soviet TU144 and the Anglo-French Concorde — emerged with honors about even after subsonic demonstration flights at the Paris Air show Saturday.

It was the first time that international aviation experts had a chance to compare the two delta winged planes that are designed to carry about 120 passengers each at twice the speed of sound.

With some 50,000 invited guests headed by French Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas looking on, both planes made 12-minute flights over Le Bourget airfield.

The big surprise was the TU144's takeoff in less than 1,000 yards, followed by a steep climb.

Experts also rated it less noisy and said it emitted less exhaust smoke than Concorde. But in the air, the TU144 appeared less maneuverable than Concorde.

The Anglo-French aircraft made tight turns while the Soviet plane made wide swings out over the French countryside in coming around for its three passes over the airfield.

In landing, TU144 pilot Edouard Elian opened the aircraft's tail parachute to slow it down but Concorde pilot Jean Franchi did not.

The Soviets took advantage of the TU144 demonstration flight to announce some other details of the aircraft which had been wrapped in secrecy since it was built.

Officials revealed the present test model does not have airbrakes nor do its turbofan engines have reverse thrust capability.

They also said the TU144 flew for the first time Dec. 31, 1968, with Elian at the controls and achieved Mach 2 — twice the speed of sound — 155 months later on May 26, 1970.

Aviation experts said the TU144's short takeoff run appeared to indicate that its engines are more powerful than those of Concorde.

THE STAR ATTRACTIONS Saturday at the Paris Airshow were the Galaxy, America's giant cargo plane, and the two supersonic airliners, the Russian Tupolev 144 and the Franco-British Concorde.

FUNNIES

SURPRISE

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — A postman was somewhat surprised to find a six-pack of beer inside a postal collection box.

But he took the beer to the post office, along with the packages and letters from the box.

Postmaster Tom McLeon said, "If anybody wants to claim it, there is 70 cents postage due."

POLLUTED

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Great Raft Race, held over a weekend to dramatize pollution of the Chattahoochee River, left the river cluttered with debris, race officials say.

Larry Patrick, 22, a senior at Georgia Tech who served as race coordinator, said about 20 tons of "junk" had been pulled out of the river by late Monday — including tennis shoes, undershirts, pants, wallets, keys, one bra, several thousand empty beer cans and at least eight cases of full beer cans.

About 3,000 persons participated in the race while another 10,000 lined the river's banks.

BITTERLY

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — A sour note was sounded at the National Vinegar Co. plant.

Madison County sheriff's officers said the plant was forced to shut down after vandals damaged vinegar bottling machines, gauges and other equipment.

Plant manager Charles Henson said repairs will cost about $2,000. He made no estimate of when the plant will reopen.

CROPPERS

BEIRUT (UPI) — Lebanese barbers have decided they will shave bald any hippie customer who goes to them for a trim.

A spokesman for the Barbers' Association said the longhair cult had badly hit trade and a number of salons had been forced to close.

The "all-off" technique will be "a contribution to checking the hippie culture and to safeguarding Lebanese moral traditions," the spokesman said.

PEEPERS

STAFFORD, England (UPI) — Housewives living near the Stafford jail have complained that inmates on the jail's top floor stare into their bedrooms, wolf-whistle and shout rude remarks.

Some houses are only eight yards from the prison walls.

"We have moved out of the front bedroom because we were continually spied upon" said Mrs. Dora Baker.

APPROVAL

COOLVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Albert Brewer, 85, first saw Emma Cook, 81, when he moved into the Arcadia nursing home last summer.

"I looked over and saw her sitting by the pillar," Brewer recalls. It was love at first sight and his courtship began immediately.

Brewer offered her a cabin in the hills with a garden if she would marry him. She finally agreed. They were married at the nursing home with about 100 friends as guests.

The new Mrs. Brewer, twice widowed, said the wedding had the blessings of her 98-year-old mother, but either way it wouldn't have mattered.

"I never asked her before and I didn't this time," she said.

NEED CRIER

PROVINCETOWN, Mass. (AP) — This town at the tip of Cape Cod is in the market for a new town crier.

The town crier dresses up in Pilgrim costume with a tall hat, strolls around near the town square and pier, now and then rings a hand bell and shouts the news.

Town Manager Mike Botelho said the job is open to men of all ages. The crier will work 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. seven days a week from June 15 to Aug. 30 and be paid $900 for the season.

Fred Baldwin, a retired school superintendent who has held the job since 1963, decided to retire because at 86 he's "having trouble with his legs and it would be just too much for him to be on his feet all day," Baldwin's son Craig explained.

BAD TRIP

DICKINSON, N.D. (AP) — Don't ask Trinity High School band instructor Dennis Doppler about his last attempted trip from here to Moose Jaw, Canada. He's still fuming.

Doppler, five chaperones and 62 students set out for the Canadian community in the Saskatchewan province to take part in a band festival.

One of the buses blew an engine before the students were picked up. A replacement was found and the contingent made it to the first overnight stop in Canada when Doppler found there had been a scheduling mistake.

The band festival wasn't last weekend. It was scheduled this weekend.

En route back to this western North Dakota community by way of Williston, another bus blew a tire.

DURABLE

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Steven Ballos, 72, was working in his store when two youths entered, announced a holdup and fired a shot at his thigh. The bullet bounced off, fell to the floor and the astonished gunmen fled.

"It didn't even feel as hard as a bee sting," Ballos said.

Patrolman Paul Rea said the slug was not even dented. He said the ammunition probably was old and the powder did not fire effectively.

SENTENCE

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A seven-woman, five-man jury returned a guilty verdict in a municipal Court case and spent the next hour imprisoned in a courthouse elevator.

The jury had been released by the judge shortly after the end of the trial and walked to the elevator to go home. It became stuck between the first and second floors.

The perspiring 12 were rescued by firemen who dropped a ladder through a hatch in the elevator's ceiling.

"I've heard of hung juries before, but this is ridiculous," said one of the women.

SUITABLE

KAMPALA (UPI) — Karamojong nomads in northeastern Uganda have been told by President Idi Amin that their custom of going about naked is "no longer befitting modern times."

"Your habits of dressing ... are neither in your interest nor in the interest of this republic," he said.

SURE CURE

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Eight years ago Genevieve Stafford of Martinsville suffered a whiplash injury in a traffic crash, leaving her with constant headaches and blurred vision. She spent thousands of dollars on treatments, but it didn't do much good.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Stafford was involved in another traffic mishap. She hasn't had a headache since, and her vision cleared up.

Litton awards GE subcontract to build sonars for destroyers

A multiyear subcontract worth $100 million to produce sonars for the Navy's Spruance class destroyers has been awarded to General Electric Co. by Litton Industries in Beverly Hills.

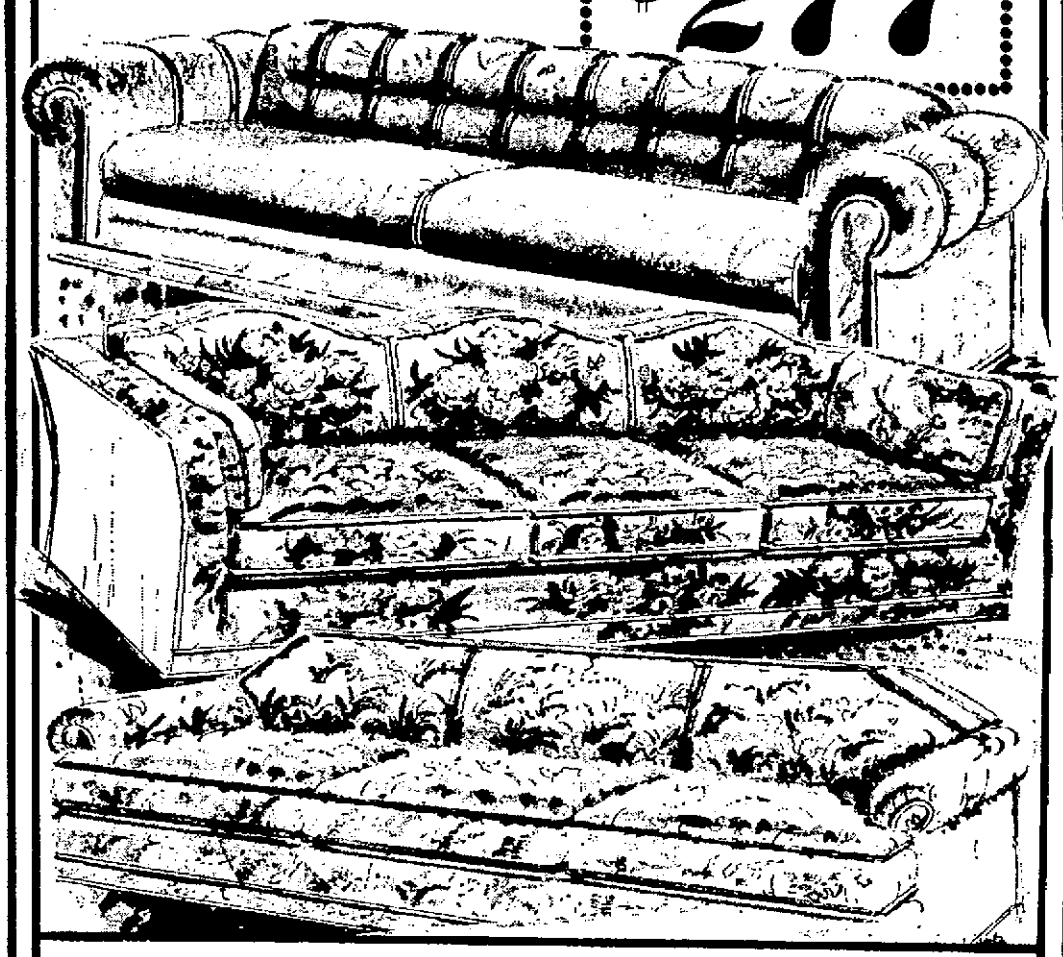

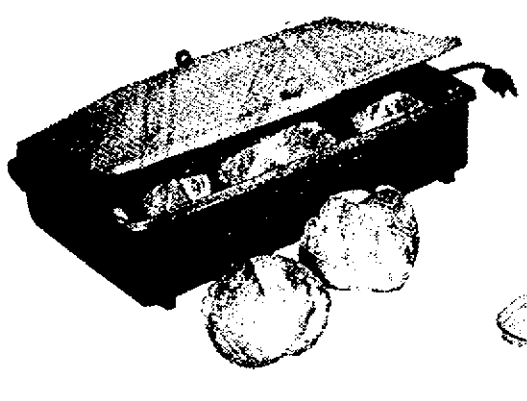

The sonar, dubbed AN/SQS-26, is the most advanced surface ship sonar in the world, will be built in Syracuse, N.Y.

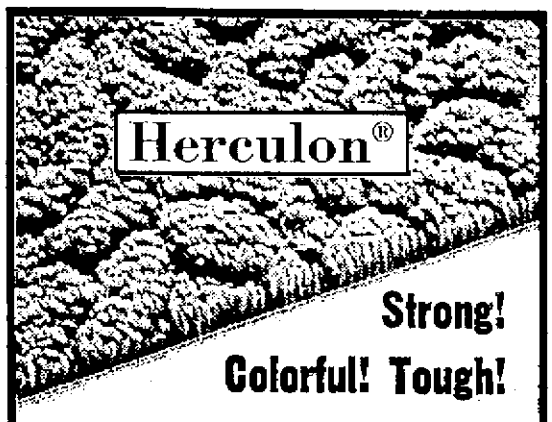

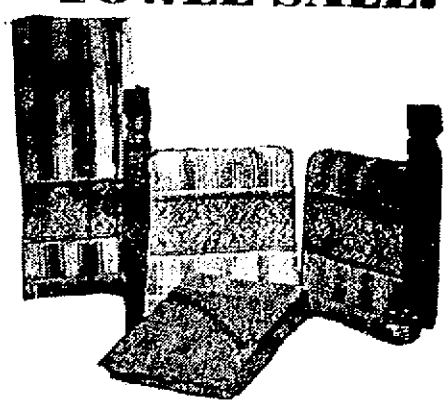

The initial award is $30 million and covers sonars on the first nine ships funded to date.

Last December Litton awarded General Electric a potential $130-million multiyear subcontract to produce marine gas turbine engines for these destroyers.

The GE AN/SQS-26 sonar is part of the Spruance class' overall antisubmarine system. It consists of the sensor for target detection, identification and localization; fire control for target-tracking weapon control and guidance; and weapons, such as antisubmarine rockets (ASROC), conventional torpedoes and depth charges.

Nader's Raiders: politics' role harms antitrust enforcement

By MARK BROWN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nader's Raiders, scrutinizing the government's policing of big business, contended Saturday that politics "plays a significant and damaging role in shaping antitrust enforcement."

Their report, entitled "The Closed Enterprise System," alleged political interference by Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst that "so aroused the present antitrust assistant Attorney General, Richard W. McLaren, that he twice threatened to resign."

ATTY. GEN. John N. Mitchell, boss of both men, said the allegation was a misstatement of the facts and added: "I think Mr. Nader has hallucinations."

Kleindienst "would not have the slightest reason in the world to have political motivations," Mitchell said in an interview. That McLaren had twice threatened to resign, he said, "is an absolute falsehood."

The 1,148-page report, nearly a year in the making by a team from consumer advocate Ralph Nader's Center for study of Responsive Law, found little good to report about the antitrust enforcement by present or past administrations. And big business, Nader contended, is hardly free from sin.

"This is a report on crime in the suites," wrote Nader in his introduction to the report of CSRL project director Mark J. Green.

"The outright disregard of market principles and antitrust laws have become institutionalized and too costly to be considered any longer mere deviations from the norm."

THE REPORT recommends creation by Congress of a new agency with annual funding of at least $100 million to take over antitrust affairs from the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission.

Wrote Green: "Consumer are far more cheated of their purchasing power by noncompetitive industries, which charge excessive prices, than by shoddy merchandise and the street pickpocket.

"The concentration of industrial assets, the distribution of wealth, the extent of our wealth, productivity, innovation, pollution, employment, racism, political lobbying and contributions — all are issues of national pitch and moment, and all are touched by antitrust policy," he said.

Approximately two-thirds of all industrial assets in the country are owned by 200 corporations, and the cost of monopoly and aligopoly is estimated between $48 billion and $60 billion annually the report stated.

An entire volume of the report is devoted to past and present antitrust policies of the Justice Department, while the second covers the FTC, other government regulatory agencies and private industry.

The report concludes that Herbert Brownell, attorney general in the Eisenhower administration; Nicholas Katzenbach, one of the Johnson administration's three attorneys general; and Kleindienst were "the worst offenders" with respect to politics.

THE REPORT quotes Katzenbach as telling a CSRL interviewer: "Why not get a political benefit from what you are going to do anyway?"

Of the Nixon administration's antitrust chief, McLaren, the report applauds his action against conglomerates and reciprocal purchasing arrangements in the metal industry, but faults him for not trying to break oligopolistic markets as the automobile industry.

Peaceful graduation rites seen

Graduation ceremonies for the class of 1971 begin moving into high gear today and over the next two weeks at Southern California's 40 colleges and universities.

More than 48,000 students at schools from Santa Barbara to San Diego will be lining up for both graduate and undergraduate degrees, a survey of colleges shows.

School officials anticipate that most graduate ceremonies will be peaceful, compared to the 1970 commencements across the nation that were marked by protests and demonstrations against the Vietnam war.

In-flight crashes kill four air race pilots

are safe as long as the planes keep an eye on one another.

Lacy, a United Air Lines pilot said the main danger is "slipstream," the current of air left in the wake of planes. It is much like the wake of turbulent water that motorboats leave behind.

Many of the planes in the race are owned by the pilots, who purchase surplus military aircraft and refurbish them. Racers say World War II surplus propeller driven planes are the easiest and least expensive to obtain.

In another incident at North Kingstown, R.I., J. W. "Bill" Fornof, 46, of Houma, La., was killed Saturday when his propeller driven plane crashed during an air show at the Quonset-Davisville Navy Relief Carnival at Quonset Point Naval Air Station.

Fornof was flying a dual show with his son, J. W. "Corkey" Fornof, 25, when the accident occurred. Fornof was considered one of the best aerobatic performers in the U.S.

it is also very costly. At an average price of $3,000 the aluminum and fiberglass cover will support the weight of adults. Its two halves lift hydraulically to make twin patio roofs when the pool is in use. You can see a model of it at Liftomatic, Inc., 6145 Sepulveda Blvd. in Van Nuys, or call 873-7772 for a booklet on it. Spokesmen for pool supply stores told ACTION LINE that the many lighter-weight plastic and mesh pool covers are made for keeping debris out of the pools and are not meant to support weight. With these lighter covers, there is also the danger of tearing when they begin to wear out. A spokesman for the Long Beach Safety Council said they recommend a tall fence with a gate that can be locked as the cheapest and safest precaution against accidental drowning in home swimming pools.

Tuition trouble

Q. I am 19 and an out-of-state student at Long Beach City College. Recently the non-resident fee was raised to more than $30 per unit, which I can't afford since I support myself. I have an uncle who would be willing to become my legal guardian so I can continue school as a resident. Will I need a lawyer to draw up guardianship papers? C.M., Long Beach.

A. Like other legal matters, your uncle could handle guardianship proceedings himself, but it is complicated. Some information on the steps leading to a court hearing may be obtained from Superior Court clerks but they cannot advise you on preparation of the necessary documents. Help in this line may be found in the book "Adoptions Procedure Manual," available by mail order for $2.10 from the Los Angeles Daily Journal, 210 S. Spring St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012. It should cost a minimum of about $200 to have an attorney handle the matter for you. Lawyer's rates vary and advance price shopping might save you money.

Mail call

Q. What was the rate for first-class U.S. postage in 1917 and 1918? We remember the rates went up about then and then back down again. G.L.R., Long Beach.

A. The first-class postal rate was raised from two cents per ounce to three cents per ounce in 1918 and then dropped back to two cents in 1920. From 1863 when first-class rates were established until 1933, postage was two cents, except for the one two-year period. In 1933 the rate went back up to three cents and in 1959 first-class moved to four pennies. 1963 saw postal rates go to five cents and then to six cents in 1968 and eight cents this May. The first postal system in this country was legalized in 1639 by the Colonial Legislature of Massachusetts. All mail brought from overseas was deposited at the home of Richard Fairbanks of Boston, whose job it was to have the letters taken to their destinations. Fairbanks was paid one cent for each letter he transmitted. On July 26, 1775, Benjamin Franklin was appointed head of the American postal system by the Continental Congress at a salary of $1,000 per year. The first stamps were issued in the United States for prepayment of postage on July 1, 1847. Until the uniform two cent first-class rate was established in 1863, letter rates varied with the number of sheets in a letter and how far the letter was to travel.

World in water

Q. Can ACTION LINE tell me how I can contact the man who designed the globe decoration in front of the Leisure World development in Seal Beach? E.B., Long Beach.

A. The globe and fountain was a group project by the Q.R.S. Corp.'s design staff. You can write to the company, which designs and builds large commercial signs, at 1716 W. Washington Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90007. The structure, which became the symbol for the retirement community, originally was leased from the Q.R.S. Corp. until a few years ago when Leisure World finally purchased it.

dozen times in the past two weeks. Another 25 missiles pounded positions of U.S. troops five miles northeast of the base.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 100 mortars rained into Camp Sarge, a forward base in a new South Vietnamese operation northeast of Khe Sanh, in the northwest corner of the country and 18 rockets hit nearby Camp Carroll.

Far to the south, only 13 miles north of Saigon, five 107mm rockets hit a U.S. helicopter base at Phu Loi. Field reports said some helicopters were hit.

A U.S. spokesman, Maj. Richard Gardner, said 11 Americans were wounded in the three rocket attacks against American positions. South Vietnamese spokesmen reported light casualties and no fatalities in the other shellings.

LITTLE ground fighting was reported across the country.

U.S. B52 bombers continued their almost daily bombardment of the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos and also flew two raids in the central highlands and the northern region near the A Shau Valley.

Brea brushfire fought, beaten

About 150 firemen fought a brushfire to a standstill Saturday night in Tonner Canyon northeast of Brea which involved more than 100 acres, authorities reported.

Some 35 units from the Los Angeles and Orange County fire departments have battled the blaze almost to the point of containment.

The fire, located on the county line, is burning south from Tonner Canyon toward the Carbon Canyon area.

Fire officials said the nearest inhabited area is one mile from the blaze but, because of subsiding winds, is not in danger.

Authorities reported the fire started at the Firestone Boy Scouts Reservation late this afternoon, and has burned mainly in tinder-dry brush.

IN OKLAHOMA, ARKANSAS

and Spanish explorers first visited this land centures ago. We have a great opportunity to hold the line on a clean, healthy river.

"If we act now, we can make the Arkansas not only a continuing asset to this region, but also an example of pollution prevention for the entire United States.

THE ONLY demonstration came when two youths walked through the crowd holding poster-sized pictures of the bodies found after the My Lai massacre in Vietnam. Most of the crowd ignored the youths.

About 100 persons, most of them young, turned out for an antiwar rally at a Tulsa park, about 15 miles from the dedication site.

The Rev. Don Dallmann, pastor of the Prince of Peace Lutheran church in Tulsa, told the crowd, ". . . it is absurd for President Nixon to dedicate that little puddle of water in Catoosa while men are dying in Indochina."

The President drew laughs when he said Mrs. Nixon would have accompanied him but "she's working on a White House wedding. I think she and Tricia will get through it, but I don't know if I will." Nixon's elder daughter Tricia is to be married Saturday.

BEFORE FLYING to Oklahoma aboard Air Force One, the President had breakfast with Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Henry A. Kissinger, his assistant for national security affairs. Nixon returned to Washington immediately after his speech.

Nixon's big jet, Air Force One, landed at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., where the President immediately boarded a helicopter at 4:10 p.m. EDT for a short hop to Camp David in Maryand's mountains, where he is spending the weekend.

The presidential chopper landed at the mountaintop retreat about 40 minutes later.

The new waterway, authorized by Congress in 1946, is named officially the McClellan-Kerr Arkansas Navigation System, after the late Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma and Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark.

The President was flanked during his talk by McClellan, House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., Robert S. Kerr Jr. and Govs. David Hall of Oklahoma and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

GALLIC DRAFTEE . . . Gerald Fields —AP Wirephoto

Vietnam veteran receives draft notice — from France

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A man who was born in Kansas and served as a U.S. Army helicopter gunner in Vietnam says he has received a draft notice — from France.

"I got a call from my grandmother in Dodge City, Kan. The local police had come to serve me with a draft order from the French government," says Gerald Fields, 23, a security guard here for a private firm.

The order had been forwarded from the French consulate in Chicago. Since it was written in French no one could tell exactly what it said, except that it demanded Fields, married and the father of a baby girl, show up in France within 30 days.

Fields has made one visit to France. That was with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Noble Fields, now of suburban Citrus Heights, when he was one year old.

How did a Kansan now living in California wind up a prospective French draftee?

Fields' parents wed during World War II, when the elder Fields was stationed in Algeria. Mrs. Fields, born in France, followed her husband to the United States and they settled in Dodge City. Her son was born while her application of U.S. citizenship was pending in 1948.

As far as France was concerned, she was still a French citizen. And under French law anyone born a French citizen is French.

"I understand the draft is mandatory in France for all males over 21. Apparently there are no ifs, ands or buts about it," Fields says.

Fields' mother, now an American citizen, said the draft order was returned to the French consulate when her son was not found in Dodge City.

"I suppose it will be sent to his address out here now," she said.

His attorney has advised Fields his only recourse is to renounce his French citizenship, retaining only the American half of his dual nationality.

"My dad always suspected something might come up with the army, but we've always laughed it off," Fields says.

Fields is not laughing now, however.

"I'd have to go through boot camp again," he says.

Father of year award to mother

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — "I've thought a great deal about fathers but I never dreamed I would be elevated to that status," Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, founder of Father's day, said Saturday.

Mrs. Dodd, 89, of Spokane, was presented the National Father's Day Committee's traditional silver Father of the Year Award bowl in ceremonies here.

Hospital crisis key to budget hearings cutting the work week to 37½ hours, the board was virtually forced to adopt the measure because of the prevailing wage condition in the county charter.

A SIMILAR "untouchable" item is welfare spending. Chief Administrative Officer Arthur Will pointed out in his proposed budget that spiraling welfare loads will increase net county cost to $285 million next year, a $100-million increase over 1969-70

He said this increase alone would account for a 57.8 cent tax hike. But more ominous was his warning that the county could exercise no control over the program because of the mandatory requirements tied into federal and state funding arrangements.

Another thorny problem for supervisors is the barrage of protests in the last six weeks from hospital commissions, administrators and physician groups claiming that the main county hospitals are in a virtual state of collapse.

The various groups have claimed the hospitals cannot live within the $250 million recommended by Will, and they have predicted dire consequences unless the budget is boosted by at least $10 million.

WHILE SUPERVISORS generally have tried to play down the seriousness of the hospital situation saying better management policies are needed, the sheer weight of the protests simply cannot be ignored. And board members will have a tough time making cuts in this area.

Finally, they have to wrestle with the knowledge that Will put in one of the tightest preliminary budgets seen in the past few years. In a rare stroke of diplomacy, Will not only submitted a bare bones document, but included a list of county functions the board could eradicate with his own department heading the ax sheet.

By law the board must begin budget hearings on or before June 10 each year. It may close the sessions after 10 days of hearings or earlier if all speaking requests have been heard.

If hearings do not go beyond Friday, the board may use that day to stage a private debate on proposed revisions. When that has ended the auditor-controller will be ordered to prepare a budget resolution which supervisors must adopt on or before June 30.

WHAT TO DO WITH EQUIPMENT?

Winding down war no easy job

By IVER PETERSON
N. Y. Times Service

SAIGON — As the American role in the war declines, officers are discovering that disposing of the installations and equipment in Vietnam is more complicated than it was to bring them in.

"We are confronted with the problem of seeing that there is no waste, no scandal, and that no United States soldier goes without what he needs to do his job while he's still here," one senior American officer said.

At the same time, there are opportunities to strengthen the Vietnamization program, bolster the South Vietnamese economy, and even to slip some aid to other Asian allies, notably the Cambodians.

So far, as more than 180,000 troops have been withdrawn since the peak of American involvement in 1969 — when there were 542,500 troops in the country — about 570,000 tons of American war equipment and supplies has been sent back to the United States.

Each day, long rows of thoroughly cleaned trucks and tanks and carefully wrapped helicopters and planes are loaded onto Navy ships and private cargo carriers for the trip home. There is still said to be between two million and two and a half million tons of government-owned equipment left that has to be disposed of.

Each piece of this equipment undergoes a complicated process of checking that sorts it into major categories — that which is sent home, or is turned over to the South Vietnamese, South Koreans, Chinese Nationalists, Thais or Cambodians, and that which is eventually sold to local contractors for scrap.

There are 60,000 Americans who manage the decreasing amount of supplies coming into South Vietnam and the growing amount that is leaving.

Much of the materiel is sent back with the unit going home, but not until it has been cleaned with steam and high-pressure hoses to meet United States customs regulations.

"We figure as long as we have to clean it we might as well paint it, too," said one Marine sergeant recently as he supervised the loading of shiny trucks at Danang.

Other officials confirmed that much of the materiel being shipped out was badly worn, and would be sent to Army repair depots in Japan, Okinawa or Guam before going on to the United States or back to Southeast Asia.

If the equipment is not going back to the United States with its original unit, spokesmen said, the South Vietnamese army will get a chance to obtain it.

The Americans are careful not to let the South Vietnamese army have anything that might soon break down, thereby causing a maintenance problem.

So far, official sources here disclosed, 19,978 kinds of items worth more than $25 million when new have been turned over to the South Vietnamese by this system.

The figure does not include the more than 125 minor artillery bases and nine major bases and airfields that have also been turned over.

Equipment that is not sent back to the United States, or turned over to the South Vietnamese army is put up for inspection by other government agencies, such as the General Services Administration in Washington, which does most of the government buying, or by the Military Assistance Program directors who funnel surplus items to other American allies in Southeast Asia.

Some U. S. congressmen fear that support of the beleagured regime in Pnom Penh may lead to deeper American involvement in the Cambodian war.

Italy-Sicily bridge studied once again

By CHARLES W. BELL

ROME (UPI) — The Straits of Messina have a place in the mythology of engineering, both ancient and modern, and once again the crackpot schemes and hard-eyed dreams are coming off drawing boards around the world.

Rome is once more talking about a bridge across one of the most treacherous stretches of water anywhere.

Premier Emilio Colombo's coalition government decided on April 8 to give the green light to bridging the straits and thus ending the psychological and geographical isolation of Sicily.

The straits have been known in history since the time Homer called them the home of the seven-headed monster Scylla and the terrible whirlpool Charybdis where Ulysses almost drowned.

THE DISTANCE is just under two miles, but distance is not the problem. The timeless challenges for planners are earthquakes, gusting winds, uncharted seabottom and whirlpools created every six hours when the currents reverse.

Since 1883, when politicians first began talking about the problem, designers, engineers and architects have advanced all sorts of solutions.

There were plans to build a tunnel under the straits. Others proposed pontoons which would move with the currents and winds. Or concrete islands linked by short bridges. Or even filling in the straits with cement and rock.

Now nearly everyone agrees the best idea is a suspension bridge. Such a bridge would certainly rank among the great engineering feats of the 20th century — if Italy gets around to it before the end of the century.

THE BRIDGE, as planned now, would contain six lanes for traffic and two railway tracks. No suspension bridge of this length has ever carried rail traffic.

If work began right now, engineers and builders say the bridge could open by the end of 1979. But public works projects in Italy have a way of getting snarled in bureaucracy. Construction on a new Rome subway line planned for the 1960 summer Olympic Games has just begun and engineers can cite dozens of similar cases.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Failure of the Texas Legislature to act on a new abortion law for Texas during its regular and special sessions which ended Thursday left the state with no statute whatsoever.

A federal court had declared the state's 1925 law unconstitutional. Unless the U.S. Supreme Court reverses the lower court ruling, the state will have no law regulating who can have an abortion or who can perform an abortion.

DOES NOT LOOK 40

Prince Philip will be 50 Thursday

By MARGARET SAVILLE

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Philip turns 50 Thursday and his family says his best birthday gift may be that he does not look 40.

It is Philip's gift to himself. He has never been fat; his admiral's uniform is the same size he wore as a destroyer officer a generation ago.

The queen's husband still plays polo while most of his childhood friends now restrict themselves to croquet or a huffing-puffing set of tennis.

His only badge of age is his hair. It is still blond, but is thinning. Willpower can do nothing with growing hair and Philip is no man for a wig, his friends say. So, they say, he laughs it off and devotes himself to doing what he can. And this is how he does it:

—Rising shortly after dawn, Philip immediately exercises 10 minutes with equipment installed in his bathroom. He shaves in the bathtub, a time-saving habit. Daily he swims in Buckingham Palace's heated basement pool or, when the royal family is in Windsor Castle, in an indoor pool with a sliding roof he opens at the slightest suspicion of sun.

—Polo's his favorite participating sport. He watches cricket on television (Although it is said to bore his wife). He hunts through his timetable daily schedule weeks in advance to find time for open sea sailing in small craft. Hunting companions in Norfolk and Scotland say Philip cares far less for shooting than for simply hiking miles upon miles. His addiction to fresh air is not a family-wide custom.

Asked once if her brother-in-law had returned to Buckingham Palace, Princess Margaret sighed and said, "if all the windows of his suite are wide open, he has." (Like most British gentry, reared in stately homes bare of central heating, many members of Philip's family keep their windows shut.)

—Philip's diet is what the doctors tell us all to follow. He enjoys for breakfast two eggs, bacon and one piece of toast. Lunch is light. His favorite supper foods are roast beef and lamb, tomatoes (the English grill them and serve them with meat), cheese and most fresh fruits. His only break with dietitians is his typically English fondness for the fried fish'n'chips.

PRINCE PHILIP

But he ignores the English ritual of afternoon tea which is a British tribal rite including the brew, biscuits, cakes, cookies, jams, heavy cream and a treasure chest of calories. Philip prefers coffee to tea, anyway.

At official banquets he is served small portions (an aide has a word with the hosts beforehand) but eats out of courtesy whatever is on the menu. He drinks sparingly; a glass of wine or lager beer with meals, a gin-and-tonic at cocktail parties.

—His clothes, say Buckingham Palace intimates are more conservative than the late Queen Mary's hats. Friends and family have suggested change; Philip refuses. He likes dark blues and browns, subdued ties, soft felt hats and light-weight tweed topcoats.

In private he rids himself of ties and sometimes collars. He tucks a silk scarf the queen gave him years ago into an open-necked shirt. He often wears a rolled-neck sweater under a blue navy blazer. His greatest clothes passion are his old gray flannels.

His valet of 20 years, James McDonald, years ago gave up even trying to hint that any item in the wardrobe might be discarded. Philip refuses to throw anything away; it must shred first.

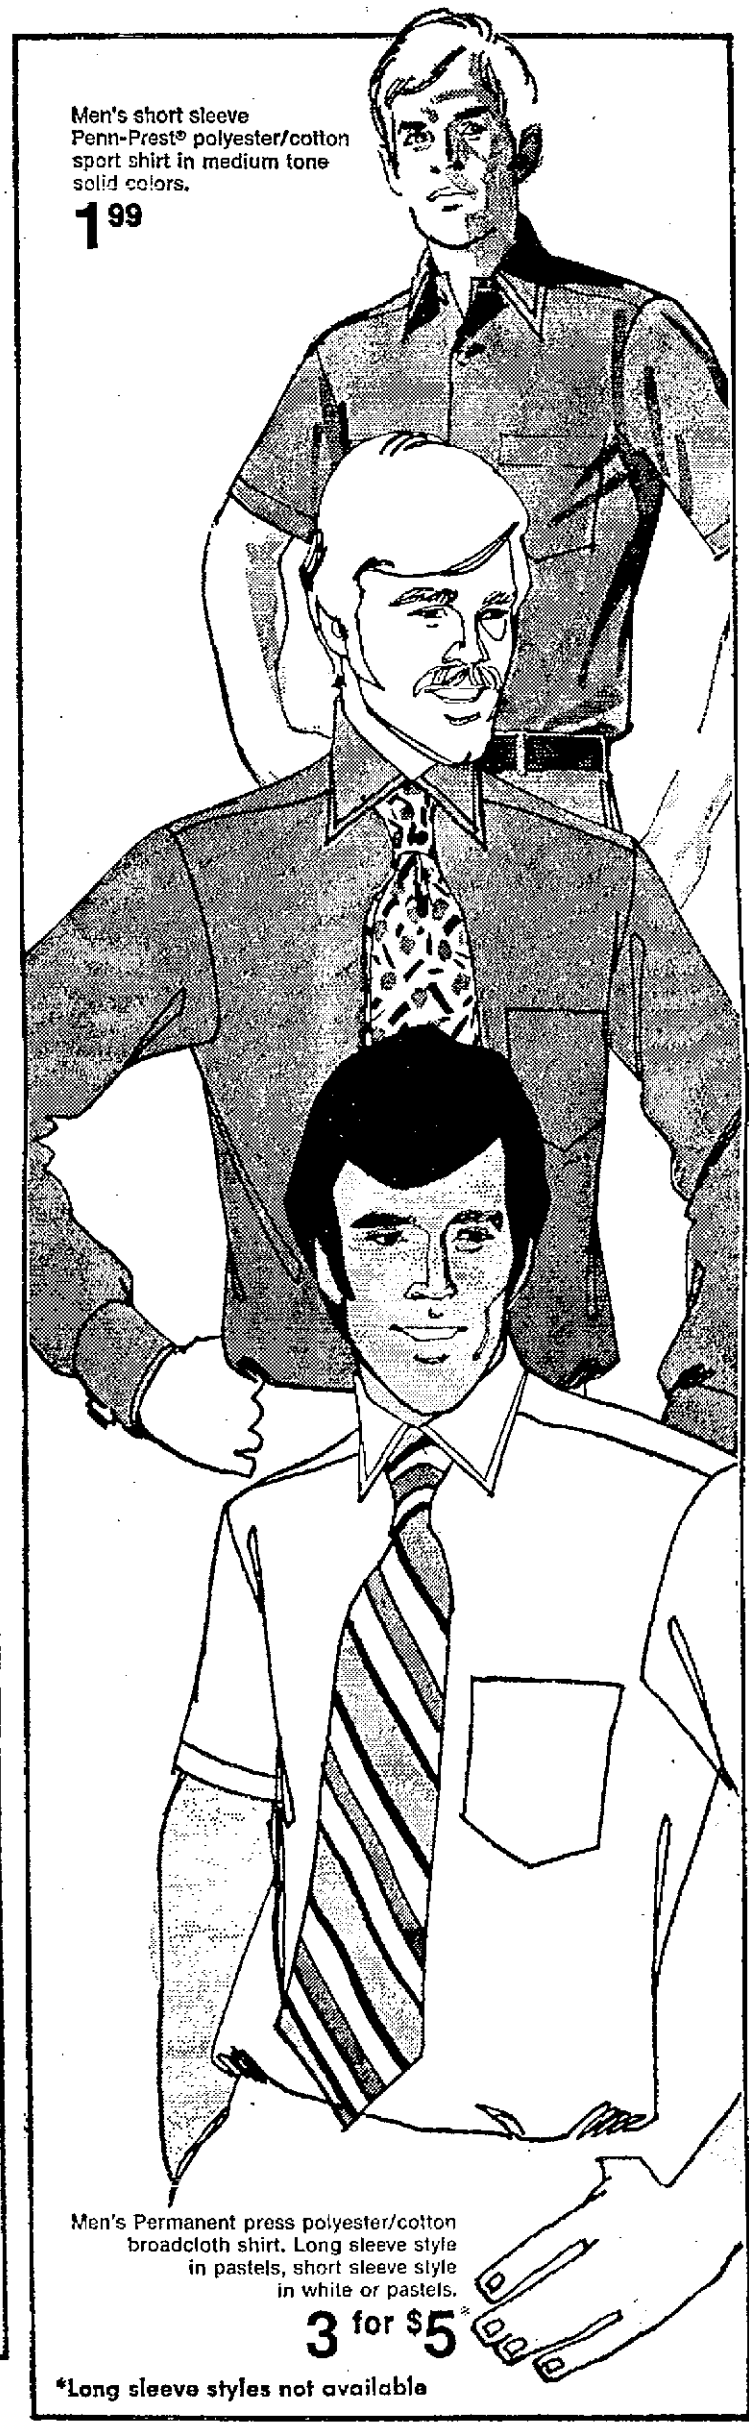

Friends say one of Philip's proudest feelings is that his eldest son, Prince Charles, follows father's routine in all these matters.

DICE STILL ROLL, WHEELS CLICK

No Hughes? Nevada is much the same

By MYRAM BORDERS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Recluse billionaire Howard Hughes left this gambling resort six months ago — throwing state leaders and residents into a spin about what might happen to the economy.

Nothing did.

In fact, the Hughes gambling resorts are going better.

Land prices have continued to increase. Construction is fluctuating at about the same rate as the rest of the nation. The population continues to grow. The tourists continue to visit.

But successors to the Hughes empire in Nevada discovered last week state officials were not willing to make as many concessions as they were when they thought Hughes was around personally.

A complicated corporate juggle, which would place all the Hughes gambling resorts under one corporate shell, ran into a snag with the powerful state gaming commission.

Rancher Norman Brown, senior member of the commission, asked: "Is Howard Hughes a person or a ghost? We have been dealing continually with something we cannot get our hands on and have been dealing with various groups since Hughes came to Nevada."

The commission did not grant the corporation changes and ordered an investigation to get some answers.

HUGHES HOTELS are still losing money. Opponents to a gambling license juggle designed to place all Hughes gambling resorts under the one corporation said his casinos would have no real financial backing because the newly created operating company had no real assets. Hughes personally would be several steps removed from the casinos in the pyramid of corporations.

Hughes' departure was as mysterious as his arrival in the middle of a November night in 1966. A private train stopped on the outskirts of Las Vegas 4½-years ago, a stretcher was loaded into a waiting car. A short time later a group of men walked into the Desert Inn Hotel on the Las Vegas "Strip" carrying someone on a stretcher covered with a sheet. All eyes were directed at the stretcher while Hughes apparently was in the group walking alongside.

Six months ago a van drove up to a waiting four-engine Lockheed jet on a November night at Nellis Air Force base, located about 12 miles from downtown.

Capt. David Van Dyke, duty officer at Nellis that Thanksgiving Eve, said two of six men carried the stretcher aboard the plane along with three suitcases and some 10 boxes. The plane had landed at 8 p.m. and left at 9:24 p.m.

Almost simultaneously a fleet of black limousines sped from the Desert Inn Hotel to McCarran Airport, perhaps another Hughes decoy.

Regardless of which way he left, Hughes was gone.

WITHIN HOURS Robert Maheu, head of the Hughes Nevada operations, was fired and the board of directors of Hughes Tool Co. moved in and set up operations at the Sands Hotel on the Strip to take control of the Hughes Nevada empire.

By that time the Hughes holdings included seven gambling resorts, thousands of acres of land, a television station, several sprawling ranches, thousands of mining claims and an airline, Air West.

Hughes' sudden departure and Maheu's firing sparked a heated court battle in which Maheu challenged his firing. He said he did not believe Hughes gave the order for his dismissal and expressed fears the multimillionaire was taken away against his will or was ill.

HOWARD HUGHES
A Long Time Ago

A court ruling gave control of the Hughes empire to Hughes Tool Co., and Maheu filed a $50 million damage suit. The suit still is pending.

DURING THE PERIOD Hughes secluded himself on the ninth floor of the Desert Inn Hotel he invested more than $300 million in Nevada, including the purchase of seven gambling resorts. They included Harolds Club in Reno, and in Las Vegas the Silver Slipper, Sands, Castaways, Desert Inn, Frontier and Landmark.

"All of them were losing money then except Harolds Club and the Silver Slipper, which always were money makers," said a Hughes spokesman recently. Those are the only two resorts which concentrate strictly on a casino operation and offer no hotel facilities.

The spokesman said all the other resorts were in the red at the time Maheu was fired.

"Now two of them are in the black — the Landmark and Frontier hotels. We have cut out all the fat. We have stopped all the featherbedding and fired those who had their finger in the pot or were incompetent."

HUGHES, who will be 66 this December, employs about 8,000 persons in Nevada — making him the largest single employer in the state. The Nevada test site, the center of the U.S. nuclear testing program, will have 7,600 persons on the payrolls at the end of June.

When Hughes acquired his last gambling resort in Nevada, Harolds Club in Reno, he became the state's largest single casino operator. Hughes' casinos last year accounted for almost 16 per cent of the gross gambling income in Nevada. The gross gambling revenue in Nevada for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, was $543.7 million, which means Hughes' casinos would have accounted for about $87 million of the gross.

Hughes also controls more land than any single individual in Nevada — including thousands of mining claims, several sprawling ranches, 40 square miles of undeveloped desert land west of Las Vegas and acres of valuable land on the Strip, some of which is undeveloped.

From the time Hughes arrived, there were rumors of a multimillion dollar airport construction, a helicopter factory, a hospital, a medical clinic or a movie company moving to southern Nevada. Expansion plans to the tune of $150 million were announced for the Sands Hotel.

None of the rumors has come true, but the Nevada economy continues to grow and the Hughes holdings are a large part of it.

Nothing catastrophic happened to Nevada when Hughes left. Just some of the mystery has moved away.

A-bombs tested by French

PARIS (AP) — France exploded an experimental atomic device of low power at its Pacific test site Saturday opening its 1971 test program, the Defense Ministry announced.

The ministry said the blast was set off over the lagoon at Murruroa Atoll.

The device probably was suspended from a balloon, as in previous tests. Authorized sources said earlier this week the 1971 program would include six to eight blasts.

The Saturday explosion was France's 40th test since it set off its first atom bomb Feb. 13, 1960, at its Sahara Desert test site in North Africa.

Since the test site was moved to the South Pacific in 1966, France has carried out four test programs including three to eight blasts each.

The current series is expected to help perfect the French hydrogen bomb as part of a program to arm missiles aboard atom-powered submarines in late 1975 or early 1976.

The first French hydrogen bomb test was conducted Aug. 24, 1968, at the South Pacific site.

'Learn or leave' rule works at Roman Catholic school

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Roman Catholic educator who clamped a strict "learn or leave" rule last February on his racially restive high school said Friday it had worked and the school is now "peaceful."

The Rev. Charles V. Gallen, 6-footer who believes the administration and faculty of a school must assume ultimate responsibility for the safety and education of students, took action after a disturbance involving a white youth who punched a black student. The Roman Catholic high school, 81 years old and squeezed by urban sprawl, is 15 per cent black.

FATHER Gallen said his first action was to expel the black student involved because he got a knife from his locker after being punched. Several other pupils involved in the resulting melee were barred from classes until each returned with a parent for a talk with the principal.

The priest then placed in effect what he at the time described as "martial law" —the wearing of coat and tie, no smoking, no foul language, no fighting, no eating in class, cleanliness, and neat hairstyles even if long or afro. He said most of the rules were already in effect at the school and only needed strict enforcement.

The most drastic measure taken by Gallen was searching students for weapons after he received a tip that youths from a nearby predominantly black public high school planned to march on Roman Catholic. It uncovered a number of penknives, a can opener and a duffel bag of bricks.

"Now the 44-member faculty is in complete control of all matters of discipline," said Gallen. "So far, no student has volunteered to leave, nor has any of the faculty quit or asked for transfer."

NEW PERSPECTIVE ON DOPE CACHE

Stash—a student group that bares dangers of drug abuse

By MICHAEL V. USCHAN

BELOIT, Wis. (UPI) — "Stash" in street language refers to a cache of drugs. Now, the word has a new meaning. As a mnemonic, it stands for the "Student Association for the Study of Hallucinogens, Inc.," an organization founded by students to inform other students and the public about drugs, their use and their abuse.

Stash was conceived in the fall of 1968 by James Gamage and Edmund Zerkin, both 22, who were then students at Beloit College. Since then, they have dropped out of school to devote full time to the organization and can list these accomplishments:

—Stash has become a Wisconsin corporation, duly chartered under state business laws.

—It has built one of the nation's best libraries on hallucinogens and has started a publishing business that grosses about $60,000 annually.

—It has won approval in medical circles for its research and publishing. Recently, it was given a contract from the federal government to publish eight drug pamphlets for distribution by the National Institute of Mental Health.

The success story of Stash, Gamage and Zerkin goes back to when, as a student, Gamage did research at the American Medical Association Library in Chicago.

Gamage was amazed at the extensive drug literature — some of it dating back centuries — that he had not known existed.

"THIS WAS just the kind of information that wasn't getting to the public," he said, "just the kind needed in dealing with drugs."

Frustrated by the thought of all that information lying in a medical library, he started talking with Zerkin and some other friends. They decided to found an organization to get the data to the public.

"The name of the organization chose us," Zerkin said. "We started with this word, the street term, and worked around it to get our name. We wanted the kids to identify with us.

While the name was chosen to appeal to their expected audience — the young potential drug user — the desire to identify and be identified shows up even more in the Stash style. It is straight-forward and factual, with no moralizing.

"We don't try to put anything over on them," Gamage said. "We just give them non-biased information so they can coolly look it over and rationally decide."

WHAT THEY decide — whether to use drugs or not — is not the concern of Stash. "I see our role as science education, not as a father figure telling anyone what to do," Gamage said.

Gamage added, however, that the Stash position towards drugs is "There are no bad drugs, only bad ways to use them."

When Stash was started three years ago, it got its funds from members. Part-time jobs such as dishwashing raised the money for the members.

Gamage figures about $2,000 went into the organization in this way in the early stages. Then some of the pamphlets and books Stash compiled began to sell. Anonymous foundation grants were given. Today, the group is nearly self-sufficient. It hopes to be entirely that way within two years.

From offices here, Stash runs a multi-faceted operation that includes publishing, research, library and public speaking. The main task of the 12-member staff, which is headed by Gamage as director, is to keep its library on hallucinogens up to date and to handle the research that comes in from members.

GAMAGE BOASTS the library is one of the best in its field in the nation. He claims more than 90 per cent of all English language literature on hallucinogens is available here.

Stash uses a computer system for classifying and picking over the library for its members, which range from corporations and universities around the world to individuals — such as students at Beloit College.

Memberships are available at prices ranging from $25 to $600.

Gamage said a prospective member is the Cook County, Ill., (Chicago) school system. He said he had talked with the school board on the possibility of it taking out 147 memberships — one for each of its districts — and he is confident the board will agree.

Gamage said the publishing business encompasses technical books, bibliographies and even autobiographical accounts by drug users. It is made up mostly of pamphlets, however.

The Stash publications are written for the layman and "not the type that dig into the way drugs work" technically. "I guess that's just where the public is at," he said.

The National Institutes of Health grant deals with the publication of pamphlets on drugs such as cocaine, PCP, mescaline, psilocybin and heroin. The first one, on cocaine, is due out shortly.

GAMAGE SAID that in the cocaine pamphlet's eight to ten pages will be "the history of the drug, its use and abuse, a technical explanation of how it works, legalities in taking it — in short, a summary of just about all you need to know about it."

Gamage and Zerkin have also started a series of bibliographies that will list all the works on a particular drug. The first one, on marijuana, bears the ponderous title, "The Comprehensive Guide to the English Literature on Cannabis."

The bibliography, which not only lists the work but gives a price of its material, received a good review in the archives of general psychiatry — "extremely beneficial to anyone interested in the subject of marijuana."

In addition to publishing, Stash provides speakers for schools and social groups. Stash is also helping sponsor a heroin symposium, scheduled for San Francisco June 19-20 with the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic.

Bounty put on heads of drug pushers

By ORVAL JACKSON

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — "Tip" the posters say. "Turn in a Pusher. Phone Tampa 229-6445."

This is one way in which the Tampa business community has joined the war against drugs — by going after the pushers.

The "Turn in a Pusher" campaign revolves around a bounty system of placing rewards on the heads of drug pushers and operates outside normal police channels in an effort to get young people to talk.

THE PROJECT is the result of efforts by the Chamber of Commerce's task force on drug abuse, headed by former FBI agent James Cusack.

The success of the program depends upon the ability to guarantee anonymity to tipsters and to pay off as promised upon conviction of a pusher, Cusack said.

Just over three months old, the program is credited with 21 arrests of persons charged with peddling hard narcotics, but because of the slowness of legal processes, none has yet gone to trial.

Cusack said the tip center, manned by professional, nonpolice, personnel from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, received more than 1,500 tips within the first two months of operation and said 190 of these were considered worthy of investigation.

Gunman flattened by coach

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A high school basketball coach, on crutches while recuperating from a knee operation, took on a gunman who tried to attack his girl friend and came out a winner.

Mike Osborne, who coaches basketball at La Salle High School, was watching television with his girl friend at his home last week when a gunman broke in on them.

"He told me to lie down on the floor and he tied me up with a necktie, but he wasn't very good at it," Osborne said.

"He put his gun down and threw her to the ground, and I heard her scream. He was bending over her. In a split second I was on top of him."

Osborne, who had cartilege in his knee removed May 25, said he fought the man with his fists. During the brawl the man pulled a knife, but Osborne knocked it away.

"The knee opened up and bled a little, but it's okay now," the coach said.

Osborne had six stitches taken in his head, but the intruder also required stitches.

The suspect was identified by police as Robert J. Reich, 22, Philadelphia. He was held in $15,000 bail on charges of burglary, assault with intent to ravish, aggravated assault and battery and weapons offenses. Police said Reich's left eye was closed and discolored.

Police described the fight as "a real donnybrook in the living room, powder room and kitchen."

During the brawl, Osborne's girl friend fled to a neighbor's house.

UN-SOCIALIST ACTION

Berlin Reds bare rent-dodger list

By JOSEPH FLEMING

BERLIN (UPI) — Got trouble with your landlord?

So does Manfred Remmert, right now. He hasn't paid his rent in two and a half years.

But Remmert is a piker compared to Frau Agnes Richwald. She owes her landlord back rent for six years.

The landlord of both of them is the East Berlin city government, and like landlords the world over it wants its money. It wants, in fact, the sum of four million marks ($1 million) that is owed by tenants who, like Herr Remmert and Frau Richwald, have been spending their money for other things, like refrigerators and television sets and Baltic Sea vacations instead of on rent.

To collect back rents, which have increased in the past year by more than one million marks ($250,000), the Communist-run city government is taking an unusual step. It decided to publish the names of all those who have "ignored appeals to Socialist morality" and "placed personal comfort above the duty of paying rent."

Since the city not only owns the housing but a newspaper as well, it has no problem in publicizing the fact that Frau Richwald of 46 Charlottenburger Strasse, Herr Remmert of 104 Langhans Strasse, along with other named rent dodgers, are "living at the expense of others."

The names and addresses of rent holdouts are appearing in the city-owned Berliner Zeitung. The newspaper explained in an editorial it was doing this because of the "unmoral behavior" of citizens who "prefer a television set and-or a new automobile, refrigerator and-or an extensive wardrobe, new furniture and-or a bank account to paying rent regularly."

The newspaper noted that rents are low (they are about five per cent of the average income in East Germany; and the persons being listed had adequate incomes.

Hot pants banned — 8-hour distraction

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A total of 110 of 137 firms in this city have banned hot pants for women in their offices, according to a survey released Saturday by Associated Industries.

One company official said hot pants were banned because they are "an eight-hour distraction for the men who are trying to work."

WARNING! TO THE NEEDY AND THE ILL!

The existing Outside Medical Relief (OMR) and Mental Health programs are threatened with extinction. Starting July 1, plans call to herd you into the already overcrowded L.A. County-U.S.C. Medical Center and Harbor General Hospital for hospital treatment or to see a doctor — or even just to get a prescription filled. How you get there — even whether you can afford the bus fare to get there — that's your problem. Can this inhumane betrayal of the needy sick be stopped? Possibly. The L.A. County Supervisors have promised to listen to your pleas at a "Budget Hearing" this coming Monday. Your health — and possibly your life — depends upon your being at the Budget Hearing.

New violence erupts on anniversary of '67 war

Associated Press

An Arab rifleman ambushed an Israeli civilian vehicle on Jerusalem's outskirts Saturday, shattering the calm that had prevailed in the holy city on the fourth anniversary of the start of the 1967 Middle East war.

Arab guerrillas fought with Israeli soldiers across Lebanon's border and new violence erupted in the Gaza Strip.

In Jordan, fresh fighting flared between King Hussein's Bedouin troops and Palestinian guerrillas in the country's northern section. Two bomb explosions rocked Amman, Jordan's capital, wounding two policemen and a civilian.

A GOVERNMENT spokesman said guerrillas attacked army positions near Jerash, 25 miles north of Amman, with rockets, mortars and machine guns. Guerrillas claimed the army shelled a crowded refugee camp and attacked commando bases in the Jerash area and set a village ablaze with artillery fire.

There were no casualty reports.

In Beirut, a Lebanese army spokesman said Israeli forces fired four mortar shells into the southern Lebanese village of Ramia, half a mile from the Israeli frontier, killing one man.

Egyptian troops along the Suez Canal observed the anniversary with loudspeaker broadcasts aimed at Israeli soldiers across the waterway. They played 30 minutes of music and broadcast messages from Israeli war prisoners to the Israelis manning the canal bank near Port Suez.

INFORMED sources in Jerusalem said the ambushed Israeli vehicle was on the main road leading from Jerusalem to Ramallah on the occupied west bank of the Jordan River when it was hit by a stream of automatic rifle fire near the village of Beit Hanina.

The sources said two passengers—an Arab police officer and an Arab civilian—were wounded, the civilian seriously.

The Israelis reported the exchange of gunfire across the Israeli-Lebanese border near the settlement of Zarit in western Galilee.

Informants in Tel Aviv said Arab gunners opened fire with light arms and bazookas at an army emplacement near the border. The Israelis fired back and silenced the Arab guns, the sources said.

The clash followed a guerilla crossing into Israeli-occupied Jordanian territory on Friday.

EARLIER in the day, seven Palestinian guerrilla organizations called for the overthrow of King Hussein in Jordan and the formation of a national union government.

But a dispatch from Amman, Jordan's capital, reported a meeting took place between guerrilla leaders and Jordanian army officers in an attempt to end more than a week of fighting between the army and guerrillas in northern Jordan. More than a dozen lives have been lost in the clashes and bombings.

A Jordanian army spokesman reported that a water truck was destroyed and two civilians wounded in northern Jordan Saturday by a guerrilla land mine.

"THERE ARE remarkably encouraging signs that we shall be able to settle our dispute in northern Jordan," Hani el Hassan, a representative of the guerrilla's Central Committee, reported after the meeting.

He said he would fly to Beirut to seek fresh instructions from the guerrilla chief, Yasir Arafat.

Love scenes 'held over,' says Hitch

LONDON — Alfred Hitchcock looked like a Buddha as he sat with his hands folded across his stomach in his suite at Claridge's. He wore the familiar black suit and black tie. With a drink in front of him — it was the cocktail hour — he discoursed upon his favorite theory, that movie stars who have love affairs before the camera usually continue them off the camera in the dressing room.

"My dear Uhlll, cahn't you see it's human nature?" His chins shook as he wagged his head at my naivete. "When you've got a love scene going at 4 in the afternoon, it finishes in the dressing room after 6. That's why we've so many divorces in our business. These actors and actresses believe in the love scenes they're playing!"

"All of them?"

"Most of them," he nodded. As he spoke, in rushed his wife of 45 years, Alma, a delightful little lady who had been out shopping in sunny London and would indeed enjoy a drink.

"I remember one kissing scene" — the Buddha shook with laughter — "the kissing was so real, we could hardly get them apart!" He named them, a couple of yesterday.

Back here now doing his first picture in his native England in 20 years ("Frenzy," about a sex killer and his problem in disposing of a body). Hitchcock looks upon the nudity wave with his typical amused detachment.

"I'm all for nudity for family audiences. Is that all right, Alma?" he asked.

'Itch hopes to get Lynn Redgrave to play the girl who gets raped and slain. He meanwhile enjoys looking over his native city.

"Skyscrapers all over the place! But you have skyscrapers in Africa now. To get a bit of fresh air, I go to the race track."

He can look with affection on the past and upon the filmmakers, the tycoons, for whom he made a lot of money and vice versa. One of his friends is Sam Goldwyn, who's ill.

"I remember May 1940," Hitchcock laughed. "I was in Walter Wanger's office. The Low Countries had just been invaded by Hitler. Everybody was very depressed. Goldwyn came in. He said to Wanger, 'I'll tell you, Walter, Germany will never invade United Artists.'

"He meant the United States."

THE WEEKEND WINDUP

Ray Heatherton said at the Jolly Fisherman his dtr. Joey may join him on part of his college lecture series about TV's early days . . . Joe Levine'll bring in reporters from 14 countries for the big opening bash for his film, "Carnal Knowledge."

Bob Tisch's next big overseas hotel, Loew's Monte Carlo, opens Jan. '75 . . . Eddy Arnold's turned down bids from both parties to run for office in Tennessee . . . The Carpenters will sing the theme for the movie, "Bless the Beasts & Children" . . . Singer Jimmy Dean, who's merely a millionaire, plays a billionaire hotel owner in the James Bond epic, "Diamonds Are Forever" . . . King Vidor lauds Russ film system

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — King Vidor, a most distinguished pioneer director, believes the Soviet Union has a better system for developing future filmmakers than Hollywood.

He put it this way: "Would-be directors in Russia work with an established director for four or five years before they make their first picture.

"The newcomer is taught everything on stages, locations and in the cutting room during the course of his training.

"It is a system that cannot be topped by college courses in this country. In the United States they take a man who has made a college film or a couple of television commercials and suddenly he is a director."

VIDOR SHOOK his head in amusement.

"I teethed on two-reel movies," he said. "I was a prop man. I cranked the old cameras, set the lights and spent years learning about every department at a studio.

"By the time I was assigned my first picture I knew what I was doing. So did all the young directors in those days.

"Today studio bosses and men in charge of production don't know what directing is all about. They think it's simply a matter of where to place the camera."

Vidor is convinced cinema — and he uses that word without pretention — is on the threshold of a magnificent new era.

"For years motion pictures were a medium of entertainment only," he said. "Now I see it as becoming the greatest medium of expression in world history.

"Film hasn't begun to touch on the limits of metaphysics and philosophical ideas. It will surpass literature and the theater.

"THE REASON film will grow and prosper is that young people have discovered cinema is the best means of expressing everything they think about — ecology, protest, revolution and revulsion of hypocrisy.

"Young people are beginning to break the old patterns. And I think they should. I get a kick out of it."

Still, Vidor would like to see directors better trained, to walk before they run so the end result will be professionally artistic.

"Motion pictures are becoming more subjective," he went on. "There is a consciousness, an awareness in them of moving away from outside authority.

"Young people rebel against figureheads, whether it's a studio head, the President or the Pope. Film is leading the way to realizing the true integrity of conscious man.

"FILM TELLS the truth. It is there to be seen. In the two world wars a slogan could bring men running to enlist. We read of Huns and Japs and indictments of entire peoples. That can't happen today. Films taken on the scene tell the record of our world.

"Motion pictures can destroy slogans, brainwashing and propaganda. Film records facts not credos.

"There is a breakthrough now. Movies have discovered they are not related to literature and the stage."

THOUGH CRICKET SEASON IS WOEFUL

Wine tasting team is bringing glory to Oxford

By TIMOTHY G. SMITH

OXFORD, England (UPI) — The cricket team had a woeful season, the tennis team did no better.

The crew went down to humiliating defeat against its ancient rival, Cambridge.

But one Oxford sporting team is bringing glory to its alma mater on the field — or table — of battle. The wine tasting team.

Wine tasting a sport? You'd better believe it. At sniffing, sipping and, ultimately, spitting the wine, Oxford's team claims the finest taste buds in the Ivy League.

It is, said one red-nosed authority, "the fastest-growing sport in Oxford."

In addition to clobbering Cambridge, 381 to 210, the Oxford wine tasters have defeated five other university teams as well as tasting societies from Sussex and Kent. The Oxford squad is now in training for the season's finale in London against the Young Wine Merchants Association.

WINE TASTING can be an exacting sport. Contestants must name the country of origin, area (Bordeaux, Burgundy, etc.) commune, vineyard, vintage, and, if they can, the actual name of each wine offered. A normal match involves the classification to ten wines, five white and five red.

Before actually sipping the wine, a seasoned taster holds the glass to a flame or a white card.

"In red wines, color is very important for deciding vintage," explained Sarah Stewart-Brown, Oxford team member and the only woman ever to taste in the Oxford-Cambridge match. "The wine becomes browner as it gets older."

After examining its color and testing its bouquet, a competitive wine taster sips slowly and rolls the wine in his mouth. The liquid is never swallowed, however, since this would gradually dull taste.

"You spit it out after each taste," Miss Stewart-Brown said. "One aims vaguely at great silver spittoons. No one gets drunk — at least not during the matches."

TWO OXFORD undergraduate societies, the Wine Circle and the Wine and Food Society, provide a sort of minor-league training ground for potential members of the university team. Wine merchants seem anxious to cooperate by giving regular "tastings."

This remarkable direct film study of emotionally disturbed children at their residential treatment center, Warrendale, in Toronto, was originally made for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., but it could not be shown; the CBC ruled it was unsuitable for television. Shattering, appalling, affecting with no holds barred and no four letter words unspoken, this documentary has gone on to unprecedented international recognition.
"Anyone who wants to understand more about the nature of children, of life and of themselves should see 'Warrendale.'" (The Observer)

Is Tarzan hanging around your attic?

If "Tarzan of the Apes," published in 1914, is there, you could be $76 richer.

But you wouldn't know this. Not unless you had a copy of the "Bookfinders' Value Guide," a brand-new listing of valuable books.

Just published, this illustrated book lists "Tarzan" and almost 1,500 other "rare books" that can bring anywhere from $25 to $300 to $1,000 and more.

"Rare books" are not rare at all. They're everywhere. Attics. Garages. Basements. Public libraries. Even in your living room.

If you trip across the right volume by Edgar Allan Poe, Mark Twain, or Nathaniel Hawthorne, you can hit the literary jackpot. If you happen to find a signed original copy of James Joyce's "Ulysses," you can trade it for a dream vacation.

You may not be that lucky. But you can easily come up with a lesser treasure by, say, John Steinbeck, William Faulkner, or Ernest Hemingway that you can sell to almost any book dealer for between $40 and $500.

James Manning Bergquist, PhD. and Professor of History at Villanova University, is the Consulting Editor for the "Bookfinders' Value Guide," which also introduces you to the fascinating hobby of book collecting.

The price of this priceless little volume is only $3.75, including postage and handling. Two for $7. Six for $18.90. One trip to the attic can repay you a hundred times over.

Send your check or money order today. Then start hunting!

There's money in rare (and not-so-rare) books.

STANLEY HYMAN LECTURES OFFICERS
His Classroom the Pentagon

THE LT. COLONEL SYNDROME

It is tough to get out of the military

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (LA) — The wiry little man in loud pants and even louder shirt snarled at his audience, all majors, colonels and generals:

"The military image in yuk. The only people who think you're great are your kids."

There was a nervous stirring among the listeners, men who had spent all their working lives saluting and being saluted. But the men listened because the speaker was telling them how they are going to spend the rest of their days in a totally alien world: civilian life.

"Forget the war stories," said Stanley Hyman. "Forget that you commanded 30,000 men and handled a budget of $90 million. Nobody gives a damn; nobody's going to give you a job because of that. Macy's competes with Gimbels; they are not going to blow them out of business with nuclear warfare."

HYMAN, an associate professor at American University, is teaching classes at the Pentagon and three military bases in the Washington area, last duty station for hundreds of military men, and has been asked by the Navy to begin a course at San Diego, a favorite retirement city for naval personnel.

More than one million men will leave military service before this year is out, and 65,000 of them will be officers and noncommissioned officers retiring after 20 to 30 years in uniform.

Of all ex-servicemen, says Hyman, these men face the most difficult adjustment. They are the least employable, especially officers in the higher grades, doubly handicapped by age and noncivilian skills.

"In the 20-30 years that he's in a highly structured environment," said Hyman in an interview, "he's just moving from one womb to another womb.

"His life is structured in such a way that a civilian never knows. In the military or government, there is no competition. Everybody has responsibility, so nobody has responsibility. The military man has spent his life becoming expert in passing the buck."

HYMAN did years of research in developing his course for military retirees, but he also speaks from personal experience — 20 years as a pilot in the Air Force.

His approach to turning out civilians is as subtle as an artillery barrage. Standing before his Pentagon class, he said:

"Most of you guys have been straight-arrow so long it's difficult for you to bend a little bit. But that is the way it's done out there.

"You have to realize you're not a salable commodity. The civilian thinks you're arrogant and overbearing and not realistic. He thinks you come on like Napoleon and the higher the rank the more authoritarian you are."

The man who has had an outstanding military career will make a poorer civilian than the man who hasn't done as well, Hyman told the class. "The man who is a civilian at heart or is a civilian is more creative than his military counterpart because to be creative in the military is to be a boat-rocker. Outside they want you to be creative."

A FEW questions come from the class. Bread and butter questions. Should you be candid about a disability in applying for a job? "No, not unless it shows." How do you ask a personnel director about chances for advancement? "Ask him." What about the man who offers you less money because you're getting retirement pay. "It's none of his business."

In researching his course, Hyman said, he first went to areas where military retirements are heavy, then to large corporations to see what their real feelings were toward the military, and then to military men themselves.

Among the latter he found a strange phenomenon.

"These people know for years in advance their terminal date," he said, "but they do nothing before 90 days prior to getting out." What they do then, he said, is turn to career counseling services and shell out from $250 to $2,500 for job resumes.

With a flourish, Hyman pulled out one of the resumes, expensively printed, long on data about the man's military career, with pictures.

"If you are an employer you don't want to know what he looks like or how many command posts he's held. You want to know will he make money for me."

THE MAN who leaves the military or government after long service usually has severe psychological problems, Hyman said, which is why he puts off doing anything about a new job until the last possible minute.

"The man who is in his 40s is hitting the reflective period of his life," he said. "There are changes taking place. It starts with worry about his masculinity, then a concern about competing with younger men. His day exhausts him, he's tired all the time. He starts to feel slightly inadequate . . . it's comparable to menopause in the female.

"Call it the 'Lieutenant Colonel Syndrome.' The man did all right in the service but didn't make it to the top. Already at 40, he's living with the realization he didn't make it. It's the same with a grade 12 man in civil service, or the man in a defense-oriented industry who plateaued out as a district manager, not the regional manager."

Keel of 'quietest sub' laid to honor California solon

From Our Capitol Bureau

GROTON, Conn — The keel for the nation's quietest nuclear submarine was laid here Saturday at a ceremony that honored the late Rep. Glenard P. Lipscomb as a prophet and as a friend.

The tribute came from Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, one of Lipscomb's closest friends during 16 years of mutual service in the House.

"No belief did he cherish more than the conviction that our country must continue to be strong," Laird said. "There was a doggedness in him that would not permit him to rest until he had thoroughly studied every fact and every argument on any issue on which he had to make a decision. I often called Glen Lipscomb the hardest working member of the Congress and he was."

The keel for the quiet-running sub that will bear Lipscomb's name is inscribed with a warning issued by the California congressman in 1968 when he was opposing efforts by Laird's predecessors in the Defense Department to halt development of quiet electric-drive submarines.

"We must push ahead vigorously with the design and construction of the most advanced nuclear attack submarines our technology can provide," Lipscomb said at the time.

The initials of Lipscomb's two daughters, Mrs. Robert Murrell of San Diego and Mrs. Louis D. Grasso of La Plata, Md., were welded on the keel above these words Saturday in a traditional ceremony here at the Electric Boat division yards of General Dynamics.

The same site was the scene Friday of the launching of the USS Silversides, the Navy's 100th nuclear submarine, an occasion used by Navy Secretary John Chaffee to warn of the growing Soviet nuclear submarine challenge.

Chaffee, a three-time governor of nearby Rhode Island, introduced Laird Saturday, and the defense secretary repeated the concern.

Laird said also that development of advanced submarines had "suffered" during 1968, when the Vietnamese war claimed a major share of the U.S. defense budget.

"In 1968, production of nuclear attack submarines had almost ground to a halt," he added.

The pioneer submarine named after Lipscomb will be the first to use a new design of a turbine electric drive propulsion system. This system, in combination with other advanced silencing techniques, will make the USS Lipscomb a super-quiet sub.

The only other turbine-electric ship in the U.S. submarine fleet is the much-smaller USS Tullibee, commissioned in 1960.

The American most responsible for the entire nuclear fleet — Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover — introduced Lipscomb's two daughters and his widow, Virginia Lipscomb.

Mrs. Lipscomb authenticated the keel of the nuclear frigate USS California last year at a Newport news ceremony only a week before the congressman's death. Rickover and Laird were also the featured speakers on that occasion and both men Saturday recalled Lipscomb's strong and effective support of nuclear-powered surface ships.

Rickover called Lipscomb "a patriot, a statesman and a gentleman" who was recognized as one of the foremost congressional authorities on national defense.

Six California congressmen flew to Groton from Washington to attend the keel laying.

They included John Rousselot, R-San Marino, the present representative of the sprawling San Gabriel Valley 24th Congressional District that Lipscomb represented.

Others in attendance included Reps. H. Allen Smith, R-Glendale; Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach; Bob Wilson, R-San Diego; John McFall, D-Manteca, and Victor Veysey, R-Riverside.

"This is a most deserving honor," said Smith, the ranking Republican on the House Rules Committee. "He was as close a friend as I ever had in Congress, and we miss Glen very much."

Hosmer called the event "a sentimental occasion" that recalled the congressional battles he and Lipscomb fought together in behalf of nuclear power.

The keel of the Lipscomb was reported "well and truly laid" by the late congressman's daughters here at the conclusion of an hour-long ceremony marked by sunny weather and a gentle breeze which stirred the red-white-and-blue bunting at dockside.

General Dynamics officials said that if work proceeds on normal schedule the USS Lipscomb will be launched late in 1972 and commissioned the following year.

Degree for operator of switchboard

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (UPI) — Antioch College will award its switchboard operator an honorary degree at commencement exercises June 19.

Mrs. Deane C. Marshall, who is retiring this month after 15 years as switchboard operator at the college, will receive an honorary Master of Communications degree.

A group of graduating seniors proposed the tribute, and it was approved unanimously at a faculty meeting.

College Vice President William H. Warren said the degree was appropriate because Mrs. Marshall, mother of three girls, "has quietly and effectively facilitated the activities of this institution."

Mrs. Marshall is referred to by students as "Deane of Communications."

Rare book returned in library amnesty

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Hartford Public Library, granting amnesty from library fines to delinquent borrowers, has gotten back a rare book overdue for 30 years.

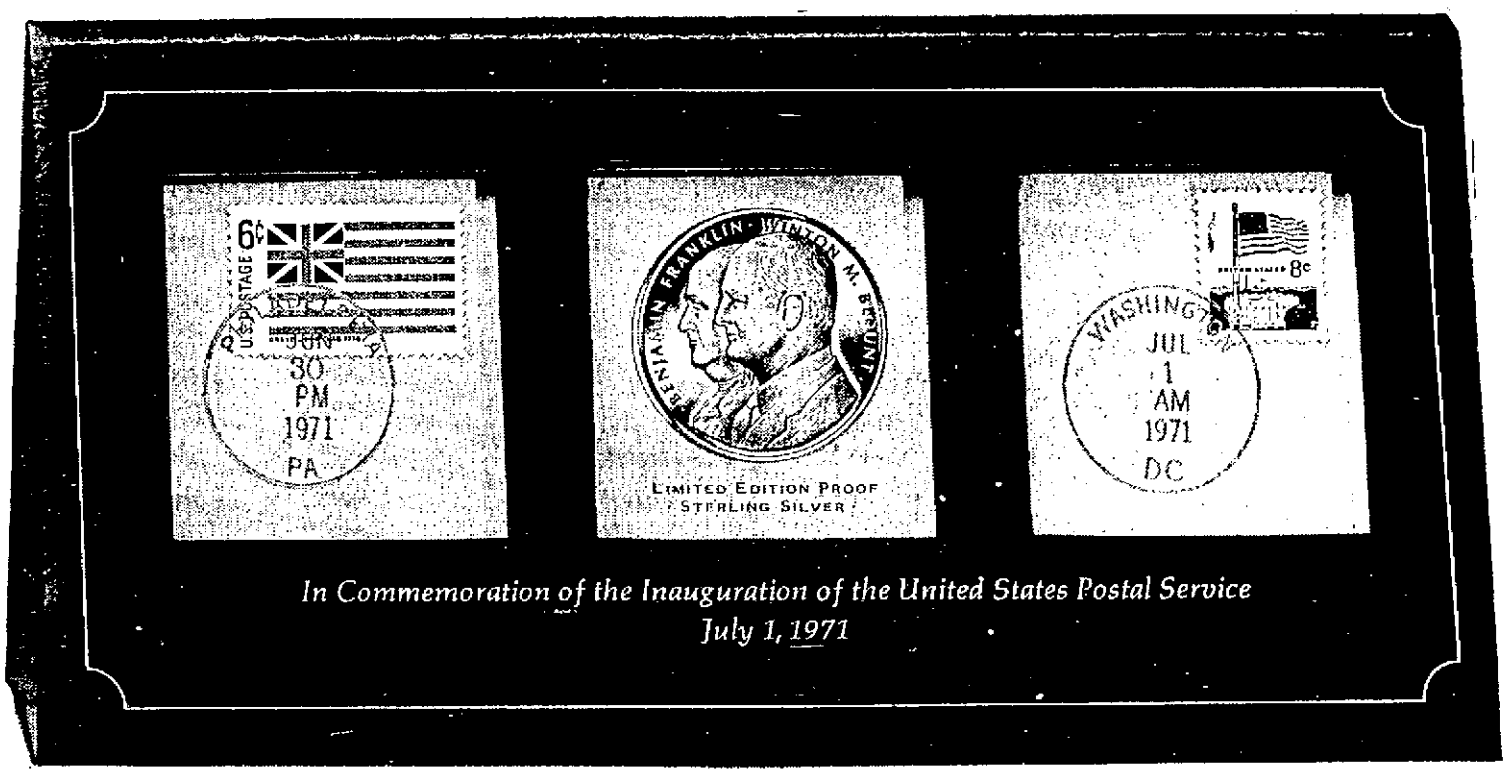

"Hartford in History," by Willis R. Twitchel — due July 28, 1941 — was returned to the library Friday. Librarians, who expected 2,500 overdue books back by the end of four "free days" Saturday, said the borrowers saved fines totaling $200.

The proof-quality medal will be struck in Solid Sterling Silver and will feature the portraits of both Benjamin Franklin and Winton M. Blount. The reverse of the medal will bear the seals of both the U.S. Post Office Department and the U.S. Postal Service together with the signatures of both Benjamin Franklin and Winton M. Blount.

Pupils to register on June 10

Pupils new to the Long Beach Unified School District will be pre-registered Thursday, June 10, at all local elementary schools. Parents may sign up their children for September by visiting any local elementary school from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Proof of age is required for all pupils enrolling in kindergarten and first grade. Several documents are acceptable for verifying the child's date of birth: a birth certificate, passport, baptismal certificate, or verification or notification of birth registration issued by city, county, or state health departments.

In addition, California laws require that children be immunized against polio and red measles (rubeola) before enrolling for the first time in a public school.

Parents not certain which school their child should attend are advised to call the elementary school closest to their homes for information.

Another preregistration day will be held early in September for new pupils not enrolled at this time. Pupils continuing their education at the same elementary school next year need not be preregistered.

Sen. Bayh appearance at beach

U.S. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., will be guest of honor at a public cocktail party, 8 p.m. until midnight June 10 in Carpenter's Hall, 8302 Atlanta Ave., Huntington Beach.

The 43-year-old Bayh is among the top half-dozen contenders for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

The party is being cosponsored by the Orange County Democratic Central Committee and the Third Friday Forum. There will be a no-host bar and light buffet.

Pact signed for Downey park plan

The California State Division of Highways and the City of Downey have signed right-of-way agreements to enable development of a wilderness park, to be located in the northeast part of the city.

The park will cover 24 acres to be acquired at a cost of $180,000. Development costs are estimated at $350,000.

Improvements envisioned by the Downey Park and Recreation Department include nature trails, bicycle trails, recreation building and nature museum, picnic facilities, children's play area and adult recreation including baseball diamonds. The park also will feature a man-made mountain and native California vegetation in keeping with a wilderness theme.

Land for the park will be acquired in two parcels. One 10-acre parcel will be leased from Southern California Edison Co.; the other 14 acres, consisting of excess land adjacent to the 605 Freeway, will be leased from the state.

Lightship to become nautical museum

PORT HURON, Mich. (UPI) — The last of 22 lightships that once were maintained on the Great Lakes was towed from Detroit to Port Huron Saturday to become a nautical museum.

The lightship Huron was granted to the city after some 4,000 letters from Port Huron schoolchildren asked the U.S. Coast Guard to give the vessel to their city.

Laws passed, millions spent—smog persists

By GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing Editor

The air of the Los Angeles Basin remains unclean, unhealthy, despite the expenditure of more than $60 million and the most rigid pollution control system in the nation.

The Los Angeles County Environmental Quality Committee will hold three public hearings June 14, 21, and 28 to examine the air pollution control problems here. These hearings were ordered by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors as a result of series of stories on air pollution published in the Independent, Press-Telegram.

The committee in its hearings faces a number of unanswered questions about air pollution in this basin, questions made more vital by new federal laws which could lead to federal takeover of current county air pollution control programs.

The Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District has said it cannot meet federal air quality standards.

Federal law says these standards, based on health effects, must be met within three years. And California must come up with a plan to meet these standards by the end of 1971.

The federal administrators have stressed the mandatory portions of the law, the "Clean Air Act Amendments of 1970," and suggested such drastic steps as curtailment of automotive traffic.

The federal law allows — in some cases it actually mandates — takeover of air pollution control programs when federal provisions are not met.

Thus, the first and central question faced by the committee is this:

How can Los Angeles County meet the definition of "healthy air" put forth in federal air-quality standards?

On the basis of both local medical testimony and the federal standards the air in the Los Angeles Basin is not healthy on most days.

The Technical Advisory Committee to the State Air Resources Board put the problem in another way when it said:

"A review of the recent data on the health effects of air pollutants indicates that major changes in air pollution control plans must be made, if levels of pollutants acceptable from a health standpoint are to be achieved or maintained."

The second question faced by the committee is:

How unhealthy is the air in the Los Angeles Basin?

Three different sets of standards exist for healthy air: federal, state and the alert standards of the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District.

It may be that comparing these standards is like adding apples and oranges, multiplying by bananas, and dividing by lemons, as has been stated by Robert Chass, head of the air pollution control district. But all of these standards for clean air are violated in the Los Angeles Basin.

Doctors are telling people by the tens of thousands to leave the basin because of unhealthy air. Excessively high numbers of deaths among heart patients have been recorded during high levels of carbon monoxide pollution and school children are ordered by school officials not to play during episodes of oxident pollution.

The various standards, and the present medical testimony on air pollution, raises another question:

Are the county air pollution alert standards strict enough?

Industry can be shut down and cars stopped by those alert standards, although such actions have never been taken.

The alert standards of the county are far less strict than those of the federal and state governments. They fall below the school children warning level and below a medical warning system now being studied by the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

No smog alerts are called when children are told not to play, and heart and respiratory patients should be warned to stay indoors.

But no matter what Los Angeles County does, its neighboring counties have an affect on its air, just as Los Angeles County has an effect on the air of its neighbors. The question is raised:

Is there an adequate and equitable system for regional air pollution control?

Air pollution knows no political boundaries and A. Alan Post, legislative analyst for the State Legislature noted:

"The Los Angeles County Air Pol-

MALCOLM EPLEY

DON'T throw in the towel yet on that try for legislative authority for a deserved "university" title for Long Beach State.

That's the advice of Sen. Joe Kennick. On a visit home this weekend Sen. Joe asserted there's still a good chance despite a rejection vote in the Senate.

It was silly, said Kennick (his word) to bring up the proposal on Thursday, when it lost 15-16. He noted that was a total of 31 votes in a 40-member Senate.

The Senator remarked that he and others had worked like beavers for the bill and added: "I think we can get the votes on reconsideration."

Such calm confidence needed to be recorded quickly.

AMONG drivers there lurks a nagging fear that there may be rules they don't know about and may innocently violate.

So it happened to Engle Randolph, the engineer, who was stuck with a $10 fine on a visit to San Diego.

His offense: Parking on a grade and failing to block the wheels of his car by turning them against the curb.

Randolph had never heard of the rule. He had the brakes set and the transmission in park and thought he had taken care of everything.

It's in the code. Sec. 22509 says local authorities may require that wheels be blocked against the curb on an unattended car parked on a grade exceeding 3 per cent in any business or residential district. Be warned that they enforce that at S.D., probably everywhere.

COUPLE more items about cars: Driving on L.B. Freeway, Alexandra Traver saw a flying sheet of newspaper hang up on the radio antenna of the car ahead. When traffic slowed the driver reached through his window, brought the paper in and proceeded to read it. In our business, we call that doing anything to save a dime.

And on L.B. Blvd. Friday morning a woman in a driver's seat, her hair in curlers, had a cigarette in one hand and was wiping the nose of a youngster beside her with the other. Who was driving?

IT'S CHERRY picking time again at Beaumont. Growers report a generally early season. The word that Tartarians and Bings are already ripe will stir the interest of the many people around here who go to the San Gorgonio Pass area every year to take advantage of "pick yourself" fun and prices.

The groves, where fruit quality is unusually good this season, are located in the northern part of Beaumont and in Cherry Valley, three miles north. For those who can do it, week-day visits are recommended. Take your own containers and have a good time.

BARBARA Mitchell, SP4, is editor of Star and Missile, the Fort MacArthur paper. In the current issue she has a post-Memorial Day editorial, concluding with these quote-worthy paragraphs:

"And so goes the cycle of American patriotism . . . from holiday to holiday . . . parade to parade. The faces of America once more become hidden in offices and the spark of unity is lost in the headline news about murders, rapes and thefts.

"There's something wrong . . . Our Old Glory has been through a lot and the trying times presented today are taking the glory out of her . . . she seems just OLD.

"To stand and remain standing we as a nation must unite, we as a people must think American and support the ideals upon which this nation was founded . . . we've got to put some 'new' into our 'Old Glory.'"

EVEN PET TARANTULA

Pet day fills park with odd animals

"Every dog must have his day."—Swift.

Not only dogs, but cats, guinea pigs, snakes, rabbits, birds, fish and silk worms had their day at the Long Beach Recreation Department's 45th annual Pet Show Saturday at Bixby Park.

The show, open to young pet owners from grades 1 through 9, drew 150 participants and 500 spectators. The park began looking like Noah's Ark at 10 a.m. Dogs seemed to be the most popular pet, and there were all kinds, from Russian wolfhounds to poodles.

Among the unusual pets was an iguana, a tarantula, a shark and silk worms.

Children without pets were also able to participate in the show through a picture and poetry contest about animals. Entries were submitted last week, and the best were displayed at the show.

Mike Dale, 10, of Lakewood, could pass for one of the "beat generation" poets with his description of his undefined pet:

"Her name is DU. It stands for double ugly . . . She will chew on people who wear green clothes because she thinks it is lettuce."

The pet show was judiciously planned by Rich Lawrence, senior recreation leader at Bixby Park. He carefully kept the dogs and cats at opposite ends of the park, but a cat got loose and headed toward the canine area. The cat hastily retreated when she found herself facing some 50 barking dogs.

There were other encounters. A squirrel monkey, owned by 9-year-old Constance Cantara of Lakewood, grabbed at a pile of leaves, thinking she would have a quick snack. Her appetite was dulled when she discovered a boy's pet snail buried in the leaves.

All the pets appeared loved and well cared for, but a few got the beauty queen treatment. Christine Morgan, 7, of Long Beach took the tulle off her Easter basket and fashioned a blue ballet costume for her cat, Chris. A Shetland pony belonging to 8-year-old Mary Jane Gard of Long Beach, had her mane braided and decorated with daisies.

Mary Jane got her pony as a gift as did 9-year-old Mark Stevens, of Long Beach.

"On Christmas, I went into the living room and found a boa constrictor in a cage by the tree," Mark said. "I always wanted a snake."

A crowd pleaser was a year-old tarantula owned by Rob Haddix, 15, of Long Beach. Rob let the hairy spider crawl on his hands.

Most of the youngsters received ribbons for their pets. Sweepstakes winner was the pony, Precious, owned by Mary Jane Gard. The two runnersup were a 4-inch eel, owned by 10-year-old Steve O'Niel of Long Beach and a blue jay owned by 11-year-old Randy Gaffney of Long Beach.

Seal Beach oil curb repeal hit

The Seal Beach Council for Environmental Concern will plead with the city council Monday to delay the repeal of two ordinances designed to control offshore oil drilling.

Thomas C. Brady, chairman of the antipollution council, said that the city council has already had one reading for a repeal of the ordinances that regulate and restrict oil drilling in the three-mile offshore region.

Brady said recalls in the beach city have created a new majority among the City Council and that the new majority is seeking to set aside the restrictive drilling ordinances.

These ordinances, Brady said, are still under study by the city's own Environmental Quality Control Board and the state attorney general's office and a repeal of the two laws at this time "is premature."

"We are in hopes that the city Council can be persuaded to delay repeal of these laws until the legal review is completed," he said. "To repeal a law before it has been subjected to legal scrutiny denies the people any real protection against elements which would contaminate the coastal area."

Standard Oil of California, which holds drilling permits in the offshore areas of Seal Beach is cooperating with both the Environmental Quality Control Board and the attorney general's office in these studies, Brady said.

Seal Beach is the first city in the nation to take action to control offshore drilling.

Basin water code to be set

Far-reaching standards of water quality in the Santa Ana River Basin are expected to be adopted Wednesday by the Santa Ana Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The board will hold special meeting at 9:30 a.m. in Orange City Hall council chambers on regulations which will affect millions of persons living in three counties — and be a guide for future water quality required for domestic, agricultural and industrial use.

Minor revisions were proposed at previous hearings; some of them are due to be approved, it was learned.

Generally, however, the water quality standards are so restrictive that these will be requirements:

—Tertiary treament of all sewage effluent discharged into the Santa Ana River, to bring the waste flow to potable standards.

—No discharge of brines to the ground from regenerative water-softening conditioners.

—Prohibit all animal waste, both liquid and solid, from reaching surface streams, thus imposing new regulations on dairies and poultry farms.

—Establish limits on agricultural use for fertilizers and irrigation water.

—Discourage the use of boron-containing detergents and laundry products.

—Require all sewer agencies to adopt sewer ordinances to control pollution.

—Encourage, through strict regulations, the consolidation of numerous sewage-treatment facilities and their upgrading to provide better waste water treatment processes.

The regulations are so restrictive as to permissible mineral content of water, that they would virtually prohibit expansion of agriculture in Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties if Colorado River water is used.

The water quality control board has already adopted a policy of "minimizing" use of water imported from the Colorado, and called for emphasis on use of Northern California water.

Compton changes coaches

"It's sad to see it all end," head coach Bill Armstrong of Compton High School told Independent, Press-Telegram sports writer Ken Pivernetz.

What is ending is Armstrong's career as a white coach of championship black basketball teams at Compton.

Since Compton Principal Aaron Wade says he is barred by school district rules from discussing his decision, we cannot judge for certain whether Armstrong is telling the whole truth when he says he was apparently "caught in the middle of a racial situation."

OUR GUESS, though, is that Armstrong's story is pretty much accurate — that the principal was faced with a junior varsity coach who felt his program was neglected by Armstrong and that the principal argued that Armstrong had lost control of his teams.

Armstrong does not deny that on one occasion he did lose control when two players tore up a locker room after a loss. "No one, including Mr. Wade, could reach them then," Armstrong says. That is probably right, and it would be hard for anyone to say whether it was Armstrong's failure that no one reached them earlier to promote a spirit of sportsmanship that would have averted the incident. In general, the evidence is apparently that Armstrong did have control of his players and that they respected him just as he respected them.

It is sad, as Armstrong said, to see it all end. Regrettably, it is not surprising. Most black teams probably would prefer black coaches. Similarly, we are afraid, most white teams would prefer white coaches.

SINCE THE RELATIONSHIP between coach and players is far closer than the relationship between other teachers and their students, it does something wonderful for race relations when a team and coach of different races can work together harmoniously. We are sorry things didn't work out at Compton. We hope bitterness on both sides will be minimal.

We hope, too, that prospects for success — for Bill Armstrong, the Compton teams and all of us who must end racial animosities in this land — are bright.

Reform to unload the Chief's lap

"The buck stops here," was the feisty boast of a president in another era.

Today, a generation later, the major predicate of President Nixon's proposal to reorganize the nation's government is that too many bucks arrive at the presidential desk.

Considering society's restless reach for SST and moonshot living, it's passing strange the plan for a new and efficient roster in federal Cabinetry should lie there so flat and listless.

Not really strange — we have this hang-up on tradition, forefathers and chiseled maxims.

Nixon's redone Cabinet would keep State, Defense, Treasury and Justice. The eight other posts would be consolidated into four super agencies. They would be Departments of Human Resources, Natural Resources, Economic Development and Community Development.

ARCHITECT OF the reform plan is Roy L. Ash, president of Litton Industries Inc. Government not only should be restructured, says Ash. It must be and can be. The plan's thrust, he says, is toward moving actual decision making closer to the real problem and the agency involved.

Government functions, under the new system, would be grouped by major purpose. Duplication and overlapping jurisdictions in existing Cabinet posts are unbelievable. Not only that — they're adversary. The departments, Ash explains, have been created with basic emphasis on their distinctions.

Thus we have a Labor Department to reflect a distinction, an opposition to business. "Agriculture was created in a sense of recognizing the opposition of agriculture to industry. Small Business Administration reflects the opposition or the contrary interests of small and large," says Ash.

"Even in the social programs we've identified rural and urban as being in opposition. We must create structures that emphasize the interdependencies rather than their distinctions."

ASH CONTENDS that we don't really have effective Cabinetry because the President, in the last analysis, becomes the Secretary of Defense, or of State, or of any number of secretariats. For the simple reason that the system does not allow independent decisions. And finally the whole dispute or decision is laid on the president's desk.

There are your "too many bucks."

Forty-one independent agencies now report directly to the president. The number would be cut to 27 under reorganization.

There are now 170 separate lines of responsibility between government personnel in the field and personnel in Washington. Reorganization would cut that number to 40. And it would delegate substantially more responsibility to the field organizations of the major departments, Ash says. Policy would be made in Washington but decisions would be made in the field.

OPPONENTS to the so-called super agencies say HEW is even now unmanageable. So how much more unwieldy if tucked into a larger department?

HEW is unmanageable, Ash says, because the secretary "has one or two hands tied behind his back, denied adequate staff at the secretarial level. Many of its functions are interlaced with functions of other departments. All are responsible so nobody is responsible.

A larger barrier to reform is distilled in the single word — power, Ash says.

The real battle, he contends, is the issue of Cabinet functions paralleling the committee structure of Congress. In these committees, "power is revered perhaps more than in the executive."

Bob Houser

POLITICAL EDITOR

The plan envisions a decentralization in which main departments listen to 10 regional forums in the nation. Primary decision making would occur at the regional or sub-regional level.

In a word, says Ash, there would be more listeners. "Too many people are bringing their problems to the boss."

It is suggested: The old game of buck passing may have overloaded the president but at least it brought problems to his attention.

To which Ash responds, "There does not need to be formalized mechanisms to make sure that every secretary of the department or assistant secretary or division head must bring to the President's attention a certain class of issues.

"The very nature of a government exposed to the public brings to the President's attention those matters that require his personal intervention. He need only read the daily newspaper to know whether there's something that maybe should have been brought to his attention and wasn't."

"AFTER ALL THE PUBLICITY, ARE YOU SURE WE CAN GET A FAIR TRIAL?"

Letters to the editor

Harry Plymouth Praised

NOTE: The following letter in defense of his deceased brother, Harry Plymouth, was translated from notes in "Autolese" furnished the writer. Harry Plymouth was born in 1948, and apparently passed away some time ago due to illness brought on by neglect.)

EDITOR:

In Southland Magazine section of your newspaper, a wiseacre named Sutton ridiculed my brother, Harry. I consider his feeble attempts to be funny an affront to Harry's memory. He is put in a pitiful light because his masters and mistresses did not properly care for him. (Harry often wrote me of his troubles and often mentioned that jerk, Sutton, in his letters.) When operating in a mild climate such as we have in California there is no reason why, if one of us is properly taken care of, we could not still be performing effectively. I should know—I am today doing the job I was created for and doing it well. I, too, first saw the light of day in 1948; but then, I was fortunate in avoiding such clods as your man Sutton.

Ironically, in the same magazine section a picture appeared of some of today's foreign invaders as they were lined up on the docks in Long Beach. Let me tell you, Sir, those toys cannot compare with Harry and me. Had they gone through the experiences Harry did, they would have already been reincarnated three or four times.

As to your stupid vassal's remarks about Harry not being able to keep up with freeway traffic, that may well have been true in his case because of mistreatment and abuse; but it wasn't because of our design or ability. I can still move along in good shape and have no trouble maintaining the lawful speed limit. It is ridiculous to have a capacity for speed of one hundred miles an hour when all you will get is trouble and danger when you attain it. The creators of Harry and me were more concerned with safety, simplicity, and getting from one place to another safely than they were with gimmicks, speed and power. It doesn't take an Einstein to find out what is wrong with me when I get sick—any old mecahnic can set my bones, operate, if necessary, and check my pulse.

Look again at the picture of Harry. Note the solid bumper, the grill work (even though dented), and the overall balanced appearance of my dear departed brother. Compare him to the underslung, grotesque, and often flimsy excuses of our race now clogging up the streets. Harry took jolts that would permanently put most of these modern tin cans out of circulation. (Check with Mr. Nader on this.) We have distant relatives, nephews and cousins, ten, fifteen, and twenty years younger than I am, who are piled up in junk yards awaiting destruction.

I've been painted three times in addition to my original coat. I've been over deserts, across mountains, and in ice and snow. I'll continue to serve my master and mistress as long as I can. You'd be surprised how often someone asks my owners if I am for sale. Makes me feel pretty damn good!

More nuclear subs needed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A recent report of the congressional atomic energy committee warns that growing Soviet sea power could threaten the United States with "either war or humiliation."

White House optimism over a vague "breakthrough" in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks did not square with the committee report or accompanying comments by Vice Adm. Hyman Rickover. The committee concluded the Soviet Union has more nuclear submarines than the United States and is building more than three times as many each year.

Clark Mollenhoff

"They have . . . 355 submarines," the report said. "More than 92 are nuclear-powered. The U.S. force level is 142 submarines, 92 of which are nuclear-powered."

RICKOVER BLAMED some civilians in the Defense Department. He said these men "are not living in the real world."

"Thanks to their isolated and specialized education," Rickover said, "they know little about practical life, while arrogance and conceit about their own abilities are boundless."

The committee also criticized the Defense Department, and declared: "The committee does not understand why the built-in bias against nuclear submarines continues to be permitted — bias against the weapon which is affording us the most powerful deterrent to war."

Admiral Rickover's testimony contained this comment:

"Now you may be able to fool the American people through public relations, but you can't fool our enemies that way. As a result of the technological developments and vast increases of the Soviet navy, the United States is now vulnerable to Russian pressure in a way quite without historic precedent."

PRESIDENT NIXON would be well advised to read the report along with the acid comments of Rickover on the hazards in dealing with the military bureaucracy.

The President might find some lessons that would be applicable to the White House bureaucracy.

Top Democrats slur Reagan, Younger in ugly attacks

SACRAMENTO — Some 17 months remain until the 1972 general elections, but the tone of the coming campaigns is already being set.

Color it ugly!

The tone is being set by Democrats, who are off and running early in their bid to capture the presidency and, along the way, strengthen their majorities in Congress and in the State Legislature.

NOT ONLY ARE the Democrats making statements which are unpleasant on their face, the statements are inaccurate or, at least, unsubstantiated.

Birch Bayh, the ambitious young senator from Indiana who would like to run against President Nixon next year, started the unpleasantness two weeks ago during a visit to Sacramento.

Bayh recited a compendium of charges California Democrats have been making in recent years, particularly that the governor is more dedicated to keeping the welfare pot boiling so he can retain his white knight image than he is in actually trying to solve the problem.

That charge, which Democrats back up

Bob Schmidt

VIEW FROM OUR STATE BUREAU

by pointing to the continued inefficiency of the state Social Welfare Department, over which the governor has jurisdiction, is ugly, but probably comes within the area of partisan propriety.

BUT THEN THE senator added the charge, infrequently hurled by even the most partisan Democrats, that Reagan is deliberately attempting a violation of the law. That is something else altogether.

Reagan used the tactic himself, shortly after he took office, when he charged that the administration of former Gov. Edmund G. Brown had "looted" the California treasury.

Looting is a crime, of course, and if the governor had evidence to support his charge he should have presented it. Or he should not have made the charge.

Although in the years since the governor had frequently assailed the motives and the integrity of those who disagreed with him, he has never again been quite so careless with his language.

Now comes a presidential aspirant using the same tactic.

BAYH WENT ON to accuse Reagan of "saying that the welfare rolls are filled with lazy men and women who do not want to work."

Although most Democrats believe the governor thinks that, he has not actually said it in public. Pressed for evidence that Reagan had made such a public statement, Sen. Bayh was unable to provide any.

Then on Thursday of this week state Democratic chairman Charles T. Manatt, again in a Capitol press conference, accused Attorney General Evelle J. Younger of making a formal ruling based on political considerations rather than an unbiased interpretation of the law.

Younger, Manatt said, had ruled that 18-to-21-year-olds who would be eligible to vote in federal, and possibly state, elections next year must register from the homes of their parents rather than the place of their current residence.

This, of course, would require away-from-home college students and other emancipated young people to go home, register, go back to school or wherever, and vote by absentee ballot.

The ruling does not seem logical—military personnel, for instance, may vote where they live, even if it is a temporary residence—but to charge that the ruling made by Younger, a Republican and a gubernatorial aspirant, was different than it would have been if he were a Democrat or if Republicans rather than Democrats figured to benefit from the youthful registration, is a serious charge.

IT MIGHT BE TRUE, as just about anything might be true. But to impugn a man's ethics without some substantiation is itself revealing of an ethical deficiency.

Manatt, later in his statement, said that because of actions like the attorney general's "it is little wonder that our younger citizens are so cynical about government."

Citizens of all ages are cynical about government, probably mostly because they are sick and tired of the wealth of irresponsible talk and the dearth of accomplishment.

Lessons of semantics

The emotionally healthy person is not made uncomfortable or unhappy by the fact that he does not know all the answers. Since the map is not the territory, knowledge about an event is never the event itself. So nobody ever will know all the answers. The sane person can accept this fact. As Abraham H. Maslow wrote in "Motivation and Personality":

Samuel I. Hayakawa

"Our healthy subjects are uniformly unthreatened and unfrightened by the unknown, being therein quite different from average men. They accept the unknown, they are comfortable with it, and often are even attracted by it. To us Frenkel-Brunswick's phrase, 'they can tolerate the ambiguous.' . . .

"Since for healthy people, the unknown is not frightening, they do not have to spend any time laying the ghost, whistling past the cemetery, or otherwise protecting themselves against danger. They do not neglect the unknown, or deny it, or try to make believe it really is known . . . They do not cling to the familiar, nor is their quest for truth a catastrophic need for certainty."

AND THIS NEXT sentence by Maslow I have always found especially attractive: "The fully-functioning personality can be, when the objective situation calls for it, comfortably disorderly, anarchic, vague, doubtful, uncertain, indefinite, approximate, inexact or inaccurate."

As the general semanticists have taught, no two individual things or persons or events are ever identical. Everything in the world is in process, with changes occurring constantly. Alfred Korzybski (1879-1950), the founder of general semantics, taught that most of our errors of evaluation arise from ignoring the differences between individuals of the same class name (policeman A is not policeman B), and from ignoring the changes that occur over time (policeman A, 1969, is not policeman A, 1971).

Another name for the same principle in general semantics literature is "extensionality," which means fact-mindedness, as opposed to "intensionality," which means stereotyped thinking. Intensionality is illustrated by the common male belief that "A woman driver is a woman driver."

The extensional, or fact-minded person is highly aware of things, people and events at factual, nonverbal levels, where everything is in process and everything changes from moment to moment, from day to day.

In Carl Rogers' essay, "Towards a Theory of Creativity," which appears in his volume, "On Becoming a Person," he talks about "openness to experience," which means almost exactly what Korzybski meant by extensionality. "The creative person," Rogers says, "instead of seeing things in predetermined categories ('trees are green,' 'college education is a good thing,' 'modern art is silly') is aware of this existential moment as it is, and therefore he is alive to many experiences which fall outside the usual categories (in this light this tree is purple; this college education is damaging, this modern sculpture has a powerful effect on me)."

MASLOW HAS another way of saying this: "Self-actualized people have a wonderful capacity to appreciate again and again, freshly and naively, the basic goods of life, with awe, pleasure, wonder, and even ecstasy, however stale these experiences may be for other people. Thus, for such people, every sunset is as beautiful as the first one, any flower can be breathtakingly lovely even after he has seen a million flowers."

Maslow says that self-actualizing people are extensional in their social relationships: "They can be and are friendly with anyone of suitable character regardless of class, education, political belief, race or color. As a matter of fact it seems as if they are not even aware of the differences which often mean so much to other people."

In other words, the self-actualizing person experiences other people at the factual level, rather than at the level of titles and names and labels: to the specific Fred Cassidy or Jimmy Nakamura, or Irv Goldstein, rather than to "general manager," or "Republican," or "postal clerk."

BECAUSE OF A certain child-like quality of perception and feeling in self-actualized people, they live by a structure of ends and means different from that of most people. With most people you cannot tell which of their activities are ends and which are means. They play golf in order to keep fit in order to work better in order to be able to pay their golf-club fees.

The U. S. flag according to Miss Burke

From behind it was difficult to tell at first which was a boy and which was a girl. Both were wearing long bleached hair. Their jeans were identical—red and white stripes with white stars on a blue field. The one on the left seemed to display more stars. It was only because her seat was broader. That's where the action was and that's where the stars waved.

And I remembered a day in Miss Burke's sixth grade civics class when we stood up to face the flag in the southeast corner of the room.

I pledge allegiance to the flag
And to the republic for which it stands
One nation indivisible with liberty and justice
For all

When it was first published in Youth's Companion in 1892 the salute went to "my flag" and, in some versions, "our flag" and, 30 years later, "the flag of the United States of America." Congress in 1954 added after "one nation" the words "under God."

But on this June day in Miss Burke's civics class it was beautifully simple. (In the primary grades the children SANG the pledge. Who could sing it today?) We could see it was the flag of the United States of America. And we knew it was under God. There was a world war on and God was surely on our side.

I CAN'T RECALL everything Miss Burke said, but I remember the theme and the spirit of it. She said, in words similar to these: "You have just pledged allegiance to the flag. And you have made the same pledge every day. But I wonder if you really know what you have been saying."

She imitated our singsong chant. "Withlibertyand justice forall . . . Do we really have liberty and justice for all? No, of course not."

To let that sink in she paused so long that there was an uneasy murmur in the classroom. (Eddie Linton said later, "For a minute I thought maybe she was a German spy.")

"No society in the history of the world has had a perfect system of justice. But no nation has tried harder than ours. And since you will be on summer vacation when Flag Day comes, this seems a good time for us to talk about our heritage."

MISS BURKE TOLD us about the resolution adopted June 14, 1777, by the Second Continental Congress at

Sterling Bemis

Philadelphia. She made us copy it down:

"Resolved: that the flag of the United States be made of thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field representing a new constellation."

Miss Burke retold familiar tales of Betsy Ross and conjured up a vision of George Washington crossing the Delaware with Old Glory furled against the frigid breeze. Years later I learned these were myths. But Miss Burke's faith in the flag and the republic was no myth. Both, she made it clear, were born of revolution. And both, strangely, are scorned by today's revolutionaries . . .

. . . The first standards were effigies of emperors or images of gods, birds or animals. The Roman Legion carried the eagle figure, which was resurrected by Napoleon. The standard of the three lions was carried in the Crusades by Richard the Lion Hearted. Originally they were leopards. Mohammed's men flew the black banner of vengeance. The green of Islam came from the Fatamid dynasty. When the Turks adopted the crescent they revived the Assyrian sacred symbol of the 9th Century B. C. The golden fleurs-de-lis were the lilies of France.

THE STANDARD OF the monarch originally marked the "castle, saluting base, tent or ship where he was actually present." The fall of his standard meant defeat.

The Stars and Stripes and the tricolor of France were revolutionary in more ways than one. They represented the birth of nations rather than the rallies of lords and kings. They represented the unity of rebelling citizens storming the citadels of the monarchs.

Flags seldom have an easy birth and their long umbilical cords are tied to the past. The Stars and Stripes of the Second Continental Congress went through long evolution and was slowly adopted by units of the Army. There is no evidence it was flown on the battlefields of the Revolution.

The first flag of the united regiments of the Colonies was unfurled Jan. 1, 1776, "in compliment to the United Colonies" on the day George Washington took command of the new continental army. Since the colonies had not yet declared independence, the Grand Union or Continental flag carried the British cross of St. George and St. Andrew on a blue field, along with 13 red and white stripes. In most revolutionary battles the flags of the states rallied the troops — a pine tree was the Massachusetts symbol and New York's flag carried a black beaver on a white background.

The Stars and Stripes ensign was flown by John Paul Jones on the Bon Homme Richard. There was a legend that the flag incorporated the coat-of-arms of Washington, but there was only a coincidence of some similarity. In truth, the British East India Company in the Eighteenth Century flew a flag with a Union Jack and 13 red and white stripes.

Miss Burke told us of this speech attributed to Washington:

"We take the stars from heaven, the red from our mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her, and the white stripes shall go down to posterity representing liberty."

THERE IS NO PROOF the general ever said this, although Miss Burke certainly believed it. Miss Burke also thought we owed allegiance to the flag — "not because we are a perfect nation, but because we have tried harder than others to be one."

Miss Burke saluted the flag because it represented a union of peoples in common cause at the long end of the evolutionary road from the standards of the barons who pressed their serfs into battle.

When Miss Burke read the resolution of June 14, 1777, of the Second Continental Congress, she knew what the founding fathers meant.

" . . . representing a new constellation."

IF OTHER ETHNIC groups can do it, Cousin Fuseloyle doesn't see why he shouldn't form an anti-defamation society to protest jokes about drunks.

HOW QUICKLY people forget. Just the other day we heard somebody ask, "Bonnie and Clyde who?"

THERE ARE THOSE who say television is not educational, but how about the philosophy students who learn from the beer commercials that you only go around once in life?

L.A.C. Says

By L.A. COLLINS SR.

Stop it, America, before it's too late

Because I so thoroughly agree with its presentation I reproduce an editorial from the Arizona Republic as follows:

Stop it, you anti-Americans! Stop criticizing everything and everybody and every motive and every action except your own. Stop constantly sniping at your government. What in the world is the matter with you? You have the most wonderful nation on earth, a nation that has gone to extraordinary lengths to uplift the poor, feed the hungry, comfort the afflicted and extend justice to everyone. Yet here you are, applauding the very people who degrade and mock America, who tell you how selfish and corrupt Americans are.

Your own eyes and your own common sense should tell you that in no other land, under no other system, is the individual more respected or better treated. Nowhere is a person as free to do what he wants with his life. Nowhere in the world, despite our occasional overemphasis on getting and spending, are charity and service to mankind more practiced or revered than right here in America.

FOR THE PAST couple of years you have allowed a small handful of hypocritical critics to flagellate us and our government.

Be realistic, America. Where is your sense of proportion? We aren't a debased or rotten nation. We have our share of criminal misfits, but most of us are pretty decent people — hard-working, law-abiding, God-fearing. All of us want a better life for ourselves and our children, and most of us want a better life for our neighbors too.

But this anti-Americanism is corrupting our national soul. It's having a harmful effect on our children, who are beginning to believe it. This false picture is making it easier for the haters, the doomsayers and the malcontents, those with the biggest mouths and the smallest consciences, to mislead and confuse us. It is twisting our values, making it difficult for our children to know right from wrong.

Thousands of American boys have been killed in Vietnam by being trapped in hamlets where men, women and children were paraded as villagers, when actually they were armed with Viet Cong Molotov cocktails, bombs and what have you. Our boys were trying to be decent and suddenly they found themselves completely surrounded by villagers armed to the teeth and destroying them.

BUT THE POOR bleeding hearts in America, these anti-American so-called patriots, instead of having any sympathy for our boys who, of course, had to fight back, felt sorry only for the old men and children who got hurt in the mixup.

Of course they would get hurt in that kind of a mess. We had a lot of boys killed in that action. The anti-Americans had no sympathy for the poor villagers who were simply used, innocently or otherwise, by the Viet Cong. This is war, make no mistake about it, but these anti-American loudmouths seem to believe we have no right to wage it in our own defense.

One U.S. senator actually said that American prisoners of war in Hanoi might as well just stay there, because they certainly wouldn't have been prisoners if they had had enough sense not to enlist for a useless and barbaric war. Well, the fact is they didn't enlist — they were drafted.

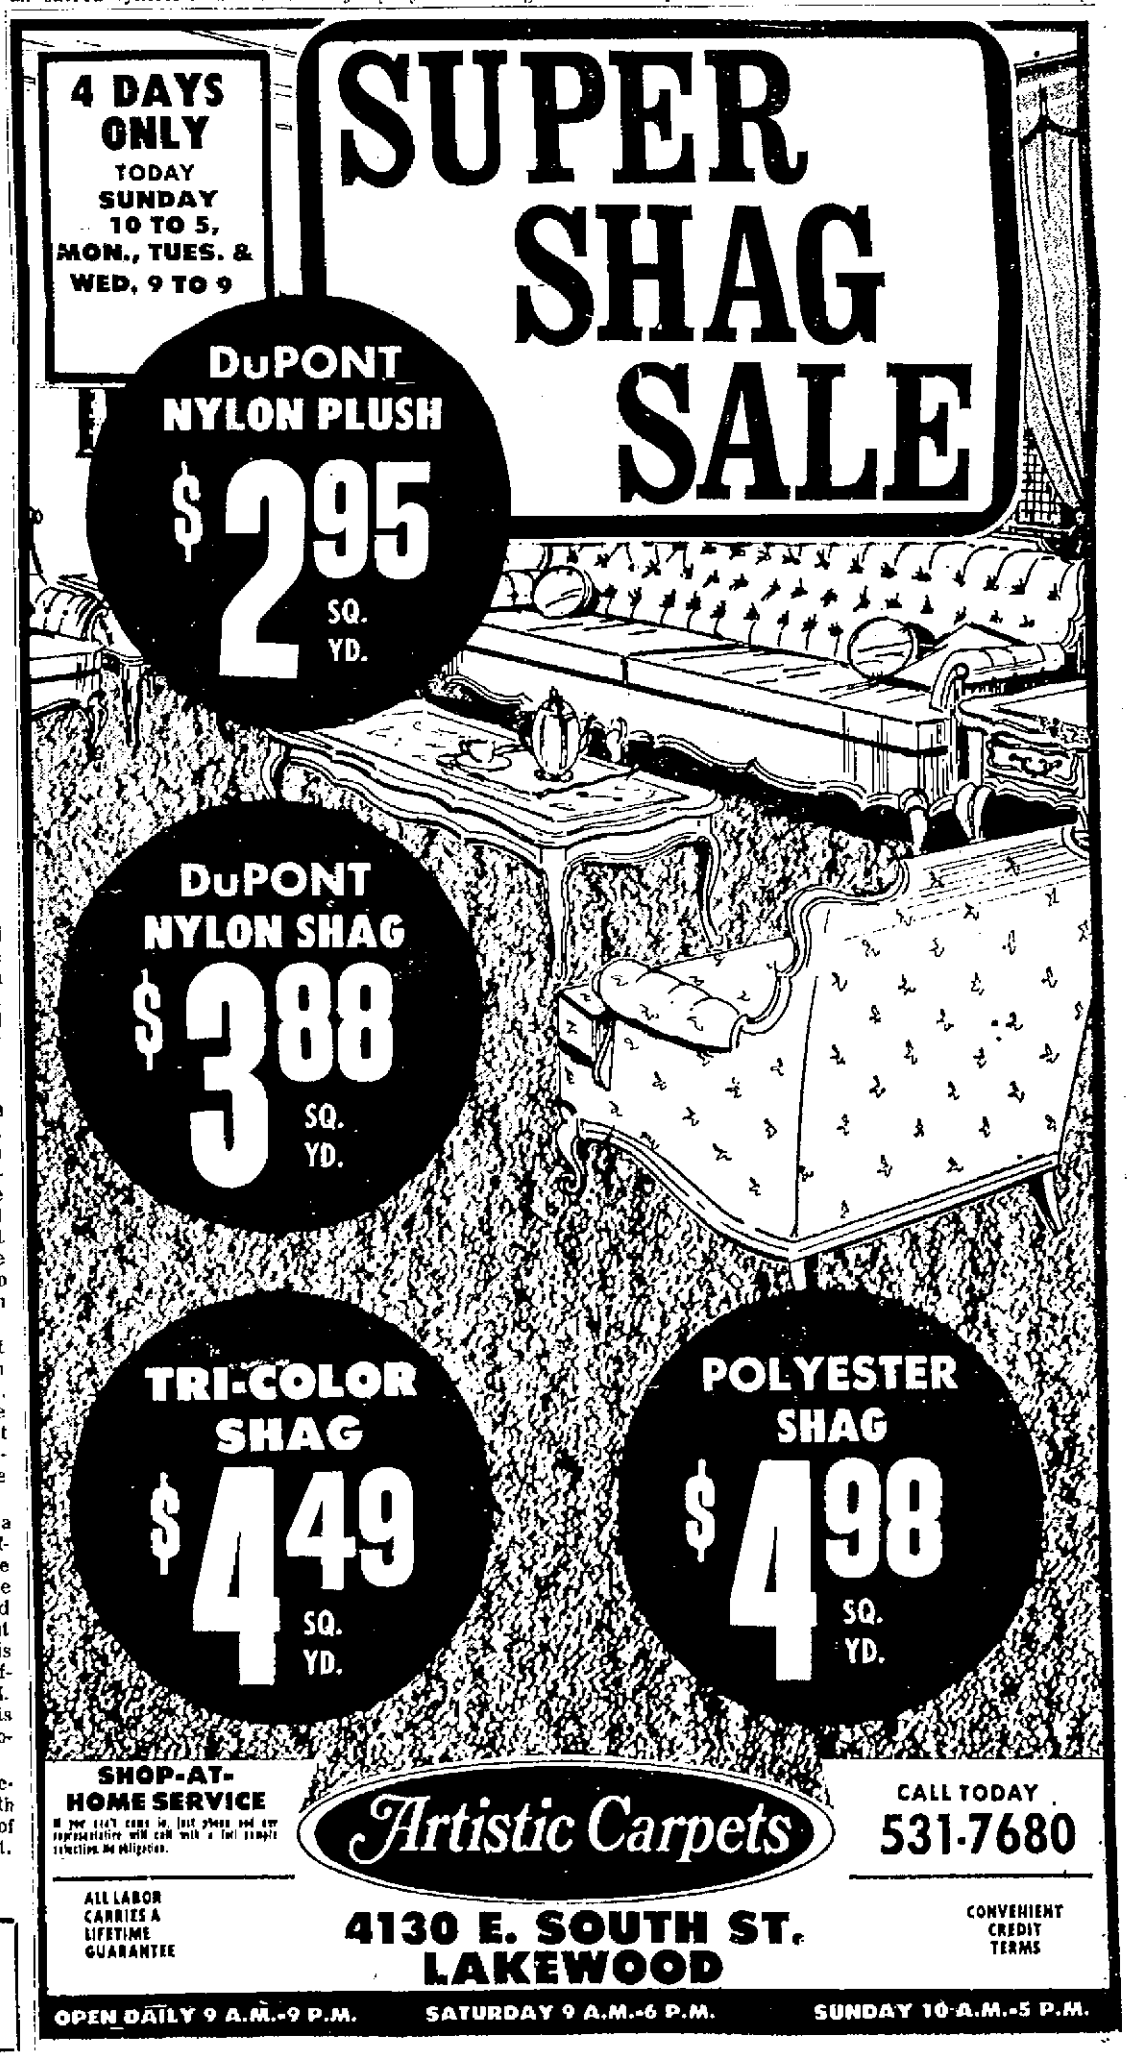

AND MANY OF THE very men who supported President John F. Kennedy when he went into Vietnam and who supported the Tonkin Resolution, later, when the war became unpopular, turned about-face and blamed the whole thing on President Lyndon Johnson. And now they are blaming it on President Nixon, who didn't have a single thing to do with starting this war.

But the very men who are loudest in their criticism of President Nixon and the present situation in Vietnam, which gradually is being solved, are the very ones who really helped start the whole mess. This is the worst display of national hypocrisy we have ever witnessed in this country.

It is unbelievable that so small a minority of Americans, these loudmouths, could create such a terrible atmosphere in this country. If it were not for the loudmouths, the world would know almost nothing about what is going on here, because it is so much more peaceful here, and safer, than any place else in the world. But to hear these bleeding hearts yell, you would think Russia is a Utopia compared to America.

Stop this anti-American rot. Because if you don't, America's youth will be consumed by the stench of this hypocritical rhetoric. Stop it, America, before it is too late!

ABC trustees happily listen to voice of youth

By ROBIN HINCH
Staff Writer

The ABC Unified School District is one of the first to heed the demand for a youthful voice.

For the second straight year the Board of Education invited a student representative from each of the two high schools in the district to act as ex officio board members, and all concerned seem delighted with the results.

"Board members in our district are thrilled with the kids," Edward O. Vail, assistant superintendent—special services said of Joe Hannan, Gahr High School student body president, and Jim Belter, president of the Artesia High School student body. "They're thoughtful, articulate and don't take this responsibility lightly."

Students are selected by their school principals and their appointments are approved by the student senate.

The school board decides to what extent students may participate. Students do not, for instance, take part in personnel matters, business items or executive sessions.

Students attend board meetings throughout the year and are requested to study carefully all agenda materials provided them before each meeting.

The student representatives are no less enthusiastic about the program than the school officials.

Gahr High School's Joe Hannan will graduate this month and plans to attend the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in political science and law.

"This is really a super good program," he enthused. "Board members ask for our advice on things and really listen to our opinons. It gives them a chance to know what the students are thinking.

"The only reason, I think, the board has gone against the student point of view in the past is that they haven't known what student views are. Now we're able to bridge that gap.

"I have been very impressed with the people on the board and with the way the board functions as a whole. They really have the students interests at heart, I don't get an impression of politics at all."

He said he feels the student representatives wield enough influence without having any vote. "If I voted I'd have to be directly responsible to the taxpayers, and I'm not ready to undertake that kind of responsibility."

"Our being on the board provides a direct channel from students to board members, and we can get things done. It saves us having to go through 16 different people before even having our item brought up before the board.

"I don't think I'd change the program at all. Any improvements would have to be made by me. For instance, I should publicize it more to the rest of the student body. Not many kids seem to know or care about the program, and that's really a shame."

Jim Belter, Artesia High School senior who plans to enter Cerritos College in the fall then transfer to Humboldt State College to do work in forestry, also is heartily in favor of students on the board.

"It's beneficial to both students and adults in the community," he said. "Communication is such a problem today. We need to take every step we can to get people together. It has helped students a lot to know that their views are being heard on the board.

"We're free to question any issue, and can bring up problems that we see in the schools. We can give the board a different perspective on things.

"I had no bias at all when I went on the board, and it's been an interesting experience to be involved in all the politics. It's a fascinating world — one I almost think I'd like to go into.

"The board is doing the best they can for the district. But of course they are torn, because the parents, not the kids, elected them, and their responsibility becomes a dual one.

"I realize I'm in sort of an ideal situtation. I can call a spade a spade because I won't be here next year and am not worrying about being re-eelcted.

"Although we're not looked down upon as students, I sometimes feel alienated being seated at the far end of the table. But when people come to the meetings and start unloading their guns at the board, I'm just as glad to be in my little corner.

"We'd like to help eliminate the problem of communication with students. We're looking for a way to tell all the students what's going on around them — to make them aware. Putting students on the school board is really a step in the right direction."

CARSON EVENT

Walk-a-thon to aid amputee a winner

Hundreds of Carsonites turned out for the Becky White walk-a-thon Saturday to assure the young woman, a double amputee, will have ample funds to compete in New York's National Wheelchair Olympics.

More than 150 persons actually marched, reported Carson Mayor John H. Leady — himself a participant — and another 100 from 15 civic and homeowners' group manned the 1-mile rest stops.

Exactly how much money was raised won't be known until Monday, Leady said. Each participant had several sponsors, he explained, and it will take a while to count it all.

In charge of the event was Miss Mary Lou Cavenaugh, Carson teen supervisor.

The crowd collected at Avalon boulevard and Watsoncenter Road and stepped off on the 10-mile march about 9:30 a.m. The last stragglers crossed the finish line about 2 p.m.

Leady and Councilmen Gil Smith marched six miles and Councilman John Junk eight.

So, said an accuser, for the last two miles none of the "so called leadership" was present.

"We had to get cleaned up for a council budget meeting," the footsore mayor replied in self defense.

Becky is planning to leave Wednesday, the mayor said.

CAR SALE TO BENEFIT SCOUTING

Twenty second-hand automobiles will be up for sale at a "Youth Auction" Saturday as a benefit for the Boy Scouts, Terry Takaki, program director for the Long Beach Area Council of the Boy Scouts, announced.

The event will be held at 2 p.m. in the parking lot at 45th Street and Atlantic Boulevard.

Takaki said a number of new and used car dealers have donated the automobiles and that all proceeds will go to the Scouts.

County board grapples with federal air rules

lution Control District spends about $4.5 million annually on air pollution control, while Orange County spend about $200,000 Los Angeles County completed 2,631 abatement actions in 1967, 2,264 actions in 1968, and 1,006 in the first half of 1969. Orange County in contrast had completed no court enforcement actions as of February 1970."

Similar records have been compiled by other counties in the Los Angeles air shed.

In addition San Bernardino and Riverside Counties argue strongly much of their air pollution comes from Los Angeles County, which this county claims is not the case.

In the San Francisco Bay Area, the air shed is governed by one district, applying the same rules district wide.

Two further questions are raised in this area:

First, is Los Angeles County responsible for the air pollution in Riverside and San Bernardino Counties?

Second, is a regional air pollution control district needed?

Both Los Angeles County and the State Air Resources Board have argued that air quality standards cannot be reached unless the automobile exhaust is controlled — now prerogative of federal law.

Tests have shown that the current crop of federal regulations for auto exhausts are not being met, raising this question:

Will automotive controls, now proposed by the federal government work? If not, what can Los Angeles County and the state of California do?

In addition should Los Angeles County install an alternative form of transportation, so that use of the auto can be limited in order to reach health air quality?

Two key reports, that of the Technical Advisory Committee to the State Air Resources Board, and that of Post, offer at least a start to finding the answers to some of these questions.

Suggested seven drastic

The advisory committee changes which might clean up the air:

—Limit the number and uses of autos, trucks and aircraft in the basin;

—Reduce pollution from those sources to levels below those now proposed;

—Remove or make essentially pollution free all industries and power plants in the basin;

—Develop a comprehensive nonpolluting urban transport system;

—Limit population growth;

—Limit commercial and industrial growth;

—Restrict pollution from commercial, agricultural, domestic and recreational sources.

Post takes a different view.

He believes that strict air quality standards cannot be met is the basin.

"If the standards are both economically and technically infeasible of accomplishment, they cannot be enforced nor can they serve as stepping stones to clean air. They are merely long-term goals which are expected to be achieved someday but there is no stated means to accomplish them," Post said.

The federal government requires under law that these standards be met.

It is the job of the Los Angeles Environmental Quality Committee to find the answers as to how clean air can be achieved in the Los Angeles Basin.

Dick Gregory praises L.B. training plan

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Social satirist Dick Gregory — visibly thinned by a month-long fast for peace — said Saturday a Long Beach self-help vocational training program exemplified the success which government programs should attain.

In a brief visit to the Opportunities Industrialization Center, at 1325 Alamitos Ave., prior to his scheduled OIC benefit in Municipal Auditorium, Gregory also lampooned —and denounced — general politics and priorities in America.

Gregory, who has dropped from 150 to 119 pounds since he announced April 24 he would forego solid foods until the Indochina war ends, termed OIC "more than just being trained for a job. It's almost like a fellowship."

The OIC, funded by donations to serve ghetto residents in 90 American cities, is "the first community program that the community has respect for," Gregory said.

Speaking softly at first, Gregory's voice rose as he remarked that OIC's successes in training ghetto residents for employment has not been matched by the variety of government job-training programs.

Because of its self-help nature, he said, OIC should have served as a pilot program for the federal government when the first center was created in 1968.

Instead, said Gregory, the government rapidly funded dozens of untested programs, many of which are still floundering.

He also cited the creator of the OIC program, Rev. Leon Sullivan, as one of a few people "who I would feel comfortable with as President (of the U.S.) These people are statesmen only, not politicians."

The distinction between statesmen and politicians, he added is based on integrity.

"A man can be a great statesman until he seriously runs for office, and has to go into smoke-filled rooms to make deals with the big men," said Gregory. "Then he comes out a politician."

Inevitably, he added quips occasionally as he talked.

DICK GREGORY . . . At Long Beach OIC

"It was just awful in 1968 as a Peace and Freedom candidate at the violence-torn Chicago convention," Gregory recalled.

"I was the only presidential candidate. All the rest were just running for sheriff."

Political problems, said Gregory, are major contributors to "the great horror of this country. There are 44 million people in American who go to bed hungry every night — and we pay farmers millions of dollars not to plant."

But, he said, "there are a lot of decent people in America. They're just ignorant. Like the people who, if they knew they had cancer today, wouldn't be dead two years from now."

Teacher union chief: 'let's work together'

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

"Let's work together . . ."

So urged Teachers Association of Long Beach's newly-named, up-through-the-chairs president, Merel A. Glasgow, during a post-election interview.

The 43-year-old Millikan High math teacher's call for unity extended beyond his own 2,800-member organization.

When asked specifically what stance TALB might adopt toward the central school administration during his tenure, Glasgow said again: "We should work together."

"We should work together."

Not mentioned were current salary discussions between TALB and school district representatives. "We have a negotiating council," he said, "and I place full reliance on our team."

He did not, however, rule out "personal diplomacy"—direct presidential intervention should it appear necessary.

The organization—founded here in 1914—"will still continue to strive toward eliminating unilateral decisions, by the administration," Glasgow said. "There are fewer of these all the time."

Faculty transfers between schools, reportedly made without first consulting involved teachers, would rank high in any listing of pending grievances.

Another is delay in working out procedures for handling grievance actions brought by teachers. "This has been under discussion without any decision for too long," Glasgow said.

With salary talks still unresolved, a remaining area of disagreement centers around a questionnaire the district sent each teacher this spring.

TALB maintains that in asking teachers for their views on which educational programs should be "restored" with Save Our School funds, the district bypassed regular negotiating procedures.

District officials deny this intent, but TALB remains unhappy and threatens legal action.

Discussions of working and educational conditions were held in early spring as sessions between officials and the teachers' Certificated Employes' Council got underway. These meetings now deal basically with questions involving salaries and fringe benefits for next year.

By his own assessment, "more liberal than conservative" politically Glasgow said he believes teacher "strikes are not necessary" to achieve goals. "But I am not a middle - of - the - roader," he added emphatically.

To be sought in future dealings with the administration, he said, is "an atmosphere of mutual trust and respect."

(Outgoing President Glenn A. Erickson issued a similar statement following his election last spring. While major differences remain, two-way talks this past year indeed have been—in this and other observers' opinion—on a more relaxed plane.)

Glasgow recognized that unity—like charity and other virtues — begins at home.

"There has been, in recent years, a more unified TALB membership," he opined, "a membership willing to back a common cause."

Even so, a prime goal of the new chief's administration will be to "get more people involved in the work of the organization. The time is past when we can sit back and let others do it . . ."

"More grass-root involvement" will be sought in the Faculty Representative Council, TALB's policy-making body whose members come from all the district's schools, he said.

The dream, impossible or otherwise, is to create within the council a feeling of being a "House of Representatives" for all teachers.

Balcony collapses; 4 pedestrians killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The balcony of a building facing Beirut's main square collapsed Saturday, killing four pedestrians and injuring six others.

Norwalk C of C women to help teens find jobs

Members of the Women's Division of the Norwalk Chamber of Commerce will try to match high school age teen-agers and community jobs when the Norwalk Youth Employment Office opens Monday.

The nonprofit job center is in Suite 16 of Norwalk City Hall. Interested youths, 14 to 19, will be required to file an application available at the office.

No fees will be charged either to the student or the employer for the matching service.

Applicants will be hired on a first-come, first-served basis for such temporary one or two-day jobs as baby sitting, window washing, store inventory or yard work.

A Women's Division Committee, headed by Mmes. Herb Williams, Douglas Camp and Cecilia Burke, will supervise a volunteer staff of women who will operate the center five days a week from 9:30 to 3:30 p.m.

A full-time volunteer also will be contacting local businessmen to remind them of the student service and encourage them to use the available teen-agers.

"If the project is successful this summer, we hope to be able to keep the office open all year round," said Robert Eames, Norwalk Chamber of Commerce manager. "everyone in the community will benefit if the kids can be kept busy."

New park really is a Cinderella Lake

By DICK EMERY
Staff Writer

Too bad they won't name it Cinderella Lake.

The name would fit.

A magic wand ($900,000) changed an ugly swamp into a beautiful park.

But they're going to give it its official name next Sunday and the name is going to be Harbor Regional Park Lake.

The park — complete with pond — covers nearly 100 acres of lowland west of Wilmington, in an old drainage area named on old maps as Bixby Slough.

Cinderella's magic godmother transformed Cinderella in one second by swishing a magic wand. It took Los Angeles city officials eight years of off-and-on dickering, and a construction crew 21 months of hard work, to transform the swamp.

Most of the financing came from the 1964 State Bond Fund — $750,000 — and another $100,000 came from the Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund administered by the state.

City officials will open the transformed area at noon rites next Sunday. Hobby clubs will have a day-long program in the new recreation center.

Fiesta to celebrate finding of first Signal Hill oil well

Signal Hill will hold its annual fiesta all day June 26 at Hinshaw Park, Cherry Avenue and 21st Street.

The fiesta, which celebrates the hill's first oil strike in 1921, runs from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.

It will begin with rides, games and fiesta booths at the park. During the morning, there will be a Model T Club parade, visits by clowns from the El Bekai Shrine Temple and awards for best costumes.

A welcoming ceremony by the Chamber of Commerce will be held at 12:30 p.m. That will be followed by a barbecue dinner from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

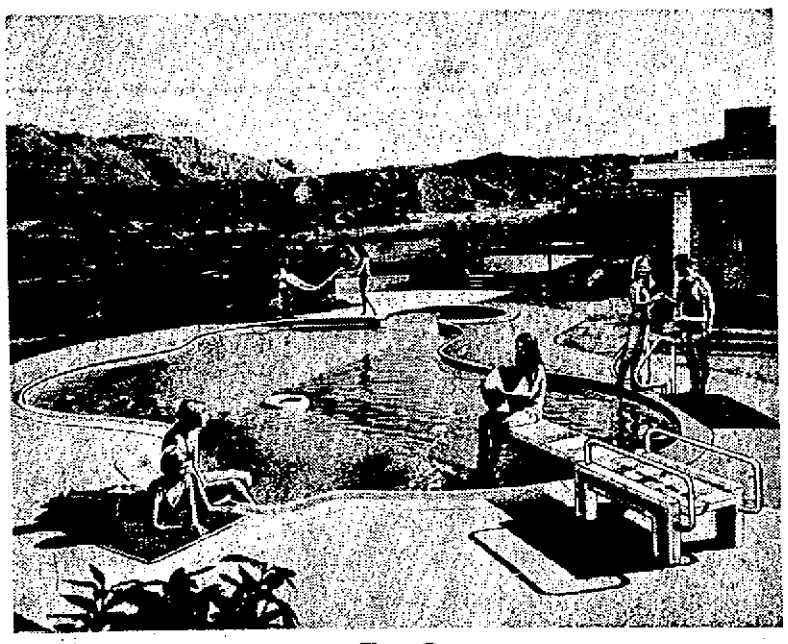

Entertainment from 4 to 8 p.m. will include The Old Time Fiddlers, Olympian Youth Dancers, a flame dancer and a girl's precision riding team.

The county fire department will exhibit a fire fighting procedures and equipment.

There will be mariachi music, a square dance exhibition and an art contest.

The Latin American club will have booths offering Mexican foods.

Square dancing will be held in the park's Community Center from 8 to 11 p.m.

New ship to cruise to Catalina

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

An all new 500-passenger motor vessel will be added to the fleet of Long Beach Catalina Cruises' cross-channel motor cruisers late this month, according to Mike Barone, manager.

The 132-foot craft will be christened the Long Beach Prince.

The double-decked, $750,000 craft, under construction since December 1970, is now nearing completion, Barone said.

Large tinted windows enclose the lower deck. The upper deck is partly enclosed. According to Barone the boat has a comfortable seating arrangement, padded benches, dimmer switches to control interior lighting, a snack bar, and sound system.

Interior decor is gold, red, and black.

The Long Beach Prince, built strictly for the run between Long Beach and Avalon, will also be used for sightseeing tours in Long Beach Harbor. The tours will be inaugurated in early July.

The new craft joins the company's two-boat fleet currently operating on a daily schedule to the island.

The Prince will depart at 9 a.m. from the terminal at 700 Panorama Drive on Pier J near the Queen Mary. Other departures are scheduled for 7:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

NEW JOB

Lt. Gen. Sam C. Phillips, who directed the Apollo program to its successful moon landing and who now heads the Air Force's Space and Missile Systems Organization (SAMSO) in El Segundo, has been appointed to the Space System Advisory Committee of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration where he will participate in planning future NASA space activities.

The festivities will include precision marching, formations, and a variety of marching band music to be capped off by a medley of favorite John Phillip Sousa tunes.

The public is invited to the admission free musical according to Dr. Charlotte Stevenson, coordinator of music for the district.

Teen faces death trial as adult

Seventeen-year-old Christopher "Gypsy" Gibboney, member of an alleged drug-oriented, devil-worshipping gang accused of two gruesome murders in Orange County, will be tried as an adult in Santa Ana Superior Court.

He sought a hearing in Juvenile Court, but Judge Robert P. Kneeland ruled that Gibboney was old enough for criminal court trial partly because of the seriousness of the charge against him.

He is accused of the June 3, 1970, knifing of schoolteacher Florence Nancy Brown, 31, whose body was dismembered in weird sacrificial rites.

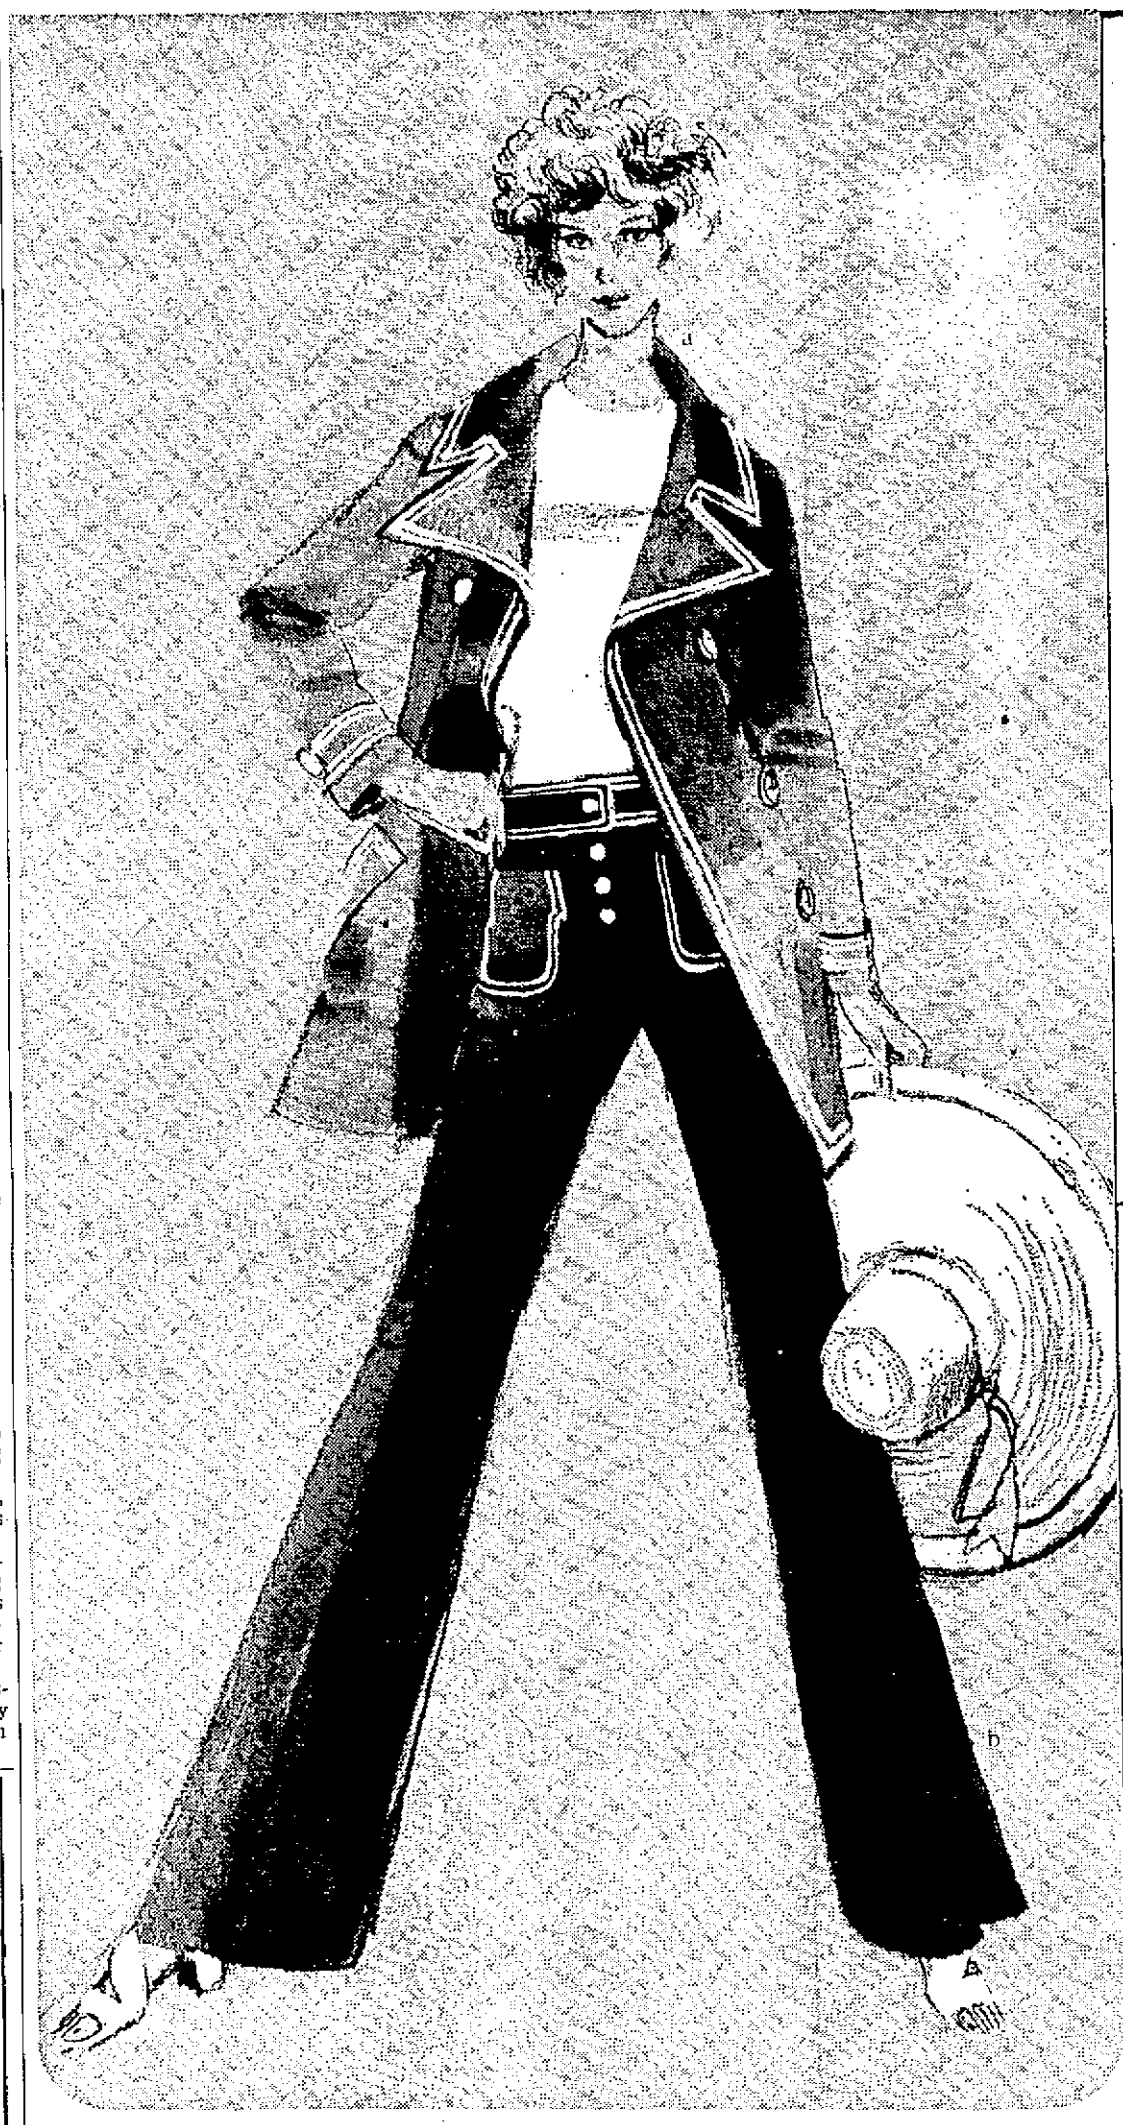

Steven C. Hurd, 20, of Santa Ana, was identified as leader of the gang also accused of slaying Jerry Wayne Corlin, 21, of Santa Ana, with an ax the night of June 2, 1970.

Hurd is in Atascadero State Hospital undergoing psychiatric treatment.

Arthur "Moose" Hulse, 17, of Garden Grove, has been convicted of the Carlin slaying and with complicity in the brutal knifing of Mrs. Brown, who was the mother of five children. He is in prison under a life sentence.

Gibboney will seek dismissal of the grand jury indictment against him on June 25.

Assembly unit hits health act

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

An Assembly subcommittee, winding up two days of hearings at Santa Ana, agreed that California's health-planning act "is woefully inadequate," and "needs to be overhauled."

Assemblyman William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, presided over the probe of Orange County's health-planning program, which recently had two hospitals and three planning commissioners embroiled in controversy.

Almost all the testimony at the Thursday and Friday hearings mentioned the furor surrounding an application by the Lutheran Hospital Society for a use permit to build Saddleback Community Hospital at Laguna Hills Leisure World. It ran into a series of delays imposed by a three-member power bloc on the Orange County Planning Commission, which brought it to a deadline for applying for federal funds.

Newspapers detailed that planning commissioner Arnold Forde of Costa Mesa had a financial interest in Mission Community Hospital nearby, which might face competition from Saddleback Hospital.

Before Forde withdrew his opposition to the Saddleback application, Commission Chairman Woodrow Butterfield of Garden Grove and Fred Jefferson of Anaheim, walked out of a commission meeting.

The three of them comprise the power bloc on the commission.

Campbell's committee took testimony about conflict of interest, generally involving rules and regulations set up by regional health-planning boards.

It developed that the state act establishing the health planning activities did not spell out such rules of ethics. Campbell said they "must be included."

The assemblyman said also that he will recommend legislation detailing how health councils are to be formed, as well as how they are to be financed.

It developed at the hearing that Orange County's new Health Planning Council was formed from a "select list" of 19 names submitted by staff members Gladys Mock and Mrs. Mary White, the latter the wife of Paul G. White, who said he is council president.

White testified at the hearing that he had himself appointed last February "by letter" from three supervisors, later identified as Robert W. Battin of Santa Ana, Ralph B. Clark of Anaheim and Ronald Caspers of Newport Beach. White is administrative aide for Caspers.

The "appointment" is illegal, according to Assistant County Counsel Clayton Parker, and White's official actions since then are subject to invalidation.

Ban eyed on fishing off bridge

The proposed ban on fishing from Marina Drive bridge over San Gabriel River will be back before the City Council's ordinance committee at its meeting Monday at 9:30 a.m. in the council chambers.

At the April meeting, the committee asked the city manager's office to investigate and report on several alternatives which might provide fishermen an opportunity to cast into the river waters from (or adjacent to) the bridge.

On recommendation of the Marine Department, the manager's office earlier had recommended a ban on fishing on that portion of the bridge within the City of Long Beach because of the traffic hazard and because fishermen left the bridge filthy.

J. P. KILLEEN, 3619 Canehill St., asked the committee in April to withhold action on closing the bridge to fishing for at least 90 days to explore other methods to solve the problems.

Since that meeting, the City Council received, and referred to the committee, a letter from Boyd Winters, 2608 Frankel St., Lakewood, announcing formation of a Save Our Bridge committee and suggesting other methods of solving the problem.

Other committee agenda items include a request to exclude newspaperboys from a city ordinance prohibiting door-to-door solicitation at night, proposed ordinances on certain city license fees, and a suggestion by Councilman Thomas J. Clark that a review be given to procedures for handling appeals on technical matters.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forcast for Monday

Your birthday today: An expansive year opens for social progress and emotional development. Many opportunities are available for material welfare; some brand new, others which existed all along but not realized. Your friends are into everything and will upset any effort to retreat or take a too-narrow course of action. Keep them busy in return.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Big ideas dominate the financial department of your life today. Just make sure they're yours and that you have the resources to carry them to conclusion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Indications are for changes in partnership arrangements and working conditions which permit more time and space for action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When least expected and from an unplanned direction comes challenge and excitement in meeting it. Romance consolidates matters, as well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Morning is good for hearing proposals and reviewing schemes. Afternoon or tomorrow are better for even minor decisions. Give your unconscious time to react. Devote evening hours to improving home life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Group and family considerations come to the surface with some issues you've neglected or failed to notice. Listen to all of it, then clear away the confusion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Where you lend an ear, put a suggestion with it, but avoid the pitfall of trying to make anybody else's decisions. Meanwhile, put in consistent effort at normal routines while the going is good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Express your inner serenity to adjust all phases of your life toward tranquility. This may mean leaving some vital criticism or an argument unanswered.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People listen to you today, including some you'd just as soon avoid. Younger people stir a creative streak in you — strive for a constructive application.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Much of what you do now yields results much later on, after you've given up hope. There is no excuse for not doing your best, merely the need for philosophic balance while you work for distant as well as close-by goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is your responsibility to choose and choose promptly which of several activities to focus your main efforts on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Everything looks good at first glance — until you assume things are as good as they look and make a promise. Be skeptical, check your facts and get a second opinion before you close a deal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Plans of mice and corporations often go awry. For you the goal is to know what you want and figure some way to strive for it in changing conditions.

A pitch that no one will ever forget

"It's going to be with me till the day I die. But it doesn't bother me. I look on it as a blessing, 'cause people still remember me."—Ralph Branca.

If every man has his time and place, Ralph Theodore Joseph Branca found his late on a fall afternoon in 1951.

Has it really been 20 years since the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Giants played off for the National League pennant?

What were you doing at the epochal moment? A college kid, between classes, was eating his lunch in the backseat of his Ford as the radio provided the only kind of contact a Californian had with big league sports.

Ralph Branca, big, strong, 25-year-old righthander of the Dodgers, was walking to the Polo Grounds mound. Bobby Thomson of the Giants was picking out a bat. The number on Branca's back was 13.

"The score was 4-2 and they had men on second and third," recalls Branca, who will crank it up again in the Dodgers' oldtimers game today. "He hit the second pitch for a home run."

Until Joe Ferguson, a minor league catcher, asked for it this year, the Dodgers hadn't used No. 13 since Branca.

But . . . is that all there was to it—the most famous home run of all? Wind back the clock.

THE DODGERS, managed by Charley Dressen, have a 13½-game lead over Leo

Durocher's Giants with a month-and-a-half to go in the season. On the final day of the season, they are caught. There will be a best-of-three playoff for the pennant.

The Giants win at the Polo Grounds, the Dodgers at Ebbetts field. Wednesday, Oct. 3, third game, last of the ninth, one out, Giants trail 4-1. Don Newcombe pitching for Brooklyn.

Alvin Dark singles to open the inning, goes to third on Don Mueller's single. Newcombe strikes out Monte Irvin. Whitey Lockman doubles to score Dark,

No Alex-- Angels have fun

New spirit in 3-2 win over Red Sox

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

BOSTON — Tom Murphy didn't really want to respond to the pertinent question but at last he relented, allowed a smile to cross his pleasant features and said:

"Yes, I'd have to say we were a different team today. There was more unity . . . more spirit."

Murphy's Irish sentiments were echoed by Syd O'Brien, who was only a dugout witness to a 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"You are darn right it was different," O'Brien said. "It was fun today."

An opinion was also solicited from the manager, Lefty Phillips.

"I'm relieved," he said. "I'm also happy with our new lineup."

The new Angel lineup these days does not include Alex Johnson. His absence was barely noticed on a sunny Saturday afternoon as the Angels collaborated for 10 hits to up-end the Red Sox behind a strong pitching performance by Murphy.

"As far as I'm concerned Alex Johnson can go home and stay there," said another Angel.

Thus a new Angel attitude was definitely in evidence.

"That was by far our best execution of the season," Phillips said immediately. "We made all the plays we had to."

"We weren't much offensively," Murphy chortled, "but we sure got great pitching."

Murphy was kidding but he was also accurate. "That's the best he has looked this season," his manager pointed out.

Phillips was asked to account for the new Angel attitude.

"I think you guys can figure it out," he replied without referring to his banished leftfielder.

Murphy permitted only one hit over the first five innings before he sweated out the final four frames. When he snuck over a called third strike on Duane Josephson, the Sox had the tying run at second base

"I was scared," Murphy

Dodgers win but Sutton's arm alarms

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

For the second time in a row Don Sutton breezed along towards a shutout but was dismissed early when his tender right elbow caused him too much pain to continue.

The Dodger righthander is as puzzled about the ailment as anyone and, as the Dodgers approach a critical run later this month, pitching suddenly looms again as a sizeable void.

Sutton pitched five innings Saturday night but Pete Mikkelsen had to work the last four. Between them they blanked the New York Mets, 3-0, despite giving up 10 hits, eight of them by Sutton.

A crowd of 27,801 watched the Dodger Stadium victory, which enabled the Dodgers to climb within 8½ games of San Francisco in the National League West. It's the closest they've been to the Giants, who've dropped four in a row, since May 12 when they were "only" eight games behind.

Steve Garvey, replacing Bobby Valentine at third base, hammered his third home run of the season and also started a vital double play in the sixth inning.

Rich Allen drove in one run and scored the other, running his hitting streak to six games in which he's collected 11 hits in 23 at bats.

But Sutton, who's allowed but one earned run his last 21 2-3 innings, remains a concern. It'll be more than merely a concern if he's not mended by June 17 when the Dodgers begin a string of 26 games in 24 days, including five games with San Francisco.

"I don't know if rest will help or not," said manager Walter Alston. "All I can go by is how he throws.

"I know there's pain. The question is if he goes on and keeps pitching, how serious or how damaging will it be? This I don't know."

Sutton said he felt fine warming up but the elbow gave way in the third inning.

"I don't think it's an injury as much as it is just a strain," the 26-year-old Sutton analyzed. "I really don't know what to do. I guess I'll wait until Monday or Tuesday and just see what the doctor thinks.

35-1 longshot Pass Catcher wins Belmont; Canonero runs fourth

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jockey Walter Blum, who once flirted with tragedy in this same race, said Saturday that Pass Catcher's stunning victory in the Belmont Stakes that wrecked Canonero II's Triple Crown bid, came from no definite pre-race strategy.

"We played it the way we wanted to — by ear," said Blum in the victory circle after his three-quarter length victory over fast-closing Jim French with Canonero fourth.

"We wanted to stay close but not force anything if someone else wanted to set the pace," Blum said.

The beaming little jockey in the salmon pink silks rode to glory in the Belmont exactly 12 years after his first appearance in the third race of the Triple Crown classics — the 1959 race in which both he and Eddie Arcaro came close to the peril that always threatens the little men.

In that race, Arcaro's horse, Black Hills, stumbled and fell and Blum's mount Lake Erie, fell over him. Blum was not badly hurt but Arcaro went to the hospital for several months.

This time, however, it was all gold and glory for Blum on a cool, determined ride. He sent Pass Catcher out of the gate first, then kept him close around the first turn and down the backstretch and refused to raffle when Canonero went out front and threatened to turn the race into a runaway.

Canonero was nearly two lengths in front as they went into the last turn, but Blum said even then he was confident.

"We had dead aim on the leader all the way," Blum said. "When I asked him (Pass Catcher) for his move at the quarter-pole he really gave it to me and took off."

Blum moved Pass Catcher to the rail and he spurted out to a five-length lead. That sewed it up but Blum had to keep him moving in the final 16th as Jim French cut that huge lead down to three-quarters of a length at the wire. Blum insisted Pass Catcher wasn't completely worn out at the finish.

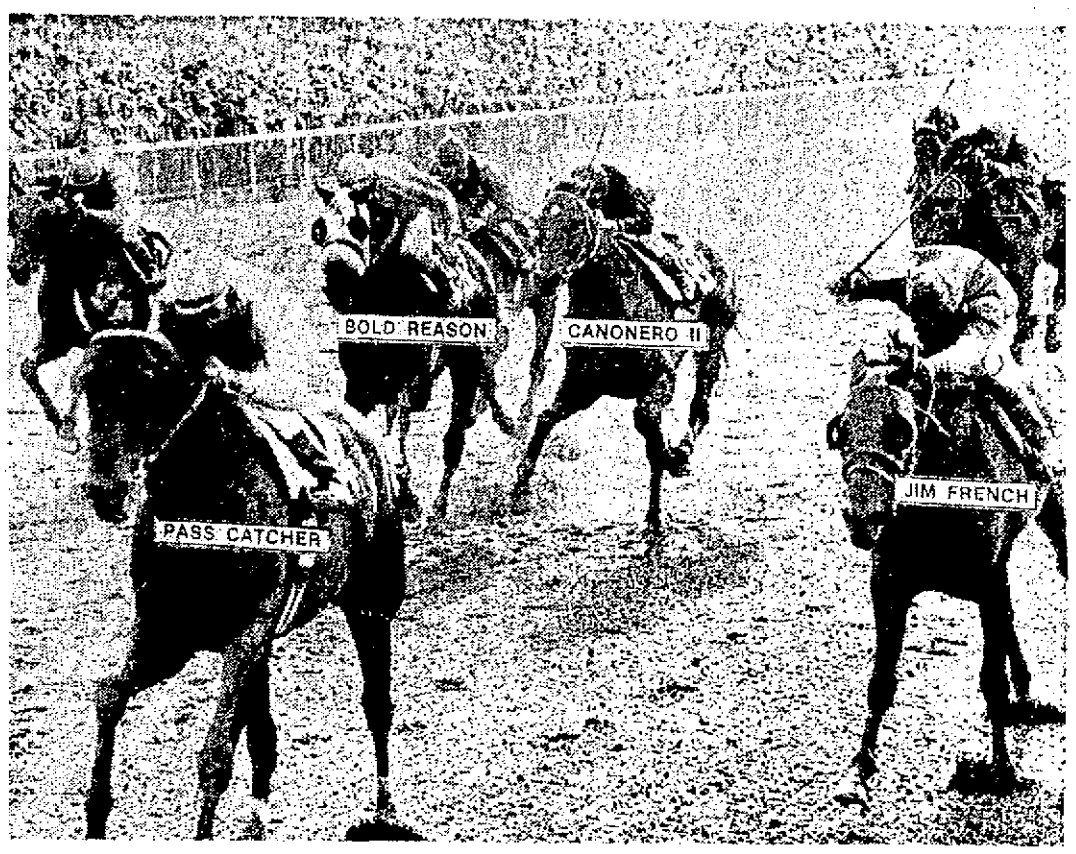

"He ran really fine through the stretch and I never had to punish him even though the second horse was coming at the end when it was too late," said Blum.

A crowd of 81,036, the largest ever to watch a race in New York, applauded Blum's masterful ride and although a world, one-day record $6,972,209 was wagered, few had the foresight to back Pass Catcher, who returned $71.00

Jim French finished second, Bold Reason third and Canonero II fourth. Pass Catcher's triumph, the first stakes success of his career, rewarded owner Peter F. Kissel with $97,710 of the $162,850 purse.

After the race, Blum had one more hazard to overcome — a foul claimed against him by jockey Eddie Belmonte, who said Pass Catcher and Canonero had cut off his mount, Twist the Axe, at the quarter-pole.

"I cut to the rail, sure. But I don't think it was close enough for a foul claim, said Blum. After viewing the films the stewards agreed with him.

TOUCHDOWN FOR PASS CATCHER

Unheralded Pass Catcher, a 35-1 longshot guided by jockey Walter Blum, held off Jim French in stretch to win marathon Belmont Stakes Saturday at Belmont Park, frustrating Canonero II's bid for Triple Crown. Canonero II finished fourth, behind Jim French and Bold Reason.

Hi Q. wins $107,000 Vanity 'Cap
Longshot stuns favored Manta

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

A mare who was so lightly regarded that she was part of a $25,000 six-horse purchase package two years ago, stunned a throng of 44,554 Saturday as she captured the West's richest distaff race — the $107,000 Vanity Handicap — at Hollywood Park, edging the even-money favorite Manta and rewarding her supporters with a payoff in boxcar figures.

Hi Q., five-year-old daughter of 1959 Hollywood Gold Cup winner Hillside, came from far back in the 10-horse field to score a nose victory under expert steering by a new jockey, Fernando Toro, who followed the trainer's instructions perfectly and raced her outside.

The mare, who went off a 27-1 and had a 16-pound weight advantgae over the classy Manta, returned $56.40. Swoon's Flower (4-1) was third nearly three lengths behind Manta.

Hi Q.'s last win was in a minor stakes Feb. 27 at Golden Gate Fields, but she served notice she might be coming to life when she was runnerup to Manta in a March handicap at Santa Anita.

However, owner Bill Foy placed a majority of credit for Hi Q.'s victory Saturday on the jockey, who was riding his mare for the first time.

"Toro did what the trainer and I told him to do," explained Foy, manager of the Three Rings Ranch in Beaumont, Calif. "The other jockeys had been getting Hi Q. on the inside rail and she does not like to race on the inside. She just won't run well there.

"But Toro had her on the outside today and she came flying down the stretch."

J. W. (Junior) Nicholson, who began training Hi Q. at the start of the current meeting, echoed the owner's statement.

"The win wasn't that big an upset in my mind," said Nicholson. "I thought she'd be no worse than third or fourth. Fernando gave her a super ride. The key to her is letting her relax the first five-eighths of a mile — not to rush her as the others were doing — and Fernando fits that style perfectly. He let her relax and run on the outside. That's all there was to it."

It wasn't quite that simple because overburdened Manta, topweighted with 129 pounds, never quit.

She hung just behind the pace set by Duke's Little Gal and Opening Bid until she began her drive on the turn for home. As she straightened out for the stretch drive, Manta gained a clear half-length lead, but Hi Q. was roaring like an express train in fourth place only another length back.

Hi Q. nailed Manta 100 yards from the wire and

Walter O'Malley: 10 years of thrills

The Dodgers are celebrating their 10th anniversary year of Dodger Stadium this season and one of the highlights will be today's Oldtimers Game. So you approach the boss, chairman of the board Walter O'Malley, and ask his biggest thrill in the Dodgers' 10 years at Chavez Ravine.

"It's hard to measure a thrill," said the conservative chairman. "What come to mind immediately are the Dodgers' 1963 World Series four-game sweep of the Yankees, Sandy Koufax's many great games — especially his four no-hitters, Maury Wills' stolen base acheivement, Don Drysdale's amazing record of 54 straight shutout innings. There were so many moments of thrills."

But, Walter, you persist, can you be pinned down to your BIGGEST thrill?

"Not really," countered the chairman "At the time of each chapter, the anticipation was tremendous. The climax of beating the Yankees four in a row during the Series, of the last out in Sandy's no-hitters, the wonderment if Wills could continue to maintain his pace, and the excitement of sweating out one inning after another of Drysdale's streak all were momentuous.

"I honestly couldn't rate one above the others. Let's just say it has been 10 years of thrills and emotion.

"The 1962 playoff with the Giants when they won it all in the third game was a swing of the pendulum. First victory, then despair. But that's the only despair. But that's the only way to go — the Dodgers' way."

DIGGING FURTHER with O'Malley, you ask how he rated the Dodgers' three National League pennants

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

(1963-65-66) and their world championships in '63 and '65?

"Make that four pennants," he smiled. "Don't forget about '71. Our two world titles in Southern California made us the ONLY club to fly World Series flags on both the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts."

On opening day at Dodger Stadium in 1962 when the rains came and the field was flooded, there was cause to be concerned about a postponement.

"I don't believe it," laughed the chairman. "It never rains in Southern California, I'm told. But we learned a California lesson about adobe soil and at the end of the season, we completely resurfaced the field."

KOUFAX'S NO-HITTERS "were never routine," said O'Malley, "especially his fourth one — the perfect game against the Cubs in 1965. To add to the impact, it was a 1-0 affair."

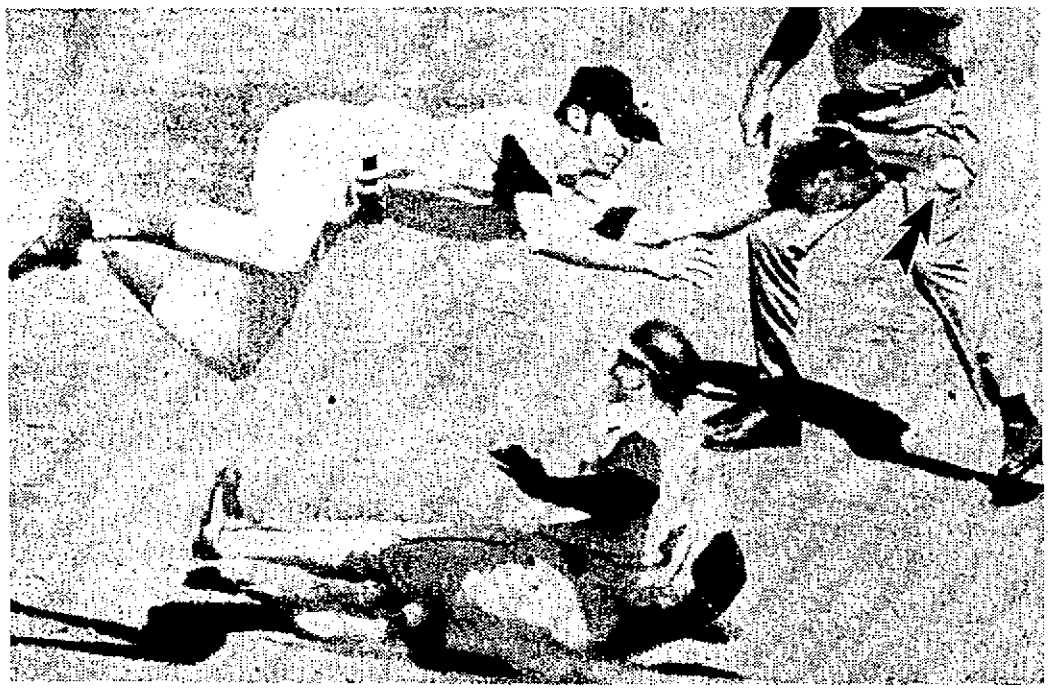

Review the circumstances. No pitcher in history had hurled four no-hitters. Sandy had done it thrice before — 1962 against the Mets, 1963 vs. the Giants, and 1964 against the Phillies. Could he turn this one against Chicago?

The pressure was mounting that September evening as Sandy dueled Bob Hendley, who tossed a one-hitter at the Dodgers.

For eight innings, Koufax retired the Cubs in order. Now, in the ninth, the crowd was hysterical. The first batter went down swinging and so did the second, Joey Amalfitano, the man from St. Anthony High.

It then was Koufax vs. venerable Harvey Kuenn. Harvey went out the same as the others — swinging!

Dodgers shut out Mets, 3-0

Whatever they decide I'll go along with.

"I warmed up great and got through the first and second innings. Then, when I was pitching to (Nolan) Ryan in the third, I hurt it. After that I was like a guy shooting marbles up to the plate."

Without Sutton, and with Bill Singer still questionable after leaving in the fourth inning last Wednesday with a pulled groin muscle, the pitching is now the Dodgers' biggest concern.

"With all those games coming up we'll need another pitcher anyway," Alston said, glancing ahead to the demanding schedule the last half of June and the beginning of July. "We'll either go to Bob O'Brien or Sandy Vance or maybe bring up Doyle Alexander from Spokane. We'll just have to wait and see."

Alexander is the top pitcher at Spokane with a 6-1 record.

While the Mets were continually frustrated, collecting 10 singles yet no runs, the Dodgers clicked against Ryan in the first inning when Allen singled home Willie Davis who had singled and stolen second.

The Dodgers made it 2-0 in the fourth when Allen singled and came all the way home on Jim Lefebvre's double to left.

The Mets blew their biggest chance in the fourth when Cleon Jones opened with a single and, after Ed Kranepool popped out, Ken Boswell lined a single to right with Jones stopping at second.

Jerry Grote flied out but Tim Foli singled to center. Willie Davis scooped up the ball and fired a strike to catcher Duke Sims who survived a violent collision with Jones for the out.

DODGER DOPE: Wes Parker, the only Dodger to play in every game last season and the only one who'd started all 53 games this season, was rested Saturday night . . . Over three years he'd played in 216 games in a row, longest streak by anyone in the National League.

The Oldtimers Game today begins at 1 p.m. with the Mets and Dodgers playing at 2 p.m. . . . The entire Oldtimers celebration will be aired on KFI radio beginning at 1:10 p.m. . . . Vin Scully also will present a tape of Red Barber's description of the ninth inning of the 1947 World Series game when Cookie Lavagetto busted up Floyd Bevins' nohitter and won the game as well . . . Cookie is one of the many Oldtimers who'll play today.

Don Newcombe and Sandy Koufax will be the starting pitchers . . . Casey Stengel, as usual, grabbed top honors at the Oldtimers luncheon Saturday afternoon in the Stadium Club, spieling on about everything from a baby carriage to the first time he saw Ebbets Field. Duke Sims celebrated his 30th birthday Saturday . . . Pitching the concluding game of the series today will be Al Downing (4-3) for the Dodgers, Jerry Koosman (3-3) for the Mets.

Lum blast bests Cubs

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mike Lum tagged Ken Holtzman, making his first relief appearance of the season, for a three-run homer with two in the 11th inning Saturday night to give the Atlanta Braves a dramatic 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Holtzman, who pitched the second no-hitter of his career in his last start Thursday night, replaced Phil Regan with two on and one out in the 11th and the Cubs leading 4-3. He got Ralph Garr to ground to Paul Popovich at second as the runners advanced.

Lum, who's in the starting lineup because Hank Aaron is ailing, then hit a fly to right field. Jim Hickman leaped for the ball and for the moment there was a question whether or not he caught it but it went just over his glove into the seats into the seats for a three-run homer.

If Giants are 0-4, this must be June

Combined News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants, long famous for their June swoons, saw their record for the first five days of that month slip to 0-4 Saturday.

Leading 3-1, entering the eighth inning, the Giants were nicked for three runs, including two on a two-out, pinch-hit home run by Tim McCarver, and lost to Philadelphia, 5-3.

The Giants had built up their lead in the fifth inning on singles by Bernie Williams and Chris Speier, a two-run double by Tito Fuentes and a RBI-single by Bobby Bonds.

Then in the eighth, Larry Bowa walked, advanced to second on a groundout and then scored on a two-out single by Deron Johnson, who tallied on McCarver's homer.

Hopkins' HR keys Royals

NEW YORK (AP) — A three-run pinch homer by Gail Hopkins capped a six-run explosion in the seventh inning Saturday and carried red-hot Kansas City to an 11-7 victory over the New York Yankees. It was the Royals' sixth consecutive triumph.

The Yanks had just gone ahead 6-5 with three runs in the last of the sixth when the Royals struck back. Paul Schaal drew a leadoff walk from Gary Waslewski and Amos Otis doubled.

Ed Kirkpatrick's groundout produced the tying run and Bob Oliver's single, following an intentional walk to Cookie Rojas, put the Royals in front.

Blair hits grand slam; Orioles bury Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles erupted for six runs in the sixth inning Saturday on Merv Rettenmund's two-run homer and Paul Blair's grand slam and routed the Milwaukee Brewers, 12-4.

The victory, combined with Boston's loss to the Angels pushed the Orioles back into first place in the American League East, one-half game ahead of the Red Sox.

Rettenmund's blast erased a 2-1 Milwaukee lead and came off loser Jim Hannan, who relieved after starter Skip Lockwood wilted in the 83-degree heat and left for a pinch-hitter after five innings.

Jim Palmer coasted to his eighth victory in 11 decisions, allowing five hits.

Hague hits pair, Cards edge Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Hague drove in four runs with a pair of homers, powering the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-3 victory over Cincinnati Saturday.

Hague belted a three-run homer in the second inning of the nationally-televised game and hit his ninth of the season leading off the seventh against Reds' starter Tony Cloninger.

Left-hander Jerry Reuss checked Cincinnati on five hits until the ninth, when he needed help from three relief pitchers to record his sixth victory against four losses.

A's help Hunter to ninth victory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Homers by Rick Monday and Sal Bando powered the Oakland A's to a 6-1 victory over the Washington Senators Saturday night as Jim Hunter gained his ninth victory with a seven-hitter.

Monday hit his seventh homer over the center field fence on the heels of a single by Bando with two out in the fourth inning to snap a 1-1 tie.

Bando's eighth homer into the upper left field deck created the deadlock in the second inning.

The Senators scored a first-inning run when Don Mincher singled to drive in Bernie Allen, who walked and advanced on a passed ball.

Hunter pitched out of a bases-loaded, none out jam in the third inning by striking out Frank Howard and getting Larry Bittner to bounce into a double play.

Quarter horses a hit at Los Alamitos

Quarter Horse racing has come a long way in a few short years due greatly to the interest and faith of the Vessels family.

Under leadership of the Vessels, Los Alamitos Race Course has become the world capital for the quarters — the fastest horses of all.

When Frank Vessels Jr. throws open the doors Wednesday night for the start of the 1971 meeting, a new era of activity and prosperity will be ushered in for both the track and the quarter horses.

On top of what should be the greatest quarter horse race meeting of all-time, two bills are currently on the floor of the state legislature that could produce even more activity for the Orange County track.

One will approve nine more weeks of quarter horse racing for the southern zone of the state, and the other will okay 12 weeks of harness racing "ouside Los Angeles county."

It would appear that Los Alamitos is the logical site for at least one of those two meetings — possibly both.

WHEN THE VESSELS FAMILY introduced quarter horse racing, the public was slow to accept the "cow ponies" despite their proven speed.

Most fans found it difficult to handicap the races because of their unfamiliarity with the performances of the speedsters over such short distances as 350, 440 and 570 yards.

Racing fans are realizing that the quarter horses are more formful than thoroughbreds, trotters and pacers.

The percentage of winning favorites in all quarter horse races throughout North America in 1970 was 40 per cent as compared to approximately 34 per cent for other breeds.

ANOTHER FIGURE THAT SUBSTANTIATES the validity of previous statistics, Vessels points out, is that 76 per cent of the favorites in those '70 quarter horse races finished in the money (1-2-3).

Odds-on favorites run even more true to form. During the 78 programs at Los Alamitos last year, 100 favorites went to the post at odds of less than even money . . . and 85 of them finished in the money. A total of 57 won, 23 were second and five were third.

One of the reasons behind this form is that quarter horses travel a shorter distance. Horsemen point out that the further a horse goes, the more he extends himself beyond his inate ability, thus causing a greater fluctuation in performance.

Attendance and mutuel handle at quarter horse meets has been increasing every year, and in '70, fans wagered $1 million on no less than five programs at Los Alamitos with a high of $1,157,204 on Aug. 1.

That averages out to better than $100 each fan wagered that night . . . and proves that they no longer are afraid to back their choices as they were when the quarter horses first began racing.

THIS SUMMER'S MEETING at Los Alamitos will draw the finest quarter horses in the game, headed by the 1970 world champion, Kaweah Bar, the 5-year-old Palomino gelding owned by Long Beach's George Chittick.

Kaweah Bar has a busy schedule starting with Wednesday night's inaugural and including, among other races, the $50,000 Go Man Go feature July 31, and the $100,000 Los Alamitos championship on Sept. 4.

Two great mares figure to offer him strong arguments as to who is best — Top Rockette, 1970's mare of the year and winner of the Bay Meadows championship the past week, and Vessels' Whataway to Go.

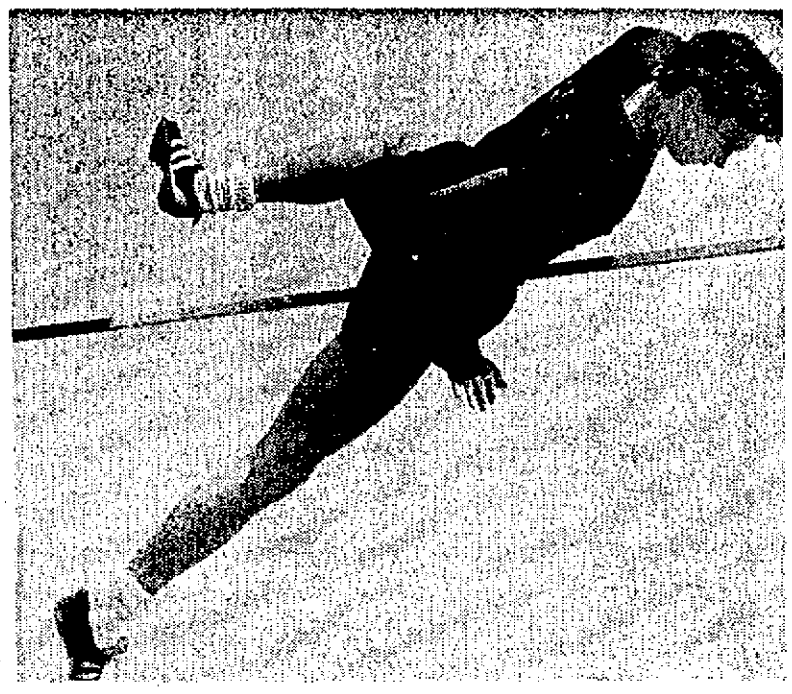

Whataway to Go, a daughter of Go Man Go, is making a brilliant comeback after a poor '70 season caused by bad ankles. She has won all four starts in '71 and recently set a track record in winning the Yakima Maturity. She won all eight of her starts as a two-year-old in 1969 before she was hurt.

A FINE BUNCH OF THREE-YEAR-OLDS is on hand to vie for that age group's championship on June 26 — In Vogue, Ruby Khan, Band of Angels, etc.

In Vogue is the filly who recorded one of the biggest surprises in Los Alamitos history last year when she beat the 4-5 favorite, Tru Tru, in the rich Futurity . . . paying $124 for a $2 ticket.

In Vogue served warning in her previous two races that she was ready for a big effort, but the bettors overlooked her.

One of the outstanding crop of two-year-olds in several seasons is being pointed for the '71 Futurity which Vessels believes will be worth $140,000. Among the early favorites are Anecdote, Cindy Passum and Sir Mur.

Record romp in state prep track meet

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

California's best high school track talent got together for the 58rd time Saturday at UCLA and held their most illustrious meet ever.

One national interscholastic and five meet records tumbled in precision-like order at the annual State championships staged before 11,783 onlookers.

Many had gone home by the time lanky Glendale senior Dwight Stones soared 7 feet, 1½ inches in the high jump for the national record.

Stones, who will become a Bruin next fall, achieved the height on his first attempt while a noisy crowd of happy Hamilton High of Los Angeles followers were still celebrating their team title victory.

Hamilton managed only 13 points, lowest winning total since 1964, but it was enough to edge Lompoc (11) and three other schools at 10.

Another national record would have been erased in the long jump if the wind hadn't been over the 4.47 mph allowable on Randy Williams' 26-3¾ leap.

Williams, from Edison, Fresno, needed almost every inch of his performance to beat Poly's Tony Brown, who moments earlier had gone 25-6¾ also wind-aided.

The day's first event produced a meet record and set the tempo.

El Cerrito, no better than third last week in the CIF North Coast sectionals, put it all together in the 440 relay when it counted, running 41.1 to cut a tenth off Hamilton's old mark in Friday's prelims.

Other records went to San Diego Clairemont 2-miler Dale Fleet (8:53.8), Newport Harbor shotputter Mark Stevens (67-2¼), and a mile relay team from Castlemont of Oakland (3:13.2).

If that wasn't enough, fans saw an in-person instant replay of the 100.

Hamilton, which had faltered in the 440 relay and managed only one point for a fifth-place finish, needed a win from sprinter George Reddick and got it — twice.

Reddick, in view of everyone but the starter (J. Walter Smith) and recall starter (Ernie Jensen), got a two-yard jump the first time out and won in 9.6.

Five coaches immediately lodged protests, and meet referee Ernie Hartman, a former coach at Compton, ruled the race should be run again.

Reddick proved equal to the occasion 20 minutes later and clocked 9.6. "I had to win the rerun," said Reddick. "because I felt they were trying to nail me to the cross. It was unfair for everyone to have to come back like that."

Stones, who first cleared 7 feet on March 27 and failed to do so again until this weekend, credits changing to the Fosbury Flop two years ago as the reason for his new-found success.

Unlike a week ago at the Southern Section finals, Stones watched three other jumpers including Millikan's Rory Kotinek go out at 6-10 Saturday.

Kotinek, who managed third at 6-9, brushed the bar on his way down at 6-10 and lamented, "I should have made it."

Brown and Williams put on a show of their own before the first race.

Brown went 23-5, 25-6¾, 24-10, 25-3¼, 24-8¾ and 24-4¼ after having to interrupt his competition to be fitted for a cup in his shoe after aggravating a heel bruise.

Williams had only two other fair jumps at 24-10¼ and 24-7½ in addition to his winning effort.

"At least I made him work for it," said Brown. "If my heel would have been better, I might have hit 26 feet. I thought it would take that to win."

Stevens broke former Poly star John Hubbell's mark in the shotput and had five throws over 64 feet.

Almost lost in the fast flurry were season U.S. bests in the 880 by Percel Keeling of Morningside (1:51.8) and 440 by Tony Krzyzosiak of Garden Grove (46.7).

Krzyzosiak staged a great stretch drive, overhauling four runners in the final 110 and catching Ray Johnson of Blair at the wire.

Kinnunen hurls javelin 288, tops Kennedy record assault

BERKELEY (Special) — Jorma Kinnunen of Finland hurled the javelin 288 feet, longest in the world this year, and New York Athletic Club stars Tom Gage, Barry Brown and Ron Laird were among nine competitors who set meet records Saturday in the Kennedy Games.

In addition, Francie Larrieu, a 19-year-old dry cleaning plant employe from Sunnyvale, Calif., set an American mark of 4:41.5, in the women's mile as records tumbled on a perfect day at Edwards Stadium, site next month of the United States-Russian track meet.

Kinnunen, who holds the world javelin record at 304-1 ½, got off his meet record throw on the last try despite a sore back.

Gage recorded the third best throw ever by an American to win the hammer at 233-6; Brown took the steeplechase in 8:42.8, and Laird won the 5,000-meter walk in 22 minutes, 56.1 seconds.

Other meet records went to George Young, the 33-year-old Casa Grande, Ariz., schoolteacher and America's premier distance runner in the three-mile run; Juris Luzins, former William & Mary star now a second lieutenant in the Marines, in the 880; Tim Heikkila of Minnesota in the high jump; Dave Roberts, the Drake, Kansas Relays and Southwest Conference champ, in the pole vault, and Milan Tiff of Miami of Ohio who hit 53-6 ½ in the triple jump to beat the old mark of 52-4 ½ by Mohimnder Gill set a year ago.

Young won the three mile in 13:10.8; Luzins took the 880 in 1:47.6; Heikkila won the high jump with a leap of 7-2; and Roberts took the pole vault with a height of 17-5, best in America this year.

Cal State Long Beach student Steve Smith, competing for the Pacific Coast Club, finished second with a vault of 17-1, his lifetime best.

Bill Elliott, of the J-CC, the defending high jump champion, cleared seven feet and finished fourth.

Gage's hammer throw was a lifetime best and it handed the PCC's George Frenn his first defeat on American soil since 1969.

"It was good for me," said Frenn, who matched his season's best (227-9). "I haven't had anyone to push me in nearly three years. But I'm not going to lose again. I'll clean his clock (Gage's) in the nationals."

Willie Deckard of Southern California won the 100 in 9.4 while the 220 went to Don Quarrie, the British Commonwealth champ from Jamaica, in 20.7.

John Smith, the 1970 AAU champ, proved his victory in the 440 a week ago over Lee Evans at the Cal Relays was no fluke when he beat the world record holder again in 46.1. Evans finished third in 46.3, behind USC's Edesel Garrison, who was clocked in 46.2.

Smith also sparked UCLA to victory over the Pacific Coast Club in the mile relay with a blistering 44.9 third leg.

The Bruins, trailing after two laps, took command when Smith made up 13 yards on the PCC's Leon Van Hofwegen and gave anchorman Wayne Collett a lead going into the final lap. Collett (45.8) held off the PCC's Bob Frey (45.9) and the Bruins won in 3:05.2, with the PCC recording a 3:05.6.

Vida Blue: football's loss is baseball's gain

NEW YORK (AP) — If the 21-year-old lefthander Vida Blue of the Oakland A's had his way, people might be comparing him with Johnny Unitas, Sammy Baugh and other great quarterbacks.

As it is, the names being bandied about in the same breath as Blue's are Sandy Koufax and Sam McDowell.

Blue attracted a crowd of 30,000 to Yankee Stadium last week, more than double the normal Tuesday night attendance. They saw him run his record to 11-2 with a six-hit 5-2 victory over the Yankees.

"That's basically the way he's been pitching all year," said Dave Duncan, his catcher. Yet the crowd went home with a sense of disappointment that he struck out only six and didn't pitch a no-hitter.

In Blue's first full season in the major leagues, people have come to expect something special every time out. A routine performance becomes a letdown.

Blue leaves the impression that he might rather be doing his thing on the gridiron instead of the pitcher's mound. He was a brilliant high school quarterback in Mansfield, La., and had college bird dogs on his trail.

"I miss the contact in football," he said. "Every chance I get I go to a football game if it's within a 100-mile radius. Pro, college, high school anything.

"I visited the University of Houston and I was almost gone, when here comes Finley (Oakland owner Charles O. Finley) with all that cash and lured me away."

"He and McDowell are the fastest I've seen," said Bobby Murcer, the Yankees' top hitter. "He's got a good team behind him and he could win 30 games."

"McDowell's fast ball is up on you as soon as it leaves his hand," said Roy White, "while Blue's seems to pick up speed as it nears the plate, and a few feet before it gets to you it just explodes."

"You can't throw the ball much harder than he does," noted Johnny Ellis, New York's rising young slugger. "He seems to be a team player and I think he has more of a level head on his shoulders than McDowell, who only cares about himself."

Thurman Munson, however, is a McDowell fan.

"Blue doesn't throw as hard as Sam does consistently," he said. "Blue's got a good fast ball and curve but Sam can come overhand, sidearm, every which way. With Sam you have to worry about six different pitches all in different places."

"I still don't think I'm a control pitcher," Blue said. "I go to too many 3-2 counts. My control with a football was a little better. If you can't hit a 6-foot-3 end you got to have bad control.

"How far could I throw a football? About 60 feet maybe." Then he realized his mistake and grinned. "Oh, I mean 60 yards."

"For speed, this kid is right up there with McDowell and Herb Score," said veteran outfielder Felipe Alou, who played with Blue and against him and got two hits off him the other night. "But Koufax is in a class by himself. He's the only pitcher that when I knew a fast ball was coming, the best I could do was foul it off."

"Well, said Murcer, a lefthanded hitter who didn't have to hit against Koufax, "it's a good thing Blue throws mostly overhand. When he decides to come sidearm I'm begging off with an injury."

Angels exhibit unity

admitted, "but that breaking ball I threw to Josephson to even the count at 2 and 2 was the best I've thrown this year. It gave me the last bit of confidence I needed.

"I just said to heck with it right from the start and threw with everything I had," the Angel pitcher confessed. "What else can you do when you're 2-7?"

The Angels did not exactly make things easy for Murphy, outside of their polished defensive play. They managed a run in the second inning off loser Jim Lonborg on singles by Jim Spencer and Tony Conigliaro and a double by Ken Berry.

But in the fifth they loaded the bases with none out and managed to come up empty handed.

"I was down a little after that," Murphy said. "I had to talk myself into going out to the mound again."

A double by Sandy Alomar, who is beginning to string together base hits, and run-scoring singles by Roger Repoz and Ken McMullen gave Murph a 3-0 lead in the seventh.

But pinch-hitter Joe Lahoud cracked a solo homer in the eighth and Boston made it exceedingly close in the ninth on singles by Rico Petrocelli and Billy Conigliaro plus Luis Aparicio's ground-out before Murphy slammed the door by striking out Josephson.

Did Murphy feel any pressure?

"Only what I put on myself," he replied.

Thankfully, he applied more to the Red Sox.

ANGEL ANGLES: The long road trip comes to an end today when the Angels send their most consistent pitcher, Clyde Wright, against Boston's best, Sonny Siebert. Siebert, who has lost only one game, will be searching for his 10th victory ... the vitriolic Boston press was ready and waiting for Tony Conigliaro to come home. "He made a typically snowbird throw from the outfield," read one report Saturday, referring to an off-line throw by Tony C. Friday night. He had a better time of it Saturday, collecting a single and double ... Sandy Alomar, with eight hits in his last four games, has boosted his average to a seasonal high of .323. Sandy had a double and two singles Saturday ... Ken Tatum on Lefty Phillips, as reported in a Boston paper: "I think he knows a great deal about baseball but he can't manage" ... Tatum emphatically denied he said such a thing. "Why would I?" he pleaded. "I like Lefty" ... With Saturday's game, the Angels passed the one-third mark of the season ... This time last year they were 34-50 and camped in second place, two games behind Minnesota ... Jim Fregosi returned to shortstop and handled eight chances flawlessly, although Jim Spencer was forced to dig out several of his throws. "My arm's fine, I just don't know where first base is," Fregosi quipped ... "If looks like I let him borrow my arm," interjected O'Brien. Reflecting on Fregosi's offensive showing at the plate, O'Brien added, "It looks like I lent him my bat, too." Angel pitcher Andy Messersmith will be examined when the team returns home Saturday night ... He has a pulled groin muscle.

Killebrew's home run feats will grow in years to come

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When baseball oldtimers gather in the coming decades to discuss major league's best home run hitters, Harmon Killebrew's name will be brought up.

They're likely to tell stories about his home run totals, his contribution to the Minnesota Twins and his $100,000-plus salary.

They'll probably describe his home run mannerisms — the uncoiling of the muscular wrists, the powerful swivel of hips and the slugger's reaction to a solid crack of the bat — two or three steps toward first base and a pause to gaze at the ball's flight over a distant fence.

Those who see his historic 500th homer will always remember it.

By the time Killebrew celebrates his 35th birthday June 29, he should be past the 500 figure.

Only nine other major leaguers — headed by Babe Ruth's 714 — have joined the 500 club.

Just ahead of Killebrew, who last week passed Lou Gehrig's 493 and moved into the No. 10 position, are Ernie Banks, 510; Mel Ott 511, and Eddie Mathews, 512.

It's been figured out that Killebrew who became the old Washington Senators first bonus baby in 1954 and Minnesota's biggest star when they moved the club in 1961, hits a home run once every 13 times at bat.

That is second in home run consistency only to Ruth's average of each 11.8 trips to the plate.

"The only time I think about the number of home runs is when someone mentions it. No, it doesn't bother me for the writers to ask about my home runs. That's what I'm supposed to do," Killebrew said.

Killebrew should be selected to the roster of the A.L. All-Star team for the 13th time in 1971, but the question of whether he will start is up to the fans.

Although Killebrew has been moved to first base this season, to start in the July classic in Detroit he would have to poll more votes than Baltimore's Brooks Robinson at third base — the position at which the league listed the Twin's star on the ballot.

Killebrew started slowly this year, but only in regards to his home run total.

After Saturday, he had nine home runs but led the league in runs batted in, 47, and was among the top 10 hitters.

The Twins see no reason for Killebrew to slow down this year or in the next few seasons, primarily because of his persistent conditioning. Team physicians say he is in better shape this year than in several seasons.

There had been some thought by manager Bill Rigney and team president Calvin Griffith to start giving Killebrew more days off.

Killebrew doesn't like the idea. "I want to be in the lineup as much as I can," Killebrew said when he first heard of the proposal.

That would give him more chances to hit homers.

Windmill White runs ring win streak to six

White, 177, of Ventura, won his sixth fight in a row, all this year, by outpointing Steve Grant, 192, Oakland, in a heavyweight battle. White is the state's light heavyweight champ.

The much lighter but taller White, called the "clowning Carpenter," kept Grant at bay with various weapons including his patented "double bolo" punch and his behind-the-back punch. Grant, laughing much of the time, won at least three rounds with hard punches but couldn't penetrate the dancing White, no 24-9-2. Grant is 18-8-1.

Nxion, 155¾, of Glendale, Calif., suffered a cut under his left eye in the fifth but won the later rounds to beat Cipriano Hernandez, 159, San Diego.

Lakewood edges Shua in opener

Lakewood slipped past Shua, 4-3, and Peterson Post outslammed the Rockets Post, 8-5, to highlight Saturday's opening day's American Legion games at Blair Field.

In other action, Alamitos Bay gunned down the league's new entry, Carson Clerks, 6-2, and San Pedro blanked the Flyers, 4-0.

Coach John Herbold's Lakewood squad, with a nine-strikeout performance from pitcher Jim Davis, scored three of its runs in the first inning, then added an insurance tally in the sixth to hold off Shua. Marty Gray paced the winners with three singles, two RBI and one stolen base.

Chris Jenner had three RBI for Peterson, as his teammates collected 10 hits in the win over the Rockets. The victors posted four of their runs in the first inning and never lost the lead.

Alamitos Bay unleashed a five-run barrage in the eighth inning to trounce host Carson. Winning pitcher Karl Romig fanned eight Carson batters, as Tom Short and Bob Hill provided hitting support.

George Lusic gained the win for San Pedro at Houghton Park, as he and brother Nick each had one RBI.

Gilbert seeks third boating victory in row

Beverly Hills real estate developer Gil Gilbert will seek an unprecedented third consecutive Pacific Offshore Power Boat Racing Assn. victory Saturday in race No. 7 in the organization's Rum Run series.

A fleet of more than two dozen speedboats, ranging in size from 16 to nearly 40 feet and in power from 115 to more than 1000 horsepower, is expected for the 94-mile sprint from Long Beach Harbor to Malibu Pier and back starting at 11 a.m. off Belmont Shore Pier.

Gilbert took the POPBRA over-all high points lead May 15 by capturing the Border Dash event to Mission Bay aboard his 20-foot Pacific Class single-engine inboard craft, the Spectra Marine Special. The 28-year-old former water ski racer debuted the boat victoriously in the Catalina Race-Cruise last February, both times whipping the entire group of starters.

Mexico soccer team meets England today

Mexico's Necaxa faces West Ham of England today in the L.A. Coliseum, 3 p.m., in an international soccer match.

Both teams will have two World Cup veterans in their starting lineups — goalkeeper Antonio Mota and halfback Alfredo Romo for Mexico, and center-forward Geoff Hurst and Bobby Moore at halfback for the English.

England is rated a two-goal favorite.

Moore, West Ham's team captain, is the skipper of England's national team, for which he has performed 84 times. Hurst has played with his country's all-stars on 44 occasions.

In a 1 p.m. preliminary, the California League will meet San Diego in a junior all-star match.

Del Papa counted out in first

Rondon retains ring title

CARACAS (UPI) — Venezuela's Vicente Paul Rondon retained his disputed light-heavyweight title Saturday night, knocking out Italy's Piero Del Papa in 2:30 of the first round of their 15-round bout for the World Boxing Assn. version of the championship.

Rondon, 28, four years younger than former European champion Del Papa, used a longer reach and height advantage to jar the Italian with counter-punches. Rondon weighed 174¾ pounds for his first title defense and Del Papa 172.

The Venezuelan, who won the WBA title last Feb. 27 when he stopped Jimmy Dupree of the United States in six rounds, nailed Del Papa with two powerful left hooks and then knocked him halfway out of the ring with a thundering right cross.

As Del Papa lay on hands and knees with his head and shoulders outside the ropes, referee Zach Clayton of the U.S. counted him out.

An elated Rondon declared himself "the best light-heavyweight in the world" and said he was "ready and willing to meet Bob Foster," widely recognized as the 175-pound champion.

A sellout crowd of 10,500 packed the Nuevo Circo bull ring to see the fight.

Montreal holds off San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bob Bailey climaxed a two-run rally with a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning Saturday and the Montreal Expos defeated San Diego 2-1 behind the six-hit pitching of Steve Renko and Mike Marshall.

San Diego's Clay Kirby took a 1-0 lead into the sixth, when Gary Sutherland singled and scored the tying run on a two-out double by Ron Fairly. Bailey followed with his hit to left, scoring Fairly with the go-ahead-run.

Renko, 6-4, gave up a first inning run on Ivan Murrell's single and a double by Ed Spiezio, then checked the Padres on one hit until the eighth.

Marshall replaced Renko after Larry Stahl doubled with two out and Enzo Hernandez drew a walk. The Montreal reliever retired pinch-hitter Don Mason on a fly to center for the third out and worked out of a jam in the ninth, stranding the tying run on third.

Dierker stops Bucs, collects 10th victory

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Bob Watson's tie-breaking single highlighted a two-run rally in the eighth inning Saturday night that led the Houston Astros to a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates and helped Larry Dierker gain his 10th victory.

Dierker scattered 10 hits and needed relief help in the ninth inning but gained his 10th win against one loss two days after the Cardinals' Steve Carlton won his 10th in a 7-1 victory over Pittsburgh. They are the only two 10-game winners in the National League.

Houston snapped a 1-1 tie with two runs in the eighth inning on one-out singles by Joe Morgan, Cesar Cedeno and Watson, the last hit scoring Morgan. A wild pitch allowed Cedeno to score the second run.

Indian trio ambushes slumping Twins, 10-2

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Craig Nettles, Eddie Leon and Ray Fosse, the first three men in Cleveland's batting order, combined for 10 hits and seven runs batted in Saturday as the Indians pounded the skidding Minnesota Twins, 10-2.

Fosse, the Indians' No. 3 hitter, smashed a three-run homer and a run-scoring single. Leon collected four hits and leadoff man Nettles, a former Twin, also had four, including a three-run triple.

The Indians shelled five Minnesota pitchers for 14 hits in handing the Twins their third straight setback and dropped them under the .500 mark for the season.

Player seizes Atlanta lead

ATLANTA (AP) — South African Gary Player fired a 5-under par 67 and vaulted into the third-round lead in the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic Saturday.

The tough little physical fitness buff, gunning for his third victory of the season, had a 54-hole total of 204, 12 under par on the leg-testing hills of the Atlanta Country Club course.

He owned a one-stroke margin over PGA champion Jack Nicklaus, who had a chance to tie for the top until he pumped one in the water on the 18th hole.

Nicklaus, the leading money winner of the year and winner of his last two starts, had a 70 for 205. He was tied at that figure with lean 42-year-old veteran Gardner Dickinson, who had a 69.

Lee Trevino, 68, and Ray Floyd, 69, were deadlocked with young Johnny Miller at 206. Miller had a 71.

Floyd, the curly-haired former PGA champ, again had a fantastic round, closing birdie-birdie-birdie-eagle. For the tournament, he now has scored 21 birdies and an eagle, but is only 10 under par. He had a bogey and a double bogey in his Saturday's play.

"I've never had so many double and triple bogeys in my life," Floyd said. "Every time I do something wrong, hit a bad shot, it seems like it's unplayable and then I three putt."

Kermit Zarley and Bob Lunn, each with a 69, were next at 208.

"I never get tired," shrugged Player, winner of all the world's major titles who contends that his physical fitness is one of his greatest assets.

He was two strokes back of Nicklaus and Miller when he started the hot, muggy day, exchanging his traditional black attire for an all-white outfit in deference to the Georgia heat.

Player rushed into contention with birdies in the first two holes, sinking from 20 feet on the first hole and chipping to within three feet on the second.

He bogeyed the fourth when he missed the green, got it back with a six-foot birdie putt on the next hole, picked off two more birds coming home and took the lead alone when he blasted out of a trap on the par 5 18th and sank a seven-foot birdie putt.

Floyd was 2-over-par for the day before he made his closing rush that Miller called "one of the greatest finishes I've ever seen."

He rolled in a 45-foot putt on the 15th hole, made it from 25 feet on the next, hit an eight-iron to within three feet on the 17th and hit a fantastic drive, a good four iron and holed a 7-foot putt for an eagle 3 on the final hole.

Melnyk joins elite of golf by winning British Am

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (UPI) — Steve Melnyk joined the elite of golf Saturday when he beat Jim Simons 3 and 2 to add the British Amateur golf title to the U.S. championship he won in 1969.

The 24-year-old public relations executive from Jacksonville, Fla, became the 11th man in history—all but one of them Americans — to win both titles. Britain's Harold Holton, who won both titles in 1911, was the only non-American to get on the honor roll.

Melnyk became the 17th American winner of the coveted title. Bob Dickson, when he beat Ron Cerrudo in 1967, was the last man to win both titles in the last all-American final.

Simons, 21-year-old baby of the U.S. Walker Cup team from Butler, Pa. trailed one down after the first 18 of the 36 holes final played in dull, overcast weather with a blustery wind blowing from the sea.

The match ended on the 34th green when Simons took a double bogie.

Melnyk looked a very happy man as he posed with the huge silver cup and his beaten opponent took his defeat well.

"It was the greatest experience of my life," the fair-haired Simons said. "I learned a lot, but God, I feel so tired now."

Melnyk told the gallery "although I feel very proud to have won, if I had a wish, it would be that this was the Walker Cup."

Kathy's 68 gains lead in Carling

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — Veteran Kathy Whitworth shot a 5-under-par 68 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead after 36 holes of the 54-hole $25,000 Lady Carling Open golf tournament.

Miss Whitworth's 68, the best round of the day over the par-73 Pine Ridge course, gave her a 36-hole total of 139, 7 under par. She had five birdies in the round.

Miss Whitworth, with two tour victories to her credit this year, won the Lady Carling in 1962, 1966 and 1968.

Tied at 141 were Marilynn Smith and Jo Ann Carner, both of whom shot four-under-par 69s.

Marlene Hagge shot a 70 and Donna Caponi a 71 to tie at 144.

Froehling comeback falls short

Combined News Services

PARIS — Ilie Nastase of Romania defeated Frank Froehling of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in the semifinals of the French Open Tennis Tournament Saturday ending the American's bid to win the title in a comback effort.

Nastase, seeded No. 3, defeated Froehling 6-0, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 and will meet Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia in today's final. Kodes, the defending champion, posted a 6-4, 6-2, 7-5 victory over Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia.

Froehling, making a comeback after a five-year absence from the tournament circuit, was unseeded going into the event but knocked off seventh-seeded Marty Riessen and second-seeded Arthur Ashe en route to the semifinals.

But he didn't have it against Nastase, and was so inept in the first eight games that the crowd began cheering sarcastically whenever Froehling made a good move.

Froehling admitted after the match that he went in with the wrong attitude.

"I'd been reading in the newspapers that Nastase had the flu," Froehling explained, "and I guess I was thinking more about him being tired than I was about playing my game."

MANCHESTER, Eng. — Patti Hogan, 21, of LaJolla, Calif, won the women's title in the Northern Lawn Tennis Tournament by beating unseeded Kris Kemmer of Hollywood, Calif., 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Colin Dibley, Australia's top Davis Cup player, won the men's title by upsetting South Africa's Bob Hewitt, 6-1, 6-4

CHICHESTER, Eng. — Brifton Gerald Battrick beat Denmark's Jan Leschly, 6-2, 9-8, to win the Rothmans' Lawn Tennis title. Australian veteran Judy Dalton beat Janet Newbury of LaJolla, Calif., 6-1, 6-4, to win the women's crown.

STOCKHOLM — Sweden's Jan-Erik Lundqhist defeated George Govern of France, 6-4, 6-3, in the semi-finals of the Stockholm International tennis tournament.

Gambril looks forward to Ivy challenges

Budget problems insure decline of 49er swimming program

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The romance is gone from a marriage that four years ago Don Gambril thought would last forever.

"I'm not angry at anyone," says Gambril, "I'm only sorry things didn't work out. When I came here four years ago, I didn't think I would ever leave."

Gambril is leaving, though, giving up his position as swim coach at Cal State Long Beach for a similar assignment at Harvard.

"I'm excited about the challenge at Harvard," says Gambril, who inherits a team which finished fifth in the Ivy League last year.

"BUT I'M SORRY I'm leaving. When I came here, we wanted to make Long Beach the aquatics capital of the world in five years, and I feel we accomplished that in less time.

"For example, 20 world class swimmers will be coming to Long Beach this summer to train for the Olympics. They're coming here simply because of the training facilities available.

"But we've reached a peak, especially at the school. "There is no way Cal State can continue its aquatic sports program on this level under present conditions.

"If the situation would have been good, or if I thought it was going to get better, I wouldn't leave Long Beach for anything."

Coach Don Gambril, star Hans Fassnacht

The situation Gambril faced, and overcame enough to get his 49ers as high as fifth in the nation among swim teams, was his budget.

"In the four years I've been here, my budget hasn't gone up one dollar," explains Gambril. "In fact, the budget for next season was cut $200.

"Yet, at the same time, tuition has been increased from $47.50 to $87.50, which is almost double, and it has increased nearly five times for out-of-state and foreign students.

"My total scholarship budget is $1,800. I raised $7,000 myself to get the team to the level it is at now."

The situation he walks into at Harvard is much different. Every student receives financial aid based on need.

Gambril, who taught five classes at Cal State, will have only coaching and recruiting responsibilities at his new position, and where he had only a part-time assistant coach at CSLB, he'll have two full-time aides at Harvard.

Gambril isn't the only swim-oriented person leaving Cal State.

West German star Hans Fassnacht and Swedish standout Gunnar Larsson will move East to train with Gambril for the 1972 Olympics in Munich, Germany.

Graham White will return to Australia to concentrate on the Olympics.

PRESENTLY, FASSNACHT plans to return to CSLB following the Olympics to complete his education and eligibility. Larsson, who has been ruled permanently ineligible by the NCAA, will return to Sweden after the Olympics.

The Phillips 66 AAU swim team Gambril has coached since 1967 will remain based in Long Beach, and Gambril will return in April of next year to work with the Olympic-class athletes on the squad.

After that, Gambril will look "for the best coach I can find for Phillips."

A year flies by in the wink of an eye, and another football season is on the horizon. Whatever happened to the quiet months in sports?

Faced with a record 21-game season, the Rams are busy preparing for summer training camp which opens Thursday, July 8 for rookies and July 14 for veterans.

Eighty-one players are due to report to Cal State Fullerton — 37 rookies and 44 veterans. Tommy Prothro's charges open their campaign on July 31 in Pro Football's Hall of Fame game at Canton, Ohio.

The Rams face five American Football Conference teams in their seven-game pre-season schedule — Houston, Cleveland, Oakland, San Diego and New England. Holdovers from the National are Dallas and San Francisco.

First combat in the Coliseum is against Dallas on Friday night, Aug. 6, with beer, no less, to wet the fan's appetite, while league play gets under way at New Orleans on Sept. 19. Four of the first five conference games are against Western Division foes.

The Rams have played only once on artificial turf (two years ago in Philadelphia), but this season they encounter the rug four times — Foxboro, Mass., Dallas, Candlestick and Pittsburgh.

BOB HAYES, who has been shopping around in recent weeks, contacted the Rams. His asking price of $75,000 ended all conversation with assistant g.m. John Sanders. Expect the veteran receiver to settle his contract difficulties with Dallas and appear in the Cowboys' lineup Aug. 6 paired with newly acquired flanker Lance Alworth.

Jim Nabors may not be in the Rams' starting singing lineup, however. "We plan to change our format and have different people singing the National Anthem this year," said Ram executive Jack Teele. "We feel the fans will enjoy seeing other celebrities at our games."

Season ticket sales are running four to five per cent ahead of last year's record 46,000. The Rams expect to reach 50,000 this year.

The Rams have made no progress in signing Dennis Dummit as a free agent.

RUNNING BACK Larry Smith is out of the service after receiving an "erroneous induction discharge." Larry has returned to Florida to resume workouts following an off-season operation on his left ankle. He's expected to be 80 to 90 per cent recovered by the time training camp opens.

Roman Gabriel will conduct a two-week football camp for 1,000 boys at Maui July 2-14. Gabriel will be joined by Merlin Olsen, Myron Pottios, Billy Truax, Alvin Haymond, Les Josephson, Pat Studstill, David Ray and trainer Cash Birdwell in the Islands.

WESTERN Division champion San Francisco will be on the road for the first three weeks of the season, and then opens at Candlestick against the Rams on Oct. 10.

William A. (Bill) Barnes, who succeeded the late Dan Reeves as president and g.m. of the Rams, is a native of Australia who saw his first NFL game in 1947.

WHEN WASHINGTON coach George Allen sounded a call to all free agents to try out for the team recently, 296 hopefuls showed up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

There was the 5-6, 149-pound youngster from Hampton, Va., who awakened at 5:30 a.m., kissed his wife and drove 200 miles to the tryout site to display the pass-catching talents that had drawn praises from opponents in touch football games around the neighborhood. He made the same trip one week earlier in order to learn the quickest route.

There was the former JC running back from Pasadena who withdrew $292 from his savings account for the cross country trip when the Redskins responded affirmatively to his request for a tryout. Oddly, a similar request was denied by Allen last year when George was coach of the Rams. The candidate lasted until the afternoon session, then was excused.

Allen selected only nine to return for a closer look. That left 287 with shattered dreams.

USS Hammond wins L.B. Navy Olympic Games

The USS Francis Hammond won the fourth Long Beach Cruiser-Destroyer Olympiad, scoring 179 points to runnerup McKenzie's 144.

The Badger was a point behind in third, the McHenry 119 for fourth and John Paul III for fifth.

Hammond also took the Admiral's Trophy for team spirit and sportsmanship among the 26 ships taking part.

Playboy Club bunnies came out to the Navy Mole at the close of the Wednesday affair and challenged destroyer skippers to a softball game Aug. 25.

It was accepted by Cmdr. R. E. Ekman of the Leonard F. Mason. Proceeds will go to Navy Relief.

SWOON'S FLOWER dropped to the rail soon after the start, saved ground while pocketed and close to the leaders, took the outside for room when approaching the three-sixteenth pole and could make little headway in the final furlong while having a clear path. TIPPING TIME eased grossed and improved her position in the drive. BLOW UP II was out run early. DUKE'S LITTLE GAL broke alertly to take a clear early lead, carried her speed to the upper stretch and weakened. OPENING BID forced the early pace and tired. DELIGHTFUL SUMMER, under a tactful ride, raced unhurried early while saving ground, moved between horses on the far turn, eased to the middle of the track for a clear path when nearing midstretch, was hand urged to the lead when the rider lost his whip and won in full stride. POLKATOUR broke in stride to take a clear early lead, saved ground into the stretch while busy with BETTER NEWS and could not match strides with the winner in the last sixteenth. SUERTE AL COBRE lacked early speed, rallied ground on the final turn, took up and to the outside when blocked midway in the drive and finished with good speed.

BIG DAY FOR LONGSHOTS

Hi Q (on outside) followed earlier lead of longshot Pass Catcher in Belmont Stakes, upset heavily-favored Manta in $107,000 Vanity Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday. Hi Q rewarded backers with $56.40 payoff.

Hi Q snares Vanity Handicap

the pair battled neck-and-neck to the finish, only a bob of the head determining the winner.

Hi Q., who could have been claimed for $8,000 one year ago, was "just another horse in the deal for six" made by Foy in September, 1969.

"The breeder in Kentucky, Mr. William Welch, tried to sell the six at his ranch, but he couldn't sell them," remarked Foy. "I made a half-hearted bid of $25,000 and he accepted it. This purse today ($57,000) was by far the richest I've ever won."

Toro, a 30-year-old Chilean, was exuberant at winning his first hundred-grander in California after two seasons of western riding.

"When we hooked Manta in the stretch I knew she was going to make it, but I guess we didn't get up until the last jump," declared Toro. "They told me that this mare runs better on the outside of horses, so I tried to keep her out there.

"Some horse carried me way out on the last turn and I was wider than I wanted to be, but my mare was really running then."

"She ran good — we just got beat," said the nation's leading rider. "If she only would have had her head down a little more at the wire we probably would have won it.

"She was still going good at the wire, even carrying all that weight. She's a darned game horse."

Second-favored Swoon's Flower, who had raced with success in the East, "had too much speed," according to pilot Jorge Tejeira.

"I couldn't take her back," said Tejeira. "I could have gone to the front early, but it was too soon. She didn't have her big kick when I tried to get through on the inside."

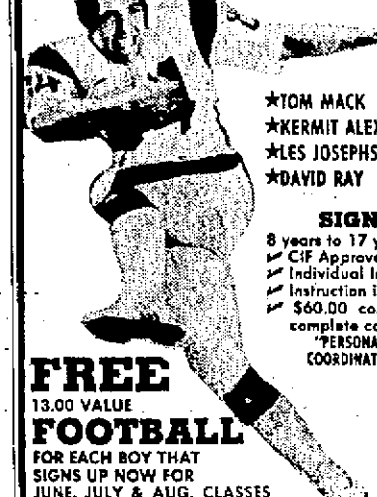

Manta lost no admirers in the defeat, but the once-scored Hi Q. picked up a host of new friends Saturday.

Belmont helps OTB better handle mark

NEW YORK (AP) — The Off-Track Betting Corp. closed its books on wagering in the Belmont Stakes Saturday with a record handle from bettors who made Canonero II a heavy favorite to win racing's triple crown. The total handle was $1,176,898.

OTB officials said the wagering on the 13-horse field topped the previous high of $1,150,686 here last month on the Preakness Stakes and the $1,030,432 for the most famous of the triple crown events, the Kentucky Derby.

THINGS SHEILA WANTS YOU TO KNOW ABOUT WEARING HAIR ANEW

Shiela MacRae

QUESTION: WHY THE HAIR ANEW PROCESS?
ANSWER: Personal, professional and social functions are the primary basis for a man to want hair. He wants to look younger, neater, more virile and more presentable. He wants hair which will not restrict any of his activities - whether this means being in close personal contact or in such activities as swimming, tennis, skiing, etc.

Q: WHEN IS THE BEST TIME TO START WEARING THE HAIR ANEW PROCESS?
A: As soon as you begin the "cover job". People are always saying that a receding hairline or a thinning top makes a man look distinguished. Unfortunately it is a very short step from the "distinguished look" to the "old look." Hair Anew is especially adapted to work in cases of partial as well as complete male pattern baldness.

Q: HOW SECURE IS THE HAIR ANEW PROCESS?
A: Hair Anew is securely positioned. It becomes a part of you and will remain in position when you swim, shower, sleep or engage in any other physical activity. Removing a toupee every night will become an event of the past.

Q: WHAT ABOUT DETECTABILITY?
A: Experience has shown that our well designed hair replacement, even to the professional, is impossible to detect. If anything, people will recognize some change, but the closest they may come will be to ask if you've changed your hair style, lost weight, etc.

Q: WHAT ATTENTION DOES HAIR ANEW REQUIRE?
A: The Hair Anew application requires exactly the same amount of care one should give to one's own hair. That is, you should shampoo at least two or three times per week and use conditioners if you so desire.

Q: HOW IS HAIR ANEW SECURED:
A: The Hair Anew application is held in place by the Dermalok(TM) Anchor, a proven innovation in the hair replacement industry.

Q: IS HAIR ANEW GUARANTEED?
A: Yes.

Some large fish taken in Sierras

This question has been tossed at me in several places where I have met fishermen lately: "What's the matter with Crowley Lake this year?" The answer is "there is nothing wrong with Crowley except colder water and the usual overfishing at the beginning of the season."

An expert angler might add that there are dozens of other lakes and even streams that will yield more fish than Crowley. We must remember that the Crowley season has less than two months to go (it ends July 31) and that it has more fishing pressure in the first month (May) than any other lake in the United States or Canada.

BILL WALTERS
Hauls in 17-14 Brown

A 12-pound, 2-ounce brown was caught the last day in May by Bob Simon of Monterey Park. He was trolling salmon roe off Island Point in the North Channel. It gave him the lead in the big fish contest at Crowley, but larger fish than that have been taken at other lakes this year.

The largest fish this year was caught on the opening weekend at Lower Twin Lake (Bridgeport) by Bill Walters, Alamo, Calif., certainly no novice at fishing for the big ones. He was fishing out of Crags Resort and trolling when he got a 17-14 brown.

Two years ago Walters caught an 18-10 brown while staying at the same resort, which is operated by Dick and Virginia Hutchison. Robinson Creek, which is in the same area, yielded a 21-pound brown last year to an angler who was using plain old garden tackle. The latest big fish to come out of Lower Twin was a 10-5 brown, caught by Jack Sakuma, Altadena, while trolling.

IN A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION Friday, Virginia Hutchison said that May had been one of the windiest months for a trout season opening. Even the first part of last week was cold and windy, but she added:

"This morning (Friday) the weather is perfect for shirt sleeves and perhaps we are going to have summer at last. In addition to the fish that we have told you about previously, there have been one 11-pounder and also a 7-pounder."

I am mentioning these fish because of their size, but don't expect to take very many of that size from the Sierra Nevada lakes on either the eastern or the western slopes. The big browns didn't get that large simply by biting on baited hooks, and they finally came to unhappy ends by making mistakes.

Bridgeport Lake is getting a fish-lifting this month. The West Walker River is getting the same treatment by the Department of Fish and Game. The lake and the river are getting 3,500 Kamloops trout that are surplus brooders and each fish weighs at least 1½ pounds, some more.

One thousand of the fish have been stocked in Bridgeport Lake. The others will be planted in the West Walker from Sonora Bridge, on Highway 108, downstream through Chris Flat and Sawmill Flat campgrounds on Highway 395.

THE RETURN OF YELLOWTAIL to the Coronado Islands has been exceptionally slow. After the San Diego Yellowtail Derby officials put out that "hot" bulletin on May 28, saying that 3,323 anglers had caught 4,854 yellows in seven days, the boats in the Border City fleet drew blanks through the Memorial Day holiday period and haven't done much better since that time.

Thursday's report, the last available at this writing, showed 13 yellowtail for the entire fleet, 8 white sea bass and 68 barracuda, plus some kelp bass, bonito and bottom varieties.

Actually, if one counted the yellows caught by boats out of Long Beach, San Pedro and Newport Beach, the count would have been higher than San Diego's enormous fleet out of three landings there.

Skippers out of Pacific and Pierpoint Landings have been finding some big schools of kelp bass at San Clemente and Catalina Islands and an ocean fisherman in this area might be better off to fish here for kelp bass, which provide just about the finest fillets possible.

The annual California Shad Derby, sponsored by the Yuba City-Marysville Chamber of Commerce began Saturday and will continue through June 20. This is one of the highlights for the Central California fishing season.

If you are a flycaster and have never tried for shad, you have missed a lot of fun because those fish range upward to more than 30 inches in length and five pounds in weight. If you wish to enter the derby, the fee is $1.

CANONERO: TO SELL OR NOT TO SELL?

NEW YORK (AP) — Canonero II's unsuccessful bid for the final jewel in the Triple Crown Saturday did not discourage any of the bidders who have made offers to buy or lease the valuable Venezuelan horse.

"We already have had six telephone calls after the race from people confirming that they still want to buy Canonero II," said Victor Scialom, the accountant and English-speaking spokesman for Canonero II's Spanish-speaking owner, Don Pedro Baptista.

He revealed that five of the confirmations were from United States sources and the other from Venezuela. Two other previous bidders to buy the horse — from Japan and England — have not yet been heard from.

However, he said no decision had been made on the horse's future.

"Nothing has been done," he said.

'Classic double' for Altesse Royale

Combined News Service

Favored Altesse Royale helped jockey Geoff Lewis make English turf history Saturday when she won the $106,965 Oaks at Epsom to complete the fillies' classic double.

Altesse Royale, winner of the season's first classic, the 1,000 Guineas, won going away from Maina and La Manille to become the first filly to perform the double since Sweet Solera 10 years ago.

Lewis achieved a triple never before performed at the Derby week meeting. He took Wednesday's Derby on favored Mill Reef; piloted Lupe to victory in Thursday's Coronation Cup, then brought Altesse Royale through in the final furlong Saturday.

Altesse Royale earned $77,513 for owner Roger Hue-Williams and gave trainer Noel Murless, who also trained Maina, his fourth triumph in the 193rd renewal of the 1½ mile classic.

As the 11-horse field started to enter the stalls, Maina, running for only the second time in her career, unsteaded jockey Les Piggott.

An ambulance attendant had to give the jockey first aid and when Piggott remounted he was seen to be favoring his right hand. Ten days ago he hurt his ribs when thrown during a training gallop at Newmarket.

At Golden Gate, Snow Man won the $21,400 Emeryville stakes by 1¼ lengths over late charging Esquiraza.

Own teammate threat to Unser winning streak

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (UPI) — Al Unser, the Indianapolis 500 winner, will be trying to continue his runaway towards the national big car point championship today, and his top competition in the Rex Mays 150-miler could come from his own team.

Unser has won in Argentina and Phoenix — as well as Indy — this year and has a wide lead in the United States Auto Club standings. Another win would make him almost uncatchable with the USAC season barely underway.

To win, however, he's going to have to beat Joe Leonard, the defending Mays champion and the second driver on his team.

The situation is similar to a year ago when Unser won the 500, but was outdueled by Leonard in the shorter Milwaukee race.

Population soars at Los Alamitos

The population at Los Alamitos Race Course is increasing tremendously over the weekend as horses, trainers, jockeys and stable employees arrive from San Mateo to get ready for the 79-night quarter horse racing season that opens Wednesday evening.

The quarter horse season at Bay Meadows closed Saturday night, and horses which have been campaigning at the San Mateo track will be vanned to Los Alamitos.

Nine hundred horses will be bedded down prior to opening night as they prepare to race for approximately $3 million in purses this summer.

Entries for Wednesday's nine-race program will be taken Monday morning by racing secretary Donald Smith. Feature on the initial card is the $10,000 Inaugural for three-year and older handicap horses going 350 yards.

Tuesday morning, entries will be drawn for Thursday night's races, and they'll take entries for Friday evening's program Wednesday morning.

10th anniversary of Dodger Stadium

Will any pitcher ever pitch four no-hitters again? Will he do it in four successive seasons? Will he do it striking out 13 batters, including the last six? Time alone will tell.

DRYSDALE'S STREAK — 54 consecutive shutout innings — might almost be considered more fantastic than Sandy's no-hitters. The streak was born May 14, 1968, against the hapless Cubs again, then continued through Houston, St. Louis and Houston again.

The next foe was San Francisco. Dodger Stadium

WILLS

KOUFAX

was jammed on May 31 when Drysdale went to tie the all-time string of five consecutive shutouts set by Doc White for the 1904 Chicago White Sox.

Going into the ninth, Big D was one inning away from equaling the mark, but he ran into his greatest dilemma. A walk to Long Beach's Jim Marshall loaded the bases with none out. Dick Dietz, the Giant catcher, was at bat. Then panic — Drysdale's 2-2 pitch hit Dietz!

But umpire Harry Wendelsted, amid great storming by the Giants, ruled Dietz had made no attempt to avoid the pitch. Dietz then flew out, Drysdale got the next two Giants and he had tied the record.

In his next outing against the Pirates. Don set the record and went on to extend his string of pearls to 54 consecutive shutout innings the next game, until the string was broken after 58 2-3 innings.

WHO WILL EVER FORGET Maury Wills in 1962 when he sped past Ty Cobb's record of 96 steals? Cobb had played in 156 games in 1915 when he set his record and no one knew more than Maury that there would be an asterisk beside any mark he set in more games.

So in Maury's 156th game he stole Nos. 96 and 97 against the Cardinals. In the final playoff game against the Giants he pilfered three sacks, running his record total to 104 in a single season.

"But there was pathos affiliated with Maury's final depredations against the Giants that Oct. 3 day in 1962," sighed Dodger vice president Red Patterson.

"That Dodger club, which had led by four games with a week to go, by two games with only three to go, and had been thrown into a tie on the final day in a 1-0 loss to Gene Oliver's homer off Johnny Podres, now suffered behind locked clubhouse doors after the Giants won it all in the third playoff game. It was the utter frustration of one of the game's greatest collapses.

"No one close to the situation as I was could but admire the excellent manner in which Walt Alston handled this situation.

"Respecting the rights of his players to privacy in this tragic moment, Alston made not one, but four press conferences outside the clubhouse. He shouldered the blame for the defeat and took on the most trying public relations chore in his career. The nation's scribes have never forgotten Walt for that."

There it is. You may be a Dodger-hater, you might on occasions have an unkind word to say about Walter O'Malley, and you could be wondering what's happening to the club this season.

But no matter how you color it, can you wrap up much more excitement for any club in their 10 years in a single stadium? I doubt it.

It's your move.

Dodgers hold first oldtimers game today

The greatest names in Dodger history — Campanella, Wills, Hodges, Koufax, Newcombe, Drysdale, Snider, Podres, Furillo, Gilliam, Walker and Reese — will participate in the first Oldtimers Game at Dodger Stadium on Sunday 1 p.m.

Theme of the game is "Dodger Stars of the 1950's vs. Dodger Stars of the 1960s."

The Dodgers will play the New York Mets managed by ex-Dodger Gil Hodges, at 2 p.m.

Never have so many Dodger greats been assembled in one place.

The teams will be managed by two Hall of Famers — Roy Campanella and Casey Stengel.

Campanella will be assisted by Babe Herman, who established all-time Dodger season records in 1930 for batting average, slugging average, runs, hits, extra base hits and total bases.

Stengel, a former Dodger manager and player, will have the assistance from Walter Alston (who may get his second at-bat in a major league stadium) and Dixie Walker.

Ralph Branca: the pitch that no one will forget

Mueller going to third—and breaking an ankle as he slides. Clint Hartung runs for him.

Branca and Carl Erskine are warming up in the Dodger bullpen. Dressen calls for Branca.

"I had pitched a four-hitter for eight innings in the first playoff game Monday," Branca says, "and people don't remember he (Thomson) hit a home run with a man on in the first inning and I ended up losing that game, 3-1.

"The first pitch was a fastball right down the middle and he took it. The next one, I was trying to waste a fastball high and inside and push him back a little. He was looking for a fastball and swung. He just outguessed me."

Thomson, uppercutting the ball, pulled it down the leftfield line, sinking quickly from the overspin.

"I was hoping it would sink fast enough to hit the wall," Branca says, still seeing the ball drop into the seats.

THE HOME RUN was not a towering smash, nor even a Herculean jolt. It was a mockery, a huge practical joke on Branca and the Dodgers. It traveled about 300 feet.

"It's an out everywhere," Branca says, "everywhere but the Polo Grounds. I don't like to say that, even now, and have it sound like sour grapes, but the Polo Grounds was like a football field. Down both lines was like 257 to right and 278 to left. From right-center to left-center was acres."

But the drama did not end there. It continued to haunt Branca. They said the trauma of it all ruined his career.

"An hour, that's all," he says. "The locker room was a drag and I was busted up—you know, why me? — but after I was dressed and out I knew that I had done my best and it just wasn't my day."

Ralph was 25. He won 21 games for Brooklyn when he was only 21, "starting every fourth day and relieving six times."

The strain gave him a sore arm, but he worked it out with heavy bullpen duty and midway in the '51 campaigns started and won 12 games. But then the playoff, the home run, and the most he ever won again was four.

"The next spring I hurt my back in a screwy accident in spring training," Branca says, "and I wasn't able to pitch after that to prove to people the home run didn't bother me. That's my only regret out of baseball."

Branca injured his back — ready? — playing Monopoly in the lobby of the Dodgers' Vero Beach diggings.

"I was out of the game so I got everybody a Coke and put mine under my chair, which was like a folding bridge chair, so I wouldn't kick it over. Then I got up to talk to somebody and when I came back to sit down the chair slid out and I landed right on top of the bottle.

"I hit hard and it tilted my pelvis backward and also the left side went up an inch and a half. Unfortunately, the trainer didn't check me out and get me in alignment right away. I went a whole year that way. I won four games and could barely throw the ball . . . I mean to get it to home plate."

BRANCA HUNG ON for a couple of years, then was traded around to Detroit, the Yankees and back to Brooklyn.

"There were times I shouldn't have pitched," he says, "but I was trying hard to make good and prove that the home run pitch hadn't affected me."

Branca, who was 88-68 lifetime with 12 shutouts in the majors, today is a prosperous insurance man in White Plains, N.Y.

"I led the company in selling insurance last year," he says.

He sees Bobby Thomson frequently.

"He works downtown New York. We've gone on appearances together. I play golf with him."

Later this season they'll meet again in an oldtimers game at Shea Stadium.

"I guess they'll stage it again," Ralph sighs, hinting that he has a secret weapon in mind for Thomson this time.

Now he looks upon his role as destiny.

"It's a plus," he says. "If I'd got the next two guys out, they wouldn't even know today that I'd pitched. Besides, he was gonna hit a home run even if I bounced it up there."

7 title to BYU

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — A seven-run fourth inning, sparked by the three-run homer of Mike Folster, provided the fire power for Brigham Young University Saturday as the Cougars took the NCAA District 7 baseball crown from Big Sky champ Gonzaga, 15-5.

Mayes sparks Spartans to crown

Seventeen-year-old Carol Mayes won the 440-yard dash, and anchored the 440 and 880-yard relays, as her Lakewood Spartans track team scored 117 points to win the girls' division of the district championships at Pomona College Saturday.

Miss Mayes ran a lifetime best in the 440, clocking 57.3. Teamate Sandi Goldsberry won the high jump and the 80-yard hurdles, and Kim Attlesey took the long jump.

In these days of rising hospital costs, you need the extra cash security provided by CNA/210.

Hospital costs have increased over 50% in the last 5 years. And with the high cost of medical care, they're expected to increase even more the next 5 years. Unfortunately, health insurance rarely pays it all. So, the uninsured portion has to come out of your pocket. Medical bills added to the higher cost of household needs can really cause you financial problems. That's why you need the low-cost protection of CNA/210.

$210 is paid directly to you for every week you spend in the hospital. And CNA/210 pays up to two full years. Money you can depend on, no matter what happens.

Think about it! Your present hospital insurance probably doesn't cover the entire cost of things like a private room, x-rays, doctor bills, drugs, whole blood, private nurse, ambulance service, etc. You may have to use your savings to make up the difference.

Why not enroll now in CNA/210 so that you'll have that extra cash when it's needed?

A low-cost solution to high-cost hospitalization from one of the leading insurance companies.

The reasons Continental Casualty Company can offer this low-cost insurance coverage for you and your family are:

1. A 3-day waiting period that acts much like the familiar automobile insurance deductible. Your basic hospital insurance can cover much of this three-day expense. What you need is protection against the really big expenses of a longer stay—four days or more. That's what this plan provides.

2. Savings, which we effect by enrolling a great many people at one time through newspaper advertisements such as this, can be passed on to you. Our costs for processing can be kept to a minimum and this keeps the premium cost at the lowest possible level.

3. Continental Casualty's experience (over 70 years) in health insurance, with experts who design up-to-date insurance protection at minimum rates.

This low-cost insurance protection that pays you tax-free cash can help keep you on your feet, while you're on your back, with money that's yours to spend any way you wish.

CNA/210 pays in addition to all other insurance coverage.

Continental Casualty's cash payment plan should not take the place of other insurance coverage. It provides cash in addition to your present coverage. That's what makes CNA/210 so valuable to you and your family.

Sickness and accidents can strike without warning. That's why you should enroll now.

Don't say it can't happen to you. While you may be in good shape today, both physically and financially, tomorrow, you or any member of your family could be hospitalized for weeks or even months. That's why it's smart to prepare for tomorrow now. Remember, there's no guarantee your health will always be good. With Continental Casualty's low-cost tax-free cash plan, you'll know that if the worst happens, your family's welfare can be protected. $210 per week cash could mean the difference between keeping your bills current and going into debt.

These plans protect you and your family.

Sickness or injury is bad enough, without the added burden of knowing that your family is left without the financial security they've been used to for so many years. With the cost of living so high and still rising, it's a struggle to pay your regular bills at home, let alone hospital expenses not covered by insurance. That's why Continental Casualty offers CNA/210, a low-cost, tax-free cash plan of $210 per week ($30 per day) in addition to any other insurance benefits you might collect. Can you afford to pass up this special offer?

Low premiums remain the same—even as you go up in age.

Once you have enrolled in the CNA/210 plan, say at age 30, your premium will remain in the same age bracket classification, regardless of how long you keep your policy.

Your policy can't be cancelled because of your claims.

Your CNA/210 policy cannot be cancelled nor the rates changed because of your claims, or for any other reason, unless all policies with this same form number in your state are cancelled or changed.

If you are 65 or older, or when you reach 65, your benefits will be reduced by 50%.

What happens if your wife or children become hospitalized?

When you have the Family Plan or Husband-Wife Plan, and your wife is hospitalized, you receive $140 per week for every week she spends in the hospital up to two full years. It can put extra money in the house. Money that can keep you from digging into your savings for extra medical care, a babysitter to take care of the children, a maid to help with the house, or flowers and magazines to help brighten your wife's stay in the hospital.

When you have the Family Plan, and your child or children are hospitalized, you will receive $70 per week tax-free cash for each child as long as they're in the hospital, up to two full years. Since children often need special care, this money could provide them with extras you couldn't otherwise afford.

All of your dependent children are covered between the ages of 3 months through 18 years.

CNA/210 covers pre-existing medical conditions.

Unlike many policies of this type, CNA/210 immediately covers you for any condition—as long as you have not had medical treatment or advice for this condition for 12 months prior to the effective date of your policy.

But, even if you are currently being treated for a condition, your coverage begins immediately 12 months after the last treatment or advice.

In addition, CNA/210 covers all other pre-existing conditions, 24 months after the effective date of your policy.

Helps you remain independent when you reach 65.

Most people over 65 worry about becoming a burden to loved ones. Since it takes your body longer to recover from sickness or injury, you could easily be hospitalized for weeks or even months. Even though Medicare is good, it doesn't cover everything. That's why Continental Casualty is also including people over 65 in this offer. For a low monthly premium, you can receive $105 per week tax-free cash while hospitalized. Now people over 65 can be sure of their independence.

How can Continental Casualty offer such low-cost insurance?

Continental Casualty Company has been in the insurance business since the 1890's. Our vast experience in health insurance, a three-day elimination period before hospital benefits begin, and our desire to offer the best possible health insurance coverage makes CNA/210 possible.

Continental Casualty, with over 13 million policyholders, pays nearly $1 million per day in claims in all departments, and is licensed in all 50 states.

Continental Casualty Company is a member of CNA Financial Corporation, Chicago, Illinois. CNA has assets of over 3 billion dollars, and is one of the nation's largest and most respected companies.

There's a CNA/210 Plan for everybody.

The Family Plan covers husband, wife, and children with one low monthly premium. Future children are also covered (after age 3 months) at no rate increase. This plan also includes maternity benefits.

EXAMPLE: You're between the ages of 18 and 44 with two children. Your Family Plan premium is only $8.75 monthly. Over the years, you have more children. Each child is automatically covered after age 3 months at no increase in premium.

Once you're enrolled, each time you're hospitalized you receive $210 cash per week. ($30 a day) tax-free. If your wife is hospitalized, you receive $140 per week ($20 a day). If your children are hospitalized, you receive $70 per week ($10 a day) for each hospitalized child.

If you're married with no children—or don't want them covered—choose the Husband-Wife Plan. Each time you're hospitalized you receive $210 cash per week ($30 a day). If your wife is hospitalized, you receive $140 per week ($20 a day). This plan also includes maternity benefits.

It's an alternative to going 'straight'

Editor's Note: There is developing in America a second society — an Alternative Society. It's young and full of dreams. But it also has its own wobbly institutions and structures, and it is attracting large numbers of disaffected young people. This dispatch, the first of a series from the AP Special Assignment Team, examines the broader aspects of this new and significant development in American life.

By KEN HARTNETT
Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY — Margaret Mary, 22, tall, lithe and educated daughter of the middle class, hopes someday to make her parents understand why she dropped out.

But not yet; the weekend would be awkward enough.

Her parents were driving in from Kansas Saturday and she had already promised to spend the day with her friends making a pornographic film.

The $75 she'll receive for the film will help Margaret Mary get through another month. And each month brings her closer to the day she can flee the city for the rural commune that lights up her dreams.

Even if that dream falls through, there are others. The Alternative Society has no shortage of dreams and Margaret Mary is a member in good standing. She turned her back on the society that produced her.

Throughout the nation, untold numbers of young white, well educated Americans have made the same decision to live apart from the larger society that spawned them.

Many may prove temporary dropouts, staying off to the side with one foot at least tentatively planted in straight America. They are finding "a way station."

"But there is evidence," wrote sociologists Peter L. and Brigitte Berger in the New Republic, "that for an as yet unknown number, the way station is becoming a place of permanent settlement. For an apparently growing number, there is a movement from youth culture to counter culture. These are the ones who drop out permanently."

THERE'S NO WAY to estimate the size of the Alternative Society's population, but it is clear that thousands of young people have turned their backs on the America of processed food and skyscrapers and eight cylinder cars and little houses in suburbia. They are trying to build something better of their own.

They are engaged, some quite consciously, some spontaneously, in building an Alternative Society with its own values, its own institutions, even its own religions.

So far, they have hardly created a brave new world, but they may have made a beginning.

Journeying through the outposts of this other America — places like Berkeley, Calif.; Madison, Wis.; and Cambridge, Mass. — one finds free universities which offer whatever courses people want to teach or learn, free medical clinics, even free buses and taxicabs.

Berkeley, Madison and Cambridge have long been regarded as radical bastions. Yet one finds the same kind of institutions in places without as rooted a history of confrontation politics.

Albuquerque, N.M., has its free store and a people's garage where profit is not a motive. Atlanta, Ga., has communes, a people's craft center, an underground newspaper. Seattle, Wash., will soon have a movement free clinic staffed by long-haired doctors.

Communes, not only for footloose hippies, but for doctors and lawyers, are springing up in the major cities. Farm communards are

St. Mary's is odds-on race favorite

The 17th annual Night at the Races, sponsored by St. Mary's Hospital Guild, will be off and running Thursday, June 17, at Los Alamitos Race Track.

Hors d'oeuvres will be served to early arrivers from 6 to 7 p.m. in the clubhouse, with post time at 7:45 for the first of nine races.

Tickets at $5 each are available from Mrs. Alfred Stellato, 3930 Gundry Ave.; Mrs. James M. Orman, 2038 Nipomo Ave., or at the hospital gift shop.

Mrs. Orman is chairman of the racing evening. Assisting with arrangements are Mmes. Stellato, Frank LaChance, Arthur Pegg, Frank Pickett, Joseph Rostron, O.B. Bowers and David Cohee.

Mrs. Henry C. Shriver, president, reminds race fans that "Your Support Makes Everyone a Winner."

SINCE THE Guild's founding in 1954, more than one-quarter million dollars has been donated to the hospital. Night at the Races is the group's major fund-raising event. Other projects contributing to the coffers are the hospital gift shop and a Christmas Gift Show.

The Guild currently is working toward a pledge of $200,000 for the building fund.

Rick Rackers open Alfred's

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

A GALA grand re-opening for Restaurant Alfred and a grand and gala party for Rick Rackers took place this week and a grand sum was raised for the Rick Rackers' orthodontia program.

Owner Alfred Cornwall invited Rick Rackers to be his guests at a gourmet dinner party celebrating the reopening of his restaurant after the fire of some months ago. Members promptly sold each other tickets and combined the benefit with a party honoring their provisionals.

The party was elegant from the caviar right down to the French pastries.

The gals took advantage of the formal dress of their husbands to photograph all 48 of the men for publication in the Rick Racker Reporter.

The elegantly attired ladies put on a fashion show all their own. Chairman, Barbara Havekorst, was in a multi-hued china silk gown. Joyce Murchison was in floor length gingham of tiny black and white check with hot pants peeping out. Jane Boyer chose white lace hot pants with a short overskirt. Barbara Enlow was demure in pink organdy with puffed sleeves. Carolyn DuMars chose red and white checked gingham. Carolyn Watkins was glamorous in a floor length plum crepe with a row of see-through daisies at the knee.

Red haired Loraine Waestman was striking in emerald green with jeweled neckline. Shirley Gillis and Charleen Swanson wore white lace pantsuits.

Others taking to the dance floor after dinner included Bill and Bonnie Scott, Jim and Joann Gray (Joann is provisional chairman), Ron and Willa Dulin, Judge Dave and Virginia Eagleson, Robert and Diana Ruchti, Michael and Barbara Newton, Martin and Marge Oberacker, Dr. Howard and Joyce Weyker (Joyce co-chairmanned the party) and Chris and Jane Conway.

Wearing a brand new diamond (from husband Burt) and a gown splashed with daisies, Norma Marter welcomed friends to a cocktail buffet celebrating the Marters' silver wedding anniversary.

Burt's sister, Helen Punch, and her husband, Bob, came from their Washington state home for the party. Burt's mother, Margaret Marter, came to offer congratulations as did Norma's mother, Marie Steinbrecher, and brother, Tom, with his wife, Patt.

Others sampling the two tiered wedding cake were Orland and Marian Ford, Bob and Bev Carver, Dave Johnson, Dick and Loudis Johnson, Bill and Jean Lockett, Jack and Marilyn Teele, Art and Peggy Litman, "J. B." and Mary Lou Dixon, Bruce and Gloria Murray and George and Marilyn Goudge.

The Marters' son, Danny, sent congratulations from Kentucky where he is spending some time with the National Guard, but daughter-in-law, Connie, was on hand along with the Marters' younger son, Jim.

Others included Fred and Marian Bigony, Tom and Doris Stevens, Dave and Bobbie Borge, Scotty and Marilyn Louk, Dr. Don and Joanne Timmons, Bill and Marge Hoppe and Dr. Jim and Mary Thompson.

STILL unpacking from a 15-day 'Jet'-away cruise to New Orleans, Montego Bay and a voyage on the Carla C to exotic places are the Winstons, Bill and Elaine.

Elaine was bedded with a virus the first two days of the voyage so Bill went ashore at Cuarcao and bought her some crystal goblets as a get-well gift.

BACK from a leisurely stay, native style (thatched hut and all), in Tahiti is Keith Einfeldt. Coming home, he scheduled a stop-over in Hawaii to 'rest up' after his vacation.

TRAFFIC JAM on stairway to banquet room at Restaurant Alfred includes, clockwise, Sandie Anderson, party chairman Merry-Lee Chambers, Barbara Johnson and Don Chambers.

AND A SENTIMENTAL journey . . . Just back from attending the wedding of their daughter, Marion, in Winton, Australia, are the John Smukstas. Marion, former Lakewood High School coed and a graduate of CSCLB, married Arthur Jackson, a graduate of Brisbane University. His mother, Mrs. John Jackson, lives in Brisbane.

The newlyweds are currently on a month long tour of 'down under' and will make their home in Winton.

AND A RUBY wedding anniversary (40th) was celebrated at open house for Jack and Esther Broscow at the Buena Park home of their daughter Eileen Powell and her husband, Norman.

Among those toasting the honorees were family from near and far; Harvey and Judy Sherman, George and Sonya Gelfand, Sam and Goldie Fineman, Mel and Sheila Jaffee and all five of the Broscows' grandchildren.

Others in the crowd of 200 well wishers included Cantor Harry Newman and his wife, Fay, Dr. Marvin and Corrine Raynes, Hyman and Ann Horn, Harold and Loy Spizer, Dr. Sidney and Toby Schazer, Henry and Glenna Zack and Dr. Peter and Loraine Moss.

AND ANOTHER anniversary celebration . . .

Sandlarks, Long Beach Auxiliary to Children's Home Society, held a Happy 20th Birthday party at the Park Estates home of Marguerite Speraw.

Eloise Segebarti, director of auxiliaries for the societies, came from Los Angeles to speak to the group, including special guests and charter members Shirley Jones, Martha Ford, Gloria Grandle, Lorena Farnham, Louise Savage, Betty Barden, Billie Lehman and Mary Jane Walker.

Informal modeling of clothes from the Happy Hanger highlighted the afternoon luncheon. Member-models were Mary May Jarvis, Joyce Lewis and Paula Mucciaro.

Bette Gianuzzi is current president of the group and Dorothy Neal is president-elect.

Youth seeks an alternative

struggling with the hard dry earth of New Mexico and the flinty hills of Vermont.

FOOD COOPERATIVES are giving hip communities an alternative to supermarkets.

There are alternative radio stations, such as KTAO in Los Gatos, Calif., where the taped voices of Angela Davis or Jean Paul Sartre lend a radical touch to station identification.

Alternative newspapers are part of the scene in virtually every large city or major university town, providing street hawkers with a small but certain income. Boston even has a radical publishing house.

Sociologist Bennett Berger, author of "Looking for America," says there is ample reason for the spread of alternative institutions.

"There's nothing else to do," he said. "There's a large, an enormous population in the relevant age group whom the society has no room for. They are caught in schools which become warehouses, in an army they want to stay out of, and in businesses which they have trained incapacities for. So they gather together . . ."

They cluster in rickety apartment houses at the edge of university districts or in major cities at the edge of the ghetto or scatter in smaller groups into the countryside.

They are united by the "live and let live" atmosphere of the drug culture and a common contempt for the values of what they call "Plastik Amerika."

Some are emotional wrecks, incapable of making it either in the old society or the new. Some are highly gifted — young people who in another age might have risen to eminence in politics or art or the church.

PSYCHIATRIST Seymour Halleck of the University of Wisconsin believes it is important to see if the alternatives they are devising can work. "What I don't like," he said, "is that it takes some people with a potential for changing the system out of the system.

"That just makes it easier for those who want to keep it the way it is to keep it that way."

Others, notably Yale's Kenneth Keniston, see aspects of the Alternative Society as a source of inspiration for those who share its values but plunge into the larger society anyway. Keniston calls these people infiltrators.

"You are beginning to see a lot of people with new culture values but old culture skills, people who really agree with the most radical criticism of the society but at the same time learning an awful lot about urban management or are going into medicine and becoming public health professionals.

"My own view," Keniston says, "is that social change is more likely to come about through infiltration than through a commune in Colorado, although the commune may be important because it provides inspiration for the infiltrators."

Yet members of the Alternative Society don't see it that way. For them, there is no choice.

MONDAY: The Alternative Society's institutions — all young and all dependent on "straight" society.

THE VACANT PLAY YARD of Lakewood Elementary school is lonely, unused, overgrown with weeds . . . but, it could be transformed into an area of rollicking fun for handicapped youngsters — with a little help!

This school yard needs children

By ROBIN HINCH
I.P-T Staff Writer

Neurologically handicapped children read like this: Thec atl ikesmi lk (the cat likes milk), and they spell like this: eG (go), eit (cat), Bir (Boy). They are restless, unpredictable and disruptive.

They have unique visual, auditory, motor coordination, emotional and learning problems, which have to be handled in a special way. They need help.

But the help hundreds of parents hoped would open up to their troubled youngsters this summer seems to be slipping through their fingers.

A Developmental Learning Center, under the sponsorship of the non-profit REAL Education Foundation of Long Beach, has been scheduled to open at the now unused Lakewood Elementary School on June 21. But unless about $20,000 can be raised between now and then, these handicapped children with very special problems, are not going to receive the special help they need.

"If 100,000 people would donate just $1, we'd be set for the whole year," said Mrs. Rose Yates, chairman of the board of the REAL Education Foundation and mother of a pretty, 14-year-old neurologically handicapped daughter.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS say they have special programs, but, in fact, they offer nothing for children like my Susie," Mrs. Yates said. "If the children aren't crippled or mentally retarded, the schools simply don't know what to do with them."

The Development Learning Center, she explained, will provide multi-disciplinary instruction designed specifically to help combat the many learning problems these children face.

The program is open to children of all ages, with special priority for adolescents. "These kids are 15, have no friends, are three years behind and are reading on a second grade level," Mrs. Yates said. "They are not stupid and they want desperately to learn. They deserve a chance. And this school is their last chance."

The Center has equipment, staff and a school building. But it has no money.

"It just seems like nobody cares about kids," Mrs. Yates said in desperation. "There seems to be money for every other project in this city — even money for a ship. But nothing for our kids."

Interested parents and donors can contact Mrs. Yates at the foundation headquarters, 3808 Pine Ave.

USC starts art grants

The University of Southern California has initiated a program to aid young persons of minority groups who have special talents in music, drama, cinema and fine arts.

The Awards in the Arts program will expand educational opportunities for those who wish to major in these fields. Tuition awards will be made to those who can meet USC admission requirements but lack funds to enroll.

A second objective is to provide financial assistance for minority youngsters below college age to enable them to take part in the arts programs.

Awards in the Arts is a project of USC's Center for Urban Affairs which is directed by Dr. Jerome Milliman of Palos Verdes. Prospective donors and applicants may obtain more information by writing or phoning Dr. Barbara Gardner at the center, University Park, Los Angeles.

WERLE, designer to the stars, reflects on his part in recent International Beauty contest.

Designer judges beauties after the fact

(Special to I, P-T Life/Style)

"So you see, clothes do not necessarily make the woman!"

Handsome California fashion designer, Dan Werle, said it with a broad grin.

Causing the comment was the recent Miss International Beauty contest in Long Beach when the designer joined the judge's panel at invitation of the Mayor and Japan's Beauty Congress.

"I never would have voted Miss New Zealand the winner if I hadn't seen her in her bathing suit," he said. "Her national costume and evening gown did not do her justice at all. It wasn't until I saw her in her swim-suit that it was possible to view her magnificent proportions. From then on she had my vote for first place.

"Proportion — and individualism. These are the basic clues for fashion today. Women must dress according to their types. I can't help but think that more of those lovely girls from all over the world would have given the judges far greater problems in voting if they had conferred with a couturier for advice before the competition.

"The great impact of fashion today is that the woman must certainly know her type — and she must dress to flatter herself.

"For the first time in the fashion schism, women can do the most for themselves. Even the long skirt is no longer a fashion dictate.

"I FOUND THAT judging the Miss International contest was a supreme challenge in beauty concept. This is principally because Americans do not always have the knowledge of what is representative of beauty standards in all countries. India, Japan, Thailand, Germany, South America, the Philippines all have their own basic concepts of beauty and their own style as women.

"Miss New Zealand, for instance. She has a long, supple body. If I were designing for her, I would give her the casual sportive look, even in evening clothes. She has such a completely natural beauty, she should never wear anything that would distract from it.

"Miss Thailand was a gorgeous exotic beauty and dressed very well for it. She knew how to flatter herself. She dressed exotically. So did Miss Philippines — a bit flashy, but it became her.

"Miss Britain was well aware of how to get herself up. And that hair! Exquisite! I don't believe her smile was as free as it might have been, and that could have eliminated points in her favor.

"Miss American Beauty had great legs. Now there's the perfect type for hot-pants and minis. I'd keep her in them.

"I WAS SAD that last year's winner wore black. It made her look mature, and the maxi-length was not flattering to her. Women should not try to be obviously fashionable. They must think more of themselves, of their own type, and wear what becomes that type most. I keep repeating this for emphasis.

"I was sorry not to see Miss Italy come further in the competition. She had great sex-appeal and knew how to use it effectively. She told me she really wants to become a movie star — and she should.

"In speaking of freedom in dressing, I want to stress that with every new freedom there is responsibility. Now that the couture is not making decisions about how women dress, they must make their own — wisely. They must study themselves and make the right ones. And above all, they must not sacrifice their femininity. Men want to look at women as women — not as clowns or kooks.

"I hope today's woman will remember the soft fabrics — choose line and fabric that move and drape her body gracefully — with above all, good fit and flattery. And I hope she will remember that a suggestion of sex and mystery is far more exciting than the come-on with a WOW-ee!"

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Dentist pulls recipe from sea

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

From all appearances, he knows his onions! He knows his drills, picks, novocain and "squishers", too! Today's Chef of the Week is George A. Alexander, D.D.S.

Born in San Francisco, he made a thorough tour of mid-California before landing in Long Beach for a permanent stay.

Alexander's dad, an electrical engineer in the big Northern city of San Francisco, decided to move his family to the San Joaquin Valley, near Bakersfield, where he not only went into business for himself, but bought a ranch, as well.

Alexander had decided at an early age to become a dentist. To attain that goal, he graduated from Fresno State College and the University of California Dental School. He set up shop in Long Beach in 1945.

A member of the Belmont Shore Lions Club, he is also active in the Harbor, Southern California and American Dental Associations, and the Academy of International Dentistry.

He and his wife, Grace, have a daughter and son-in-law, Kathy and Jim Lingle.

Time available, Alexander works on his collection of Bonsai Trees (Japanese) or heads for deep sea fishing — especially for marlin, off the coast of Mexico.

Quite naturally his recipe would include a seafood. But we doubt very much that he personally fetched these clams, up from the deep. Here it is . . . Steamed Clams Portuguese.

STEAMED CLAMS PORTUGUESE

3 dozen Little-neck clams
2 cloves garlic
2 or 3 scallions
¼ teaspoon oregano, crushed
Pinch of ground Cumin
Tiny sprig of rosemary
¼ cup fresh parsley, chopped
⅓ cube butter or 3 tablespoons olive oil
¼ cup dry white wine (sauterne or dry sherry)

Scrub clams thoroughly with brush. Place in 4 quart sauce pan with one cup water.

Chop garlic and scallions (finely). Saute in butter or olive oil. Add herbs and cook 2 or 3 minutes. Add parsley and wine — cook 2 or 3 minutes more.

When clams start to steam, add herb mixture. Cover and let steam until clams open (approximately 4 to 5 minutes).

Serve with sourdough bread or garlic toast.

A demitasse cup of broth adds the highlight.

GEORGE A. ALEXANDER, D.D.S.

AT WIT'S END

Garage sale buffs can't resist cut-rate garbage

By ERMA BOMBECK

What is faster than a speeding bullet? More powerful than a locomotive? Able to leap tall buildings in a single jump?

Women at garage sales, that's who.

I had to see Garage Power firsthand to believe it. Before moving out of state, I found myself with a few excess trinkets. (Who am I kidding? The attic was so full of junk the county couldn't get the door open to condemn it.)

My girl friend, Esther, said, "You are a natural for a garage sale."

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Because you are cheap."

"I don't think you understand," I sniffed, "that spreading one's personal wares out in a garage for public exhibition is not only crass, it smacks of being tacky."

"I made 32 bucks off of my junk," she said.

"Why didn't you say so?" I asked excitedly. "Get the card table and let's get started."

THE GARAGE sale began at 9 a.m. By 7:30 a.m., I had 15 cars parked on the driveway, 18 on the lawn, two in a ditch and a Volkswagen trying to parallel park between two andirons in my living room.

They grabbed and bought anything that wasn't pumping water, cemented in the ground, growing from seed or spit sparks at them when touched.

At one point I tried to shove through the crowd with a package in my hand. A woman grabbed it from me and said, "I'll give you 35 cents."

"No, really," I stammered, "This isn't . . ."

"Forty cents," she said, grabbing it, "and that is my last offer."

It is the first time anyone ever paid me 40 cents for my garbage.

BY 4 P.M. I WATCHED tiredly as a woman tried to coax my husband into her trunk.

"Esther," I said, "this is the most incredible sight I have ever seen."

"What's in that package under your arm?" she said.

"It's nothing," I hesitated.

"It's mildewed laundry," she shouted. "How much did you pay for it?"

"Thirty-five cents, but some of it still fits."

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner feels that I should have bid six diamonds and I feel he should have. Who's right?

As it turns out, six diamonds would have made, but I went down in six clubs.

Answer: I am afraid that you've asked me the wrong question. Six diamonds is a very poor slam and one you surely wouldn't want to reach. Your question should have been, "How do we stop at five diamonds?"

Husband needs to grow up!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Joe (not his real name) and I have been married almost two years and we have a problem I am sure many other married couples have.

Every time my sister and her husband ask us to go out with them, I almost have to get down on my hands and knees to get Joe to go. Then he sits like a bump on a log all evening and never opens his mouth except to say, "Let's go home." This has happened so many times, I'm surprised they still ask us to go out with them.

Abby, Joe can be good company if he wants to be because he has proven it with other couples. I am not crazy about all his relatives, but I try to be good company when I'm with them.

Joe knows how much this hurts me. Why does he act this way, and what can I do about it?

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: He acts that way because he doesn't enjoy the company of your sister and her husband, and that's his way of punishing you for insisting he go out with them. Mature adults realize that there are some social situations (and business, too) that are a drag, but for the sake of the spouse, one should try to enter into the spirit of it and have a good time.

Your husband figures if he makes you miserable enough, you'll go only where he wants to go. He's selfish and childish. Appeal to his sense of fair play, and help him grow up.

DEAR ABBY: "No Sleep in Hartford" took the words right out of my mouth! My husband also snores like a 300-pound water buffalo. And when he snores, he whistles, snorts, groans, grunts and gets rhythm. You name it! He has refused to see a doctor about it on the grounds that a wife should consider herself "blessed" to have her husband beside her, asleep. (No woman married to a man who snores like mine could consider herself "blessed," I promise you.)

Separate bedrooms is not the answer. We live in a long ranch style house, and I would need to be at least a block away to escape the noise and I am not exaggerating. He is overweight and has high blood pressure to boot and has no interest in me sexually. Can you top this?

NO SLEEP (OR ANYTHING ELSE) IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for the advice you gave me. I took it and am now getting professional counseling from a very good psychologist. She knows I can't afford to pay her because I go to school and have no job, but instead of money, she lets me baby-sit with her children.

DIORAMA by Shiro Ikegawa (left) is one of four large constructions which the artist terms "environmental intaglios." The artist-printmaker also has drawings on exhibit at Long Beach Museum of Art.

DON NELSON'S "Union Station" is one of 51 paintings, done in various techniques, now displayed at LBMA. Most of the works are small—this one is 16 by 20 inches.

Diverse shows at LBMA

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Two young California artists will attend a reception to open exhibits of their work today from 2 to 4 p.m. at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Shiro Ikegawa will show environmental intaglios and drawings; Don Nelson is exhibiting 51 paintings. The displays will continue through July 11.

An assistant professor at California State College, Los Angeles, Ikegawa was born in Tokyo in 1933. After studying at Tokyo University of Arts, he earned his M.F.A. degree from Otis Art Institute in Los Angeles in 1961.

Unlike any work previously shown at the Long Beach Museum are his "environmental intaglios" or diorama formations, somewhat like displays in Los Angeles Museum of Natural History. There are four of these constructions in the main gallery of LBMA. Ikegawa says that he has created the diroamas "from materials that exists as useless by-products of our society" and that he hopes to replace the values of these substances, which represent all human experiences, with his constructions.

Ikegawa has had many one-man shows. Among his commissions are those for International Graphic Art Society, Ferdinand Roten Galleries, Verde-Stewart Gallery, the Countainer Corporation of American and a Great Ideas of Eastern Man series for Time Magazine in 1966. He is represented by the Comsky Gallery in Los Angeles and the Martha Jackson Gallery in New York.

TOTALLY different in style are the 51 paintings of Don Nelson which share the museum show. Nelson, in these latest works, used photographic images on contact sheets, calling on friends, family members, beach scenes and landscapes for subjects. Nelson uses acrylic, oil, pastel, casein, pencil and even dirty turpentine to complete his paintings.

A native of New Jersey, the artist studied at USC, UCLA and the School of Fine Arts in Los Angeles. Art is not his only forte — he has been jazz musician, writer and photographer.

LBMA DIRECTOR Jason Wong has received official notice that he has been appointed chairman of a committee for the accreditation commission of the American Association of Museums. This will entail visits to musuems across the country to observe, examine, study, inspect and determine whether or not the museum is carrying out its affairs with professional competence.

REGISTRATION by mail or in person for children's summer art classes at LBMA will take place Saturday. In person sign-ups are scheduled from 10 a.m. to noon. Classes for 4 to 6 year-olds will be held June 21 to Aug. 9; for 5 to 9 year-olds from June 22 to Aug. 5; and for 10 to 12 year-olds from June 21 to Aug. 9.

Junior workshops for 12 to 16 year-olds are slated June 25 to Aug. 6. Sessions for 17 to 20 year-olds are to be on the same dates at different hours. Adult workshops also will be offered at various times.

For full information, call the museum.

WITH A PREVIEW reception today from 2 to 4 p.m., Gibraltar Savings and Loan Association, 232 Long Beach Blvd., introduces an exhibit of Long Beach senior high school art. Students won more than $600 in awards.

The public may view the work of these young artists Monday through Aug. 31, Mondays through Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Fridays from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

IN ECLECTIC STYLE, NELSON DEPICTS "ARTIST AND FAMILY"

"GOING, GOING—GONE!" will ring out today in Furman Park, Downey, as the auctioneer puts Art Unlimited on the block. Beginning at 12:30 p.m. at the bandshell, the auction will offer fine paintings, sketches, crafts and many other items. Both professional and amateur artists have consigned work for the big sale.

This is the 14th annual art competition sponsored by the Downey Museum. This year it is in the guise of a Craft Faire, Renaissance Style.

RICHARD LOGSDON'S paintings, drawings and sculpture may be seen at Restaurant Alfred, 700 E. 45th St. through Saturday. The restaurant is having a grand reopening following a New Year's Day fire. Logsdon won an award in the recent annual juried show at Long Beach Museum of Art.

Smith to manage L.B. Symphony

Topper Smith has been appointed manager of Long Beach Symphony Orchestra and will assume active duties at the end of the summer. Announcement of the appointment was made this week by Harry J. Krusz, president of Long Beach Symphony Association.

A native of Long Beach and longtime resident here, Smith currently is living in Vienna, Austria, where he has spent the past three years developing an artists management bureau. More than 50 American singers and conductors perform in opera houses of Germany, Switzerland and Austria under his management.

To prepare and present young artists for overseas auditions and engagements, Smith lectures each spring on 35 conservatory and university music school campuses across the nation.

In addition to his private management firm, he is president of the Salzburg Theater and Concert Agency, International Inter-Media Associates, and Klaus Sattler Productions of Vienna which produces music for American radio and television commercials and documentary films.

Other European activities have included a three-year stint on the teaching staff of the Summer Vocal Institute at Freiburg, Germany, sponsored by the American Institute of Musical Studies in Dallas, Tex.

A 1954 GRADUATE of Cal State, Long Beach, Smith taught journalism, speech and debate at Millikan High School and in Torrance and Fullerton for eight years before joining the CSLB staff in 1964 as coordinator of student affairs.

While at the college, he was advisor to the Interfraternity Council, Forty-Niner Days, Homecoming, and many campus cultural projects. He founded the outstanding Concerts in the Grove summer series. Smith also has managed the Compton Civic Symphony Orchestra and was program director of KUSC-FM.

A professional singer, he has sung with the Roger Wagner Chorale, Los Angeles Chamber Singers, Camerata dei Musici, the Glenn Cole Chorale and the Schola Cantorum. As choir director, he served at First Congregational Church of Los Angeles, Vienna Community Church in Austria and, in Long Beach, at St. John's Lutheran, Los Altos Methodist and Belmont Heights Methodist churches. He also has been tenor soloist at many Southern California churches.

IN LONG BEACH this week to accept his new appointment, Smith said, "As one of my goals always has been to be able to work full time to aid in developing professional music in my home town, I am looking forward to this new position with a great deal of enthusiasm.

"During my three years of traveling around the United States and Europe, I have found that Long Beach has an outstanding music education program in the schools. There also are many adults trained and interested in the arts.

"One of our responsibilities will be to enlarge the opportunities for talented young people to develop their abilities so that this city can join the mainstream of major U.S. cultural centers in the very near future."

Previous commitments will keep Smith in Europe until mid-August when he will return to Long Beach. He will retain his artist management service, delegating many of his European duties to colleagues.

Stuttgart Ballet in brief L.A. engagement

Los Angeles will be one of 12 cities to see the internationally acclaimed Stuttgart Ballet when the company plays the Shrine Auditorium July 1 through 4.

The Stuttgart opened its American tour with an unprecedented six weeks at New York's Metropolitan Opera House. It was received so enthusiastically that it will return there later in the season for an additional two weeks.

The Shrine engagement of six performances will include two premieres by the company in Los Angeles. The schedule is: "Romeo and Juliet" (Cranko-Prokofieff), full length, July 1 and 2; "Eugene Onegin" (Cranko-Stolze, after Tchaikovsky), full length, matinee and evening, July 3; and double bill local premieres of "Carmen" (Cranko-Fortner, after Bizet) and "The Seasons" (Cranko-Glazounov) at matinee and evening performances, July 4.

HEADED BY director John Cranko, the company of 100 will visit Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Sacramento, Cupertino, San Diego, Garden State Art Center in New Jersey, and the new Wolftrap Festival near Washington, D.C.

Since Cranko assumed its directorship in 1960, the Stuttgart Ballet has achieved world-wide recognition as one of the leading companies of Europe.

Its international roster of principal dancers, drawn from 20 countries, is headed by Brazilian prima ballerina Marcia Haydee and California-born Richard Cragun.

School year ends on musical note

Sixteen elementary school glees with 850 singers, a 100-piece orchestra, a 75-piece band and 170 first year violinists will be heard in the Biennial Elementary Festival Concert at Municipal Auditorium Convention Hall Wednesday at 7:45 p.m.

Louis A. Cook Jr., director of elementary schools, Long Beach Unified School District, will extend greetings.

The performance will be the culmination of teaching by the special music teachers under direction of Alice Gallup, consultant, fine arts education.

Participants will receive admission tickets, good until 7:30 p.m. After that time, the public will be admitted free.

TODAY at 3 p.m. in Lakewood High School Auditorium, Joe Burger will direct the All-District Elementary School Orchestra and Varde Van Voris will direct first year cello players in concert. These groups will be assisted by the All-District Junior High School Orchestra under direction of Fred Ohlendorf. The public is invited.

LAS VEGAS — The only thing that keeps this glittering casino capital from blowing its collective fuse every night is proximity to the giant power generators at Hoover Dam on nearby Lake Mead.

More than 43 miles of neon tubing and two million light bulbs literally fill the air with electricity in the downtown Casino Center streets. At least another million more neon-trimmed bulbs illuminate the fabled high-rise Strip beckoning like a jeweled finger to the Southland, 300 miles distant.

This dazzling spectacle and its staggering monthly electricity bill call attention to Las Vegas' claim as entertainment capital of the world. On any given night there are more performers, celebrities and players concentrated here than anywhere else.

The show goes on daily, with live performances on stage starting in the evening hours and repeating in the lounges and hotel theaters into the wee hours. Casino doors never close, with gaming tables operating in shifts around the clock.

AND YET with the coming of the dawn, when the lights blink off again, there is another side of this desert resort.

For sturdy survivors of the night life, there are sports galore — horseback riding as well as playing, swimming, boating, golf and hunting and fishing the year around. Skiing by water and snow alternate according to the season.

Southern Californians now can enjoy the best of both these worlds direct from Long Beach Airport via Western Air Lines' new daily Flight 369, non-stop to McCarran Field on the Las Vegas Strip.

Flight 369 leaves the Long Beach terminal at 8:05 p.m., arriving in Las Vegas at 8:50 p.m., with time to spare for a late dinner show.

Western's travel experts recommend the midweek flights for a mini-vacation or a longer stay in Las Vegas, assuring quicker hotel reservation service and a wider selection of entertainment during the less-hectic period between weekends.

The return to Long Beach Airport on Western's jet Flight 367 leaves Las Vegas at 8:20 p.m., arriving 45 minutes later.

It surprises many visitors to discover the outdoors beyond Las Vegas' sparkling perimeter. The city sits like a center target in a circle of natural wonders including Grand Canyon, Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon, Death Valley and the Lake Mead National Recreation Area.

THERE ARE bus tours, air tours and boat tours emanating from Las Vegas, many at nominal cost. The closest, and one of the most popular, is a tour of Hoover Dam, which includes a trip into the depths of its pulsating machinery 700 feet below the level of the water it stores.

Charter boat tours leave Lake Mead Marina for water views of the picturesque mountain areas on the Arizona side. Boats are available for hire for bass and trout fishing, open all year. Visitors can obtain a five-day fishing license for $5.

There is no closed season for hunting the big desert jackrabbits which abound in the hills and flatlands. In the fall, there are mule deer, elk and mountain sheep to lure the big game hunter, as well as waterfowl shooting on an arm of Lake Mead.

Grand Canyon tours may be arranged in Las Vegas by bus or air. Bus tours require 48 hours for the round trip, and the air tours fly the length of the canyon and back in only a few hours. For 75 miles of the 300-mile flight, the plane flies below the rim, affording excellent scenery on either side.

And come evening, there are guided bus tours for the budget-conscious, which allow the first-time visitor to see more of Las Vegas' night life than he would if left to his own devices.

THE DELUXE night club package runs about $20 and includes a complete dinner and show downtown, a tour of Casino Center and the Strip, and a midnight show in a Strip theater while sipping a cocktail or two.

Another night club party tour for about half the price includes a lounge show with cocktails, a tour of downtown with a ride on the glass elevator at the 26-story Mint, and a tour of the Strip capped by entertainment at a late show in a main showroom.

New routes for Vistadome

A Vistadome train of four luxury cars — two specially designed passenger coaches, a Vistadome car and an observation-dining car — has been put into service, between Chihuahua and the Pacific coast at Los Mochis-Topolobampo in Mexico.

The route crosses and bores through the Sierra Madre mountian chain.

The Chihuahua - Pacific Railway announced that the train will leave Chihuahua on Mondays, Thursday, and Saturdays, and make the return run each Tuesday, Friday and Sunday.

Fly to Canada, sightsee by train

Through the cooperation of Air Canada and the Canadian National Railways, complete package vacations are now available including first class hotels and sightseeing trips.

These tours combine the advantages of both modes of travel, according to H. J. Chapman, Air Canada's district manager in Los Angeles.

Air Canada's daily service from Los Angeles connects with the CN departure schedule, making possible daily tours to Eastern Canada throughout the summer and frequent departures to the famed Gaspe Peninsula and the Maritime Provinces.

These unescorted tours also offer triangle routing allowing passengers to tour Canada in either direction, going or returning on Air Canada.

Information is available from your travel agent, Air Canada or Canadian National Railways.

SNORKELING OFF GREAT BARRIER REEF OF AUSTRALIA
. . . part of wilderness adventure tour of South Pacific

Camping enthusiasts offered wilderness trip travel

A unique travel program has been unveiled that is designed for the outdoor enthusiast called Camp International.

Camp International was originated by Lou Elliott, the founder of the American River Touring Association, the largest nation wide operator of "White-Water" trips down wilderness rivers in rubber rafts.

Elliott's 18 years of experience in wilderness vacation planning led to the realization that there was very little offered in the way of international travel programs for the growing number of campers, hikers, river runners and people who feel a closeness to the wilderness, and a concern for the world's ecology.

Camp International offers an unusual 29-day guided camping program to Fiji, Queensland and the Great Barrier Reef.

THE TRIP features a 6-day land and river expedition in Fiji, where some of the highlights will be rafting down the Nasekawi River on native bamboo rafts, and camping in a Fijian village, an 11-day land expedition in Queensland, the Parkland of Australia; through the Tamborine Mountains of Lamington National Park, with side trips to the Gold Coast, through the Hinterland to Toowoomba on the Rim of the Great Dividing Range, an overnight stay at the Fringe of the Outback, and on to Carnarvon National Park.

The highlight of the trip will be a 10-day ocean voyage along the Great Barrier Reef in the Whitsunday Island Group, camping on the beaches of the various islands, sunning, swimming, snorkeling and visiting the spectacular reefs for fossicking among the coral pools at low tide.

The trip is designed to provide a blend of wilderness exploration, river rafting, observation of the flora and fauna of the areas, and an opportunity to enjoy personl-to-person contact with the fascinating people.

The total cost of the trip is $1,650 per person, with four departures scheduled: July 3, Aug. 7, Oct. 9 and Dec. 11. Further information is available from ARTA, 1016 Jackson St., Oakland, 94607.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Buy car in Europe and save

By STAN DELAPLANE

"Is it better to rent a car while we are overseas or buy one? How much would we save?"

The bigger the car you buy, the more you save. Not a huge saving: Say VW fastback, $200; a plush Mercedes, $800.

I mean that's how much less it costs you after paying shipping charges home, duty, insurance, cleanup charges, licensing. You'll be surprised how many charges are tacked on.

The big saving is in using the car in Europe without paying rent. A rent car is going to nudge you at least $45 a week. How long will you use a car?

THE DIFFERENCE in buying price is impossible to figure exactly. Depends on what your local dealer will do for you. Better trade-in? Will he knock off a few hundred because he wants to unload fast? Better deal on options? Anyway, you won't LOSE money buying abroad.

Buy the car here for delivery overseas. Doesn't cost anymore. If something goes wrong, you have somebody to scream to.

(Your local dealer will do it for you. Pan American Airways is in the car selling business. So is the AAA. Auto Europe — offices in most big cities — is big in sales, rentals, leases.)

Whoever sells to you should arrange the shipping home. The paperwork for you would be frightful.

THEY SHOULD arrange your "green card" insurance. It's your car's passport. Can't cross a border without it.

They should get you their export model. Their home models don't have many things on them that are required in the States.

I've bought two cars in Europe — doing it this way. Worked out fine for me. And I THINK I saved money.

"Can we exchange our home for the summer with somebody in Europe? How do you go about it?"

Try Pan American. The world's most experienced airline is getting some new experience in house exchanges. I have an idea they may be very good because they have offices all over Europe.

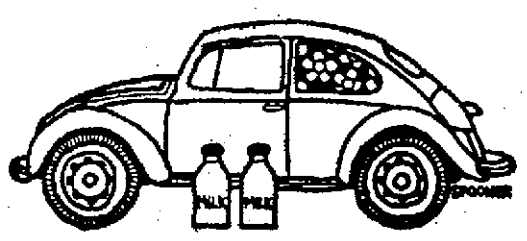

One that's been in business a long time (but I never used them so I don't know): Vacation Exchange Club, 550 Fifth Ave., New York City. You pay so much (not much) for a classified ad listing your home. Then you get the list and shop what other people are offering.

"What about the dollar exchange problem we've been reading about . . .?

I just bought $50 worth of Swiss francs as an emergency fund. But I'm carrying dollar travelers checks for my main money.

You ought to carry a few $1 and $5 bills in a foxy pocket. Last minute at the airport, you've cashed in your local money. You're in the departure lounge. Your plane is delayed. Now you want a drink or some coffee.

You don't want to cash a travelers check. That's when the $1 bill comes out.

See France by day, night

Fourteen pleasure-planned group tours of France are announced jointly by Olympic Airways and American Airlines, in association with Gramercy Travel System, Inc., New York tour operator.

The tours, scheduled for June through October, include "nights on the town," as well as full schedules of day events.

The 15-day tours are geared to single men and women. Seven of the 14 scheduled departures are restricted to singles only. Of these, three tours are for singles under 35 while the other four are open to singles of all ages. The remaining seven departures are for couples and singles of all ages.

Ten French cities — Paris, Nancy, Lyon, Nice, Monte Carlo, Avignon, Carcassonne, Toulouse, Bordeaux, and Tours — are on the itineraries.

HIGHLIGHTS OF the tours, in addition to sightseeing in all the areas visited, include: attendance at the Lido, an evening at a Left Bank cave, a visit to Versailles, a discotheque in Nice, the Monte Carlo Casino, a Bordeaux cabaret, Sound and Light at Chenonceaux, a Paris farewell dinner, and unlimited wine with every dinner.

Each tour will have an experienced escort who is thoroughly familiar with the history, customs, people, and places to be visited.

Three days will be spent in Paris, which will include an excursion to the Palace of Versailles, after which the group will travel by private motorcoach to the other cities.

Costs, including air fare, start at $555. Brochures are available from Olympic Airways, Dept. ST, 888 Seventh Ave., New York, N.Y.

Road atlas now in 2 volumes

Rand McNally has published a new "Road Atlas of Europe" this spring as a "companion" to the 47th annual edition of its familiar "Road Atlas of the United States, Canada and Mexico." Both atlases retail for $2.95 at newsstands and book stores.

The Europe atlas offers detailed road maps of 33 European countries, including the Western Soviet Union. Although somewhat smaller in format, the Europe guide shows such things as mountain relief and major railways along with various classes of highways and connecting roads.

Travel more, spend less

By MARIE MATTSON

Would you like to take frequent trips? But do you feel you can't afford to? Read on to discover how travel can be less expensive than a weekend "on the town" at home.

Following are some of the best promotional prices now being offered by airlines:

• Triangular fares between east and west coast cities give you a variety of stopovers. It's cheaper to fly between California and Miami by way of Mexico City than by going direct. The same is also true between Los Angeles and New York; from San Francisco it's a mere $10 additional. Stopovers in Mexico City are offered on Eastern and Western airlines.

Other cities that can be visited on triangle fares between the northeast and west coast include Miami at $11 extra on National and New Orleans at $11 extra on Delta.

• Hawaii and Alaska are included on a special triangle trip offered by Western Airlines out of western and southern cities. In many cases, cost is less than regular round-trip fare to Alaska alone.

• YOU CAN visit the Caribbean via Delta on several jet circle trips. It costs only about $50 more to include Puerto Rico, Jamaica and New Orleans when you fly between California and New York.

• A stopover in New Orleans adds a trifling $1 to your fare between Chicago and California.

• On round-trip tickets between west coast cities and New York, American Airlines will let you add Puerto Rico for just $25 extra.

• Luck is with you for a stopover in Las Vegas. Between Los Angeles and Chicago or east coast cities, cost is a paltry $1 on TWA; between Los Angeles and Houston, $1 on National. Between California and Minneapolis, stopover in either Las Vegas or Reno costs $6 on Western.

• Cheaper than bus travel is the $10.80 fare on PSA's Midnight Flyer between San Francisco and Los Angeles. No reservations are accepted for the one-hour flight; departure from Los Angeles is at 12:05 a.m., from San Francisco at 12:10 a.m. Midnight Flyers also serve Sacramento and San Diego.

• A 2½-DAY weekend fare is offered by Texas International Airlines for $43.15. This gives unlimited travel to 64 cities in six southern and southwestern states; exceptions are Los Angeles, Denver and Salt Lake City. During just one weekend you could dine in New Orleans, attend Ringling Bros. Circus in Houston, visit the spa at Hot Springs, Ark., and shop for Indian handicrafts at Santa Fe.

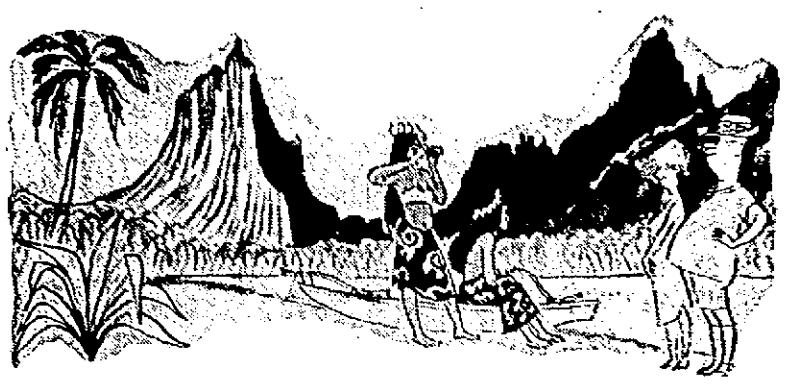

• Adult standby fares save up to 40 per cent of regular coach fares. Standby passengers are boarded after all persons with reservations have enplaned.

These fares are available between only certain pairs of cities. American Airlines, TWA, United and Continental offer standby on night coaches; on Frontier Airlines standby fares are applicable at any time.

Exciting vacations and long weekend trips can be less expensive than staying at home.

Just remember you can visit New Orleans, Houston or Las Vegas for only $1. What can you do in your own city for that price?

Hints for Tokyo visitor

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is excerpt from column in Japan Times replying to query from a young Japanese woman visiting Tokyo for first time and wanting suggestions on things to do and see.

By JEAN PEARCE

If it's the first trip to Tokyo, don't miss Tokyo Tower, reaching the summit in time to watch the neon come on in the city below and staying on to wonder at the city's best light show.

Go to the Asakusa Kannon Temple (the subway will take you almost there, and there's a sign in English pointing you in the right direction), stopping at the many Old Endo shops that line the narrow street to the temple. On the right almost at the end is a shop selling delightful miniatures of all kinds.

Go look at the Sumida River and wonder at the days when you could dine on fresh oysters served on board a river boat.

WALK UNDER the marvelous wood torii at Meiji Shrine, and do your souvenir gift shopping at the nearby Omotesando shops — Shimura's Fuji-Torii, Kiddyland and Oriental Bazaar.

For interesting folkcrafts, try the top floor of Daimaru and showrooms on the first three floors of the Kokusai Hotel next door, both at Tokyo Station's Yaesu exit.

Many prefectures maintain showrooms of their products there, including a wide variety of folkcrafts. Some, but not all are for sale. Two other well known craft shops are Bingoya in Shinjuku and Takumi near Shimbashi Station.

Walk in the garden of the Nezu Museum and then admire the works of art inside, including the gorgeous bronze collection.

HAVE AN international lunch on the restaurant floor of Takano's on the left between Isetan and Shinjuku Station, where specialties from many countries are sold at reasonable prices.

There's a supermarket on the downstairs floor that should amaze any girl, and several floors of wayout boutique shops, which will provide a spectacular return wardrobe.

And, that should about do it for your first day in town.

A LOVELIER YOU

By MARY SUE MILLER

A Lovely writes: My figure is broad from side to side, rather than from back to front like most. I see exercises for reducing the abdomen and buttocks, but nothing that has to do with side-hip and side-thigh bulges. Please print some. I'm depending on it.

The Answer. Challenge acepted. Here's what to do to trim a broadside view:

1. (a). On carpeted floor, lie on left side with legs together and head resting on arm. Raise legs about 2 inches. Holding raise, center weight on side hip; swing legs forward and backward for 20 counts; lower legs, rest and repeat 20 counts more. (b): Still on left side, try to touch knees to chest. Then briskly slide legs down floor to full extension, concentrating weight on side thigh. Ten times. (c). Turn to give right side same workout.

2. Stand with heels together, toes pointing outward to opposite sides; raise arms to shoulder level. Stretching right leg, touch tiptoes to far right and, at the same time, raise arms over head and clasp hands. Come back to starting position and repeat 10 times. Then switch action to left leg, same count.

You'll know you've had a workout that is good for what ails you. While awaiting improvements — four weeks plus — wear girdles with firm side panels and easy skirts.

Spot reducing

Spot reduction—key to a proportioned figure. Exercise is the only way to trim those stubborn bulges . . . to lose inches exactly where you wish. My new leaflet, SPOT REDUCING EXERCISES, gives easy routines—40 in all—for slimming the upper back, arms, midriff, hips, legs, ankles . . . Plus ideal measurements . . . other figure-trimming tips. For your copy, write to Mary Sue Miller in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents in coin.

ESP class set

Members have also provided a directional map for Rancho Los Alamitos and George Salzer of the Rancho will present a progress report on the historical site during Thursday's celebration.

WILL YOU WELCOME NOW . . .

David Frost

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
New York Times Service

There's a place somewhere, the song assures us, and there really must be a place somewhere in which David Frost can occasionally indulge in a spurt of screaming, ranting, raving and all those other terrible things relished by ordinary mortals. A soundproof closet in some hotel, perhaps. Or the men's room on a BOAC jet.

On camera and off, Frost emerges as something of the Compleat Christian. Courteous, patient, curious, enthusiastic, he sprinkles his conversation with comments like "How very kind of you to say so" or "That's absolutely marvelous" or "Bless you, I do appreciate that." He carefully avoids even the hint of an unflattering remark about a fellow human being, and his fiercest term of approbation seems to be the word "naughty."

It could, of course, amount to nothing more than a smoothly cultivated public image, one in rather sharp contrast to an earlier Frost image. But then it could be remarkably close to the "real" David Frost. In any case, there can be little doubt about its being effective.

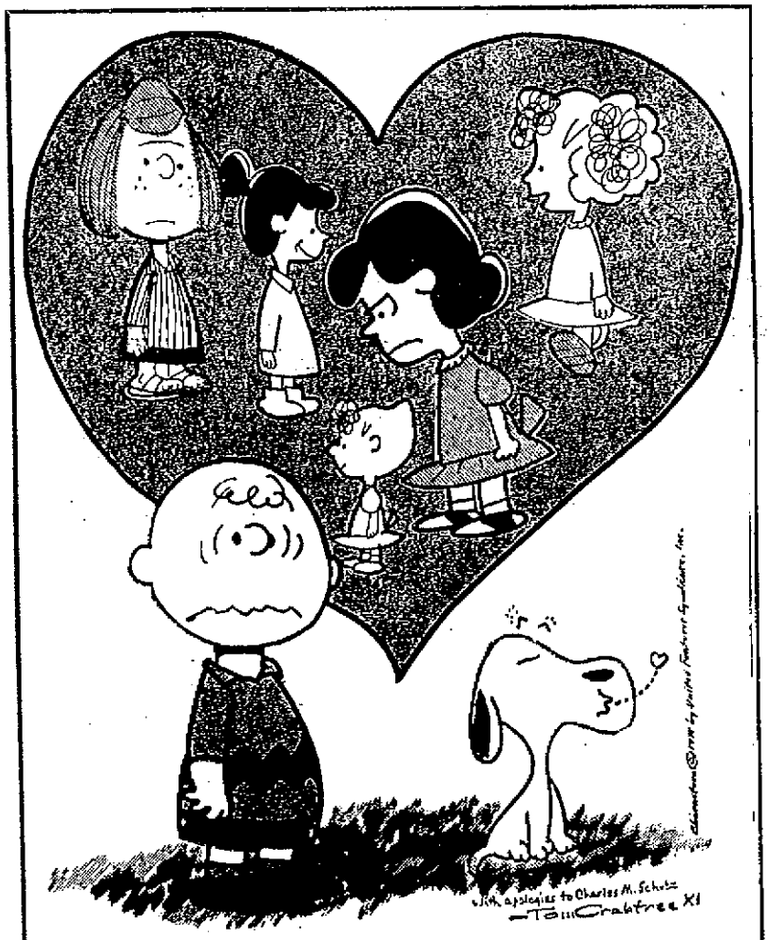

"THE DAVID FROST Show" is carried on about 100 stations across the country, and about 50 other key network and independent outlets. Under a five-year contract with the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company, Frost earns at least $500,000 a year from the talk show alone. He also has a television show in England, consisting of 13 different weekly segments each year, and that is one of the reasons he travels to London about 30 times a year.

In addition, he is a performer in variety-format stage shows, a film producer, an author and the biggest single stockholder in London Weekend Television, one of the more successful commercial stations in Britain. Then there is the Frost "empire" of five companies in England and five in the United States, several of them bearing his middle name, Paradine, and all of them operated by himself as chairman.

He was 32 years old as of last April, and this fall Hawthorn Books will publish his biography, written by Willie Frischauer. The title: "Will You Welcome Now . . . David Frost."

Last year "The David Frost Show" won a special Emmy award, and this year, in direct competition with the Johnny Carson and Dick Cavett shows, it won another as the outstanding talk series. On the air for about two years, the show has nearly put the finishing touches to

TV selling of the President '72

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

This is an off-year for political consultant Roger E. Ailes, whose thoughts are already swelling on the television campaign of 1972.

Ailes, 30, who devised the highly successful "man in the arena" television appearances for President Nixon in 1968, thinks the scenario might go like this:

"The Democrats will save every dime and go on television at every opportunity."

"My own guess is that Nixon will not campaign very much but will be the President. I think he will resist campaigning as long as he can.

"I think you will see a spontaneous limitation of the political commercial. The man who comes through on live television will win."

AILES ALSO believes that when the time comes he will be asked to resume full-time duties as Nixon's television consultant.

"There are some who don't want me to. I rub some people the wrong way at the White House," said Ailes, whose witty and irreverent remarks figured prominently in Joe McGinnis' book, "The Selling of the President 1968."

He admits that the portrait of him as brash, cocky and demanding is a true one. "I'm notorious for saying what I think and getting what I want out of a studio crew," he said. "I had to step on some toes occasionally because there was no time for committee meetings.

"I'd rather lose big than compromise. The trouble with compromise is that you end up with a watered-down version of what you wanted. It's best to dig your heels in."

AILES IS one of the few masters of the imprecise science of guiding a candidate through the mysteries of the electronic campaign. He remains a part-time consultant to President Nixon for special projects and last fall worked with Republican candidates on several gubernatorial and senatorial campaigns.

Ailes returned to television production "to keep my sanity," but as a political consultant he "sort of hangs around and kicks the tires" now and then.

The use of political commercials kicked up quite a furor in 1970 and added new fuel to the argument that the Imagemakers package and market candidates like soap. Ailes, who relies largely on live programming, said he looks for a reduction in the use of commercials.

"I prefer live television," said Ailes, who was executive producer of the "Mike Douglas Show" at 25. "It's more honest. It challenges you to do better. It makes the candidate better, too, and that's a plus."

Seated in a deck chair, his tie pulled down and his collar open, Presidential Seal cuff links flashing out of

GEORGE ERES, Editor

TV selling of the president

ROGER AILES

the sleeves of his dark gray suit, Ailes said, "People get a visual impression from the commercials. They respond emotionally to it. But you can't believe everything you hear or read."

He rubbed a shiny black shoe on the blue shag rug in his office and considered the charges made against the new style of campaigning. "I don't think it's immoral," he said. "You'd have to say the whole 20th century is immoral, because this is the way we're going to get our communications from now on.

"People are going to have trouble adapting to it. I have trouble adapting to it. But to call it immoral is to stick your head in the sand. It's all going to fall back on the individual having to use his own judgment."

Ailes said, "There were some wild things in 1970. I think if people really knew how people got elected, it would scare the hell out of them. Television gets all the credit, but there are all kinds of factors."

A NATIVE of Warren, Ohio, Ailes went into television while a student at Ohio University and after graduation plunged in full time.

In 1967, Richard A. Nixon was a guest on the "Mike Douglas Show" and he and Ailes fell to discussing the impact of television on campaigns. Ailes said he told Nixon — who believed one reason for his defeat by John F. Kennedy for president in 1960 was the television debates — that a candidate had to learn to use the medium. When Nixon once again became a candidate, Ailes was asked to join the campaign as television consultant. He quit his $60,000-a-year job and signed aboard.

"People talk about the change in Nixon," Ailes said. "The big change was inside the man between 1962 and 1968. He asked himself where he had gone wrong with television and he knew he had to learn to master the medium."

ONE OF the first things he did was devise "the man in the arena" concept, in which Nixon fielded questions live from the audience. The phrase is from a speech by Teddy Roosevelt, who said, "It's not the critic who counts, but the man in the arena, whose face is covered by dirt, sweat and blood . . ."

Since the election, he has done special projects for Nixon, such as setting up the format for his conversations with television newsmen and arranging for the split screen showing both the Apollo 11 astronauts on the moon and Nixon talking to them.

Ailes is now extending his coaching from candidates to businessmen. He said, "There's nothing mysterious or magical in what we do. We just make the businessman comfortable in the medium so that he can communicate well.

"Anybody can learn how to be effective on television. Anybody. It is probably 60 per cent just technique trainings and 40 per cent attitude or psychology. People get in a studio with a little red light staring at them and they start to quiver. That's attitude and that's what we work on."

PAN AND FAN MAIL

MAY I please have information concerning "The Andersonville Trial?" I recently read in a magazine that it was going to be on television again, and if so, I would like to know what date and time.

M. H., Lakewood

(Ch. 28 says it probably will air again but has not scheduled the repeat).

TWO SHOWS I enjoyed on TV last season were "Ransom for a Dead Man" and "Prescription: Murder," both with Peter Falk, and I want many, many more with him in the cast.

(Talking about bringing back old shows, as an article in the May 23rd Tele-vues did, discussing old time radio) how about Buster Keaton (shows) and I wish they would ask Arch Oboler, of "Lights Out" to make some TV shows. I'd also like Joan Davis and Jim Backus back again in their old TV show ("I Married Joan").

Anne Schultz, Lakewood

. . . I KNOW we are supposed to have our rights to do as we please, but why are some of the salesmen on TV, also some that have shows of their own, letting their hair grow? The ones that don't look so neat and nice.

I can't decide if they are too poor to have it cut or if they are trying to keep up with the younger generation.

I have lots of baby ribbon I can send to them (to tie their hair).

I'm proud of the ones that have enough respect for the public to try and look decent on TV where millions see them every day.

I'll have to say though, that some men have very pretty hair — more so than some women . . .

L. B., Long Beach

WHICH of the boys on "My Three Sons" recently died in a drowning accident? What were the circumstances?

C.S., Long Beach

TV NOTEBOOK

TELEVISION coverage of the 12-day Apollo 14 lunar mission, scheduled to begin with the planned July 26 launching, is expected to include the first live color video pictures of the liftoff of a spaceship from the moon's surface. Other expected video highlights: three moon excursions (more than 20 hours on July 31, Aug. 1 and 2) with the astronauts driving a TV-equipped lunar rover, an electric car in which they will cover about 25 miles of landscape.

KEITH CHARLES, who appears as businessman Ross Cavanaugh in the daytime drama series "Search for Tomorrow" on CBS, has joined the cast of "Applause," 1970 Tony Award-winning Broadway musical starring Lauren Bacall. He plays Bill Sampson, Miss Bacall's leading man.

Before assuming his role on "Search for Tomorrow," Charles had been seen on two other daytime drama series on the network, "The Edge of Night" and "The Secret Storm."

HELEN HAYES, who costarred with Jimmy Stewart last year in a New York stage rivival of "Harvey," the comedy about a lovable boozer who is friendly with a six-foot invisible rabbit, teams up with the actor again next season in an NBC-TV adaptation of the same play.

PAT HINGLE and Eileen Heckart will co-star with Joanne Woodward and Richard Kiley in Tad Mosel's Pulitzer prize-winning play, "All the Way Home," on NBC during the 1971-72 season.

Hingle has been cast as the hard-living Ralph Follet and Miss Heckart will be seen as the understanding Aunt Hannah Lych. As announced, Kiley will portray the ill-fated Jay Follet (Ralph's brother), and Miss Woodward will appear as Jay's pregnant wife Mary in the 90-minute special.

TV business is good

By LEROY POPE
United Press International

Life is happy again, if not exactly carefree, in the world of network television advertising. The three major networks sold all their prime time for the second quarter and are more than 90 per cent sold out for the third quarter at record prices.

If this sounds suprising considering the wails coming from the electronic portion of the Madison Avenue community last fall and early this winter, it is. "Nobody expected things to come back so fast after the autumn recession in advertising sales followed by the loss of cigarette advertising revenues on January 1," said one network official.

Advertisers were surprised, too, when they found themselves forced to make record bids for time they expected to pick up at standard or even bargain rates. Instead, they paid an average of $3.90 per 1,000 viewing homes for commercial time compared with $3.60 during much of 1970 — a 7 per cent rise.

Stars and producers of headliner shows were surprised too, sometimes disconcertingly so, as they found programs reshuffled to comply with the new Federal Communications Commission rule giving more prime time to local stations. They also found their advertising sponsors being outbid sometimes by other advertisers for the time segments their programs originally were aimed at.

This combination of circumstances compelled a shift of CBS-TV's "Carol Burnett Show," aimed at an adult audience at 10 p.m. (EDT) to 8 p.m. (EDT). This means re-slanting the show to younger audiences since the kiddies won't be in bed at that hour.

Although generally improved business conditions caused much of the demand for prime TV time in the second quarter, the new FCC rule was a factor. It will force the major networks to relinquish three and one-half hours a week of prime time to the local stations starting in September. This was a big factor in the bidding for prime time for the third quarter.

Gene Walsh, NBC public relations director, explains that this means each network will have 21 fewer minutes of prime time weekly to sell for high priced commercials, the

Along TV Memory Lane

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

I have in front of me a three-network schedule of weekly programs for the 1968-69 television season, and it is a reminder of how quickly video shows are forgotten after all the trouble of getting them on.

Remember — this was just two season ago. And now test your memory on some of the shows:

How about "The Ugliest Girl in Town"? It was a half-hour comedy about a young man who accidentally becomes a female model (in London, I think), with all the ensuing mixups regarding clothes, sex and so forth. At least, that's the way I recall it, but I won't swear that's entirely correct. Two years of television can seem like an eternity.

And what about "The Outcasts"? This was a good one-hour western about a pair of cowboys with an edgy relationship and widely different backgrounds, for one (Don Murray) was white and the other (Otis Young) was black.

DO YOU REMEMBER "That's Life"? It was another good show, a weekly one-hour musical-comedy story about a contemporary young couple. And there was "Lancer," a western being rerun this summer by CBS-TV.

Jerry Lewis also had a show that season, an hour of comedy and music that failed to catch on. "Peyton Place" was still so popular that it began the season with two half-hour episodes each week. There was a comedy called "The Good Guys," centering around a diner run by Herb Edelman. Jonathan Winters had an hour variety series. And there was a show called "The Outsider," which I vaguely — and uncertainly — recall as something with Darren McGavin as a sort of private eye type. But don't hold me to it. That's an eternity ago.

"JOURNEY TO THE Unknown" was another series that season — a weekly hour of suspense tales, anthology-style. There was a comedy series, "Blondie," based on the comic strip, and, for the life of me, I can't remember a single thing about it, or who was in it. "Operation: Entertainment" was another program, and I'm pretty sure it featured variety acts performing for servicemen at various military bases.

"The Felony Squad" was a series of that season, and Don Rickles had a show too, and I honestly can't recall much of anything about either of them. "Judd for the Defense" was about a lawyer. "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" is probably remembered because it was a nice little comedy even if it didn't catch on. There was another comedy called "The Mothers-In-Law," a disaster. "Land of the Giants" was science fiction, of childish nonsense, depending on your state of optimism. And Phyllis Diller had an hour variety series, but not for long.

Imagine all the time, effort and money spent on these shows, most of them a monumental collection of trivia. You could do a lot of good for a lot of people with all that dough. Instead, the product of it is already forgotten. If there is a more conspicuous kind of waste, I don't know of it.

Some hope for Archie -- but not much

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Caroll O'Connor plays the part of Archie Bunker, television's favorite bigot on the "All in the Family" show, but deplores Archie's prejudices.

"There's no question about it," O'Connor said. "Archie is a bigot.

"He's not a philosophical bigot. He's an inherent species who learned his prejudices from childhood. Archie is a reflexive figure. I think there's some hope for him but probably not much."

CARROLL AS 'ARCHIE'

O'CONNOR IS A pleasant, intelligent man born in New York, educated in Ireland, who lives in Hollywood, Manhattan and Rome.

"I know a lot of Archies," the actor said. "He's a composite of a half-dozen men I know.

"The producers are liberal with me as far as the script goes. I can throw in my own inflections and ideas.

"I was brought up in New York City so I know the breed of bigots pretty well. New York is the most poisonous community in this country as far as bigotry is concerned.

"It has hostile little neighborhoods of Jewish, Irish, Italian, German, Greek, Black and Puerto Rican.

"Each little group feared and hated the other until after World War II when the black movement sort of solidified the whites. But it's still there to a degree. So I know about bigotry first hand."

O'CONNOR has little in common with the blunt, uneducated, dictatorial Archie.

"I hope there isn't a little of Archie in everyone," O'Connor said, "but that is wishful thinking. Naturally our show gets lots of mail, but only one letter in a hundred is filled with hate. The rest is encouraging or simply fan mail."

O'Connor chuckles over some of Archie's racial and religious terms. He believes public airing of tasteless, senseless words for minority groups helps clear the air and reduces their effectiveness.

"I think it's sad that a man would live out his life the way Archie is doing," he said. "We try to give him some exigency he can't cope with in each show. Racism is a terrible handicap.

"Still, I can't hate Archie. As an actor I enjoy playing the character.

"I've knows a good many people I don't agree with and they are decent within their own limitations. You learn to accept them. Perhaps Archie Bunker is one of those."

CRITICS' CORNER

DES O'CONNOR, premiered June 2, Ch. 4.

Des O'Connor returned to NBC, once again the summer substitute for "Music Hall." It was an auspicious occasion since Jack Benny, in good form, was the guest star.

The London-made program with its British star is pleasantly low key and easy to take. O'Connor functions agreeably as host and straight man, frequently breaking into song.

Connie Stevens is to be a regular on each of the 14 programs, presumably to give it a valid American aspect. She handled a couple of songs and one dance number very well.

The music is the old-fashioned kind -- with a tune. The jokes are basic and often very old or very bad, but carried off with such good humor it is hard to groan too loud.

It is a program custom-tailored to hammock viewing.

DIAHANN CARROLL:

'It's nice to be singing in saloons again...'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"It's nice to be back singing in saloons again — J just HAD to get out of that clinic!"

The line draws a big laugh from the packed Las Vegas hotel room. Many of the audience are startled to see Diahann Carroll, bushy-coiffed and crowned in flowered silk, belting out "Fire and Rain" and "Bridge over Troubled Waters." They had known her as the gentle nurse "Julia" of the television series.

But, of course, she had been a well-known singer—on records, television, in night clubs and on the stage—before her nonsinger role in "Julia."

The transformation from the nurse's whites of her TV series to the glamor trappings of a nightclub superstar is complete.

DOES SHE have any regrets about the cancellation of "Julia" after three seasons on NBC?

"Let us say that I would have been disappointed if it had been dropped after two season," she replied. "I don't feel bad after three.

"In fact, I am beginning to feel what it is like to live again. When I went into a television series, I felt I was prepared for it. After all, I had opened a musical on Broadway 'No Strings' and played it eight times a week. That's a rugged schedule. But nothing like TV.

"The discipline of a series is unbelieveable. You must be dedicated to it. If every you get out of line and break the routine, you pay for it later. You become a well-paid slave."

"JULIA," which portrayed a black widow and mother living in a predominantly white world, was criticized by some racial spokesmen as a candy-coated treatment of race relations. Miss Carroll was sensitive to such criticism, but she observes:

"On the balance, I think 'Julia' did good. For one thing, I became the first black person to star in her own series; that, I think, was a step forward and something I am proud of.

DIAHANN . . . Out of the clinic

"Perhaps 'Julia' didn't 'tell it like it is.' But the fact remains that millions of television viewerw were exposed to an experience they otherwise wouldn't have known: watching black persons in everyday life."

IN REPLY to comments that Julia was simply a white Negro, Miss Carroll remarks: "It seems to me there is a lot of confusion on both sides of the racial question, black and white."

Miss Carroll said she had campaigned for more realistic scripts, but encountered no success. The reason: "In television you encounter a network of spiderwebs which prevent any straighforward action. You are told that this segment was good because it got a 33 per cent share of audience and that segment was bad because it got a 23 share. So you are told to continue doing what got the biggest audience."

time it takes to actually broadcast the commercials.

This time is sold at prices running as high as $88,000 a minute, but the average is a lot less.

The 7 per cent rise in the average price of commercials ought to more than offset the weekly loss of prime commercial time, Walsh said. For one reason, each network also will save $400,000 or more on weekly programming costs under the new rule.

Prices bid for commercial spots on high rated individual network shows this fall are eye opening. One minute on NBC's "Flip Wilson Show" was sold at $86,000 and American Broadcasting Co. put an $88,000 price tag on a minute on "Marcus Welby, M.D." in case a minute spot on the show becomes available. Actually it's sold out.

CBS is getting $72,000 for a minute this fall on either "Medical Center" or "Hawaii Five-O."

The audience rating of the individual show rather than the number of station affiliates of the network seems to be the determining factor in what advertisers will bid for commercial time. Spot on ABC's "Dick Cavett Show" fetched about the same price as on "The Merv Griffin Show" on CBS although CBS has more stations. But on NBC's "Johnny Carson Show" a minute brings $18,000 or about twice as much as time on the network shows opposite Carson.

The big gain in network time sales naturally has slowed the economy wave that produced numerous layoffs in the news and programming departments in New York starting last fall.

"People are no longer overly worried about their jobs," one network official said, "although of course, this always is a business with a fair amount of personnel turnover. A few people who were laid off last winter already have been recalled."

David Frost

the phenomenon of David Frost as International Television Personality.

THE FACT is that "The David Frost Show" is most consistently the best of the talk shows. Talk shows are inevitably a sometime thing. Shuttling between direct entertainment and serious discussion, they can pass through some worthwhile terrain or they can grind to an interminable halt in trivia.

It can be—and has been—argued that the talk shows reduce everything to trivia. And as there are only so many guest personalities to go around, with so many of those already overexposed, it can also be argued that the talk shows have nowhere to go but down—and out.

Two years ago, few TV professionals would have predicted success for still another talk show, much less one featuring a British host who was likely to sound "funny" to the mass American audience. With clothes that always manage to look slightly baggy and nondescript, and wearing blue suede shoes, Frost doesn't exactly cut the most dashing of figures.

Frost, it seems, has become a major TV personality by studiously trying to keep the projection of his own personality to an unobtrusive m i n i m u m. Most viewers will gratefully note his technique of keeping the spotlight on his guests, of not trying to compete with performers. Frost himself ticks off several key elements in the format—the direction of Peter Baker, the "creative consultant" role of Neil Shand, the research staff, the music direction of Billy Taylor, and the steady efforts to include the studio audience in at least part of the proceedings.

Beyond all this, though, there is what Frost refers to as "a hope of rapport." He is genuinely interested in meeting his guests, and the more varied they are, the better. Even if he disagrees completely with their views, he is primarily interested not in refutation but in getting those views across to the viewer. His approach, which he concedes might be considered "Pollyanna," tends to be journalistic, and several members of his staff have backgrounds in journalism.

THE POLLYANNA image differs dramatically from an earlier Frost image, that of the cheerfully cheeky satirist on "That Was The Week That Was." The program won some notorious success with its political barbs in England in the mid-1960's and Frost also appeared in the short-lived American version. Gradually, through succeeding British programs like "Not So Much A Programme, More A Way Of Life" and "Frost Report," the satire was transmuted into a kind of bright and infectious curiosity.

Frost the satirist was directly out of Cambridge University and part of a bubbling English scene that included the appearance of The Beatles and the smash success of Cambridge peers in "Beyond The Fringe." The newer Frost may actually have his roots in an earlier time, going back to his birth in Tenterden in Kent and his "modest" upbringing as son of a Methodist minister. His first visit to London was on a family outing to a Billy Graham rally and by the age of 17 he himself was a lay preacher in various pulpits.

Frost has not been noticeably patient with the traditional rules of the talk show game. For years it was firmly understood that the television audiences had a pathetically short span of attention and that talking guests couldn't be allowed more time than, say, 15 minutes. Then about a year ago "The David Frost Show" featured a single guest, Peter Ustinov, for its entire 90 minutes. Since then there have been 90-minute visits with singers, actors, comedians and politicians, and the old rule has been splendidly demolished.

Chevrolet's Summer Catalog.

Or how to make your summer better than your winter was. (Both emotionally and financially.)

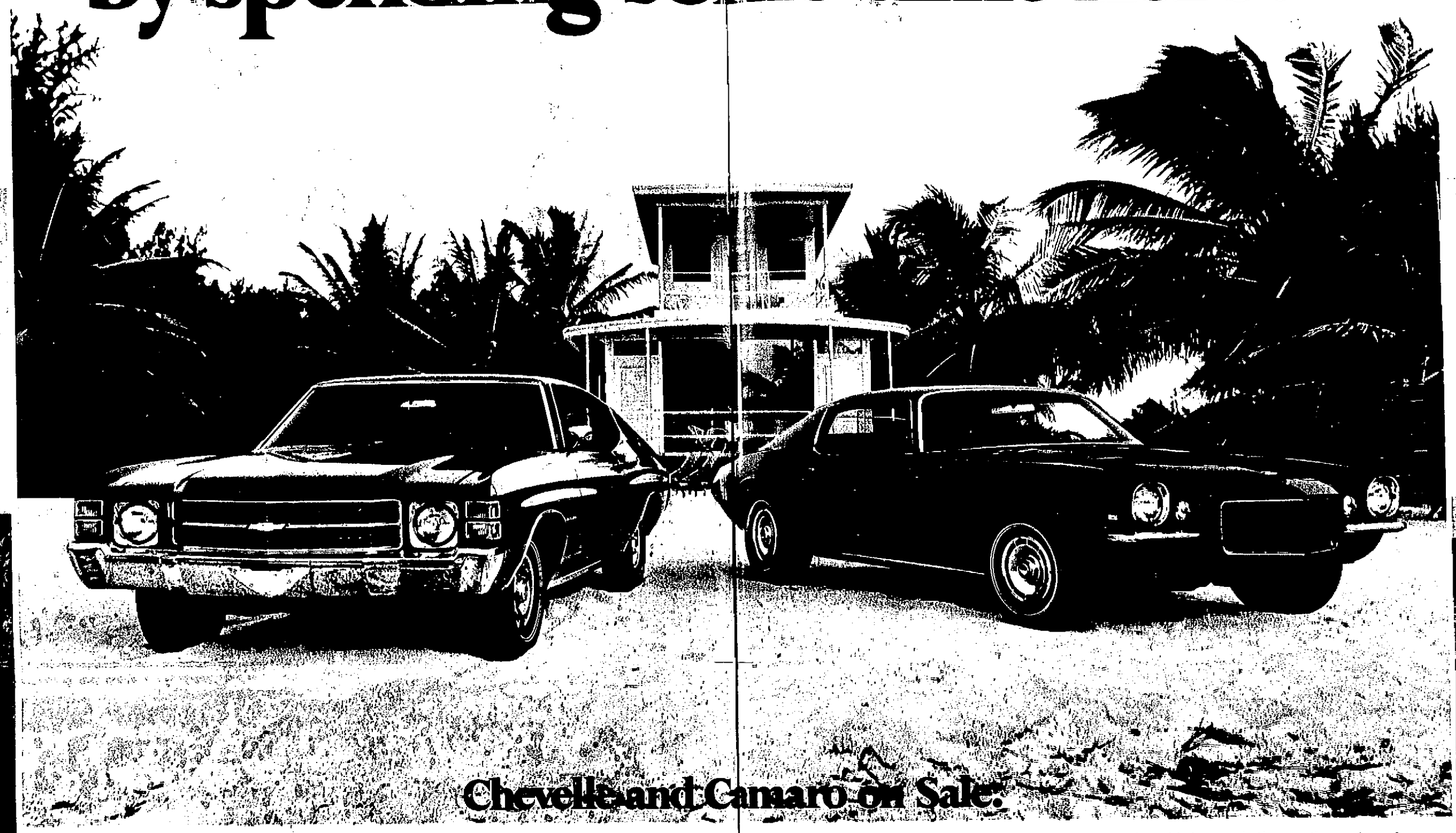

Malibu. One of many Chevelle and Camaro models on sale. Chevrolet

Save yourself from spending too much money by spending some time here.

Caprice.
Looks and rides like twice the price.

Chevelle and Camaro on Sale.

Chevrolet's Summer Sale ends the end of June. It's a sale on every model of our mid-size Chevelle and our sports-size Camaro.

It's a simple sale to help you save money.

Simply order your Chevelle or Camaro with four features we think you'd want anyhow.

They are white stripe tires, the deluxe seat belts, a set of wheel covers and an AM/FM radio or any stereo equipment. (Stereo available only on Chevelle.)

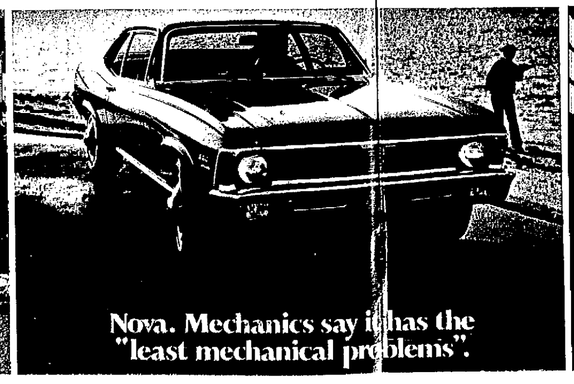

By buying the package, you start summer by getting a great deal on America's most popular mid-size car or the one the readers of Car and Driver magazine picked as 1971's Best Sporty Car—the Camaro. Which, you've got to admit, isn't a half bad start.

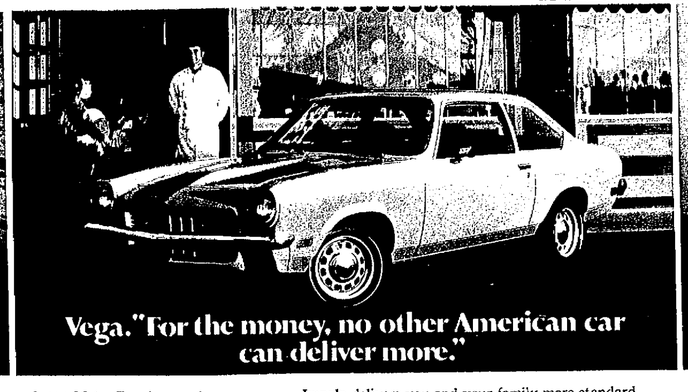

Impala. The big family car a family man can afford.

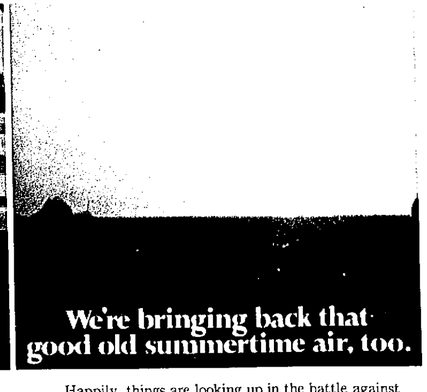

Monte Carlo. Personal luxury at a practical price.

Nova. Mechanics say it has the "least mechanical problems".

Vega. "For the money, no other American car can deliver more."

We're bringing back that good old summertime air, too.

Caprice is as big and complete as you'd expect a luxury car to be. Here are a few of the standard features.

You get a Turbo Hydra-matic automatic transmission and power steering.

You get power front disc brakes, power ventilation system, a 400-cu.-in. V8, wheel covers and fender skirts.

You get deeply tufted fabric over thick foam cushioning. Interior trim that looks like burled elm. Pounds of extra insulation and yards of sound-absorbing vinyl and carpeting. And a front-seat fold-down armrest in the sedan.

You get a longer wheelbase, a larger windshield and more room than other cars at its price. Which is why we compare Caprice with cars priced so much higher.

Monte Carlo. The personal luxury car priced many hundreds of dollars less than the others.

Today it brings you even more personal luxury with power steering as standard equipment.

Sure, power front disc brakes are still standard. So is the smooth ride that's like a fine touring car, the thick carpeting inside and accents on the instrument panel that look just like burled elm. And so is its tasteful, elegant styling—truly distinctive at any price.

But let's face it. To come up with anything else like Monte Carlo you've got to come up with hundreds of dollars more.

Or how about a Nova? You know, a lot of people talk about how trouble-free and economical their cars are. But Motor Service and Service Station Management magazines asked garage owners and mechanics what they thought—which ones really have the least mechanical problems and are easiest to maintain.

Nova came out on top, right at the very top.

Nova is small enough to fit neatly into garages and tight parking spaces. Big enough to seat five in the coupe, six in the sedan.

It's economical in city driving; yet hefty enough, with standard Six or V8 engine, to give you a solid ride on any highway.

Our little Vega is so much car Motor Trend magazine said, "For the money, no other American car can deliver more." And they chose it Car of the Year over 10 other nominees.

With that kind of unsolicited publicity, people are sure to ask a lot from the little car that does everything well.

So we give 'em Body by Fisher, foam-filled front bucket seats (except on the panel truck), storage wells in both doors, flow-through power ventilation system, steel side-guard door beams and front disc brakes.

We give 'em a lot of models, too: coupe, sedan, the panel and a little wagon that's shown on the next page.

Impala delivers you and your family more standard equipment than any other car at its price.

Turbo Hydra-matic transmission with any V8 and power steering are now standard. And that's not all.

It has built-in power front disc brakes, a built-in power ventilation system, a built-in double-panel roof that's stronger and does a better job of absorbing sound.

It has built-in side-guard door beams, built-in steel cargo guard in the trunk and more built-in room than any other car in its field (so says Automotive Industries magazine).

Not only is Impala traditionally America's No. 1 seller, it's traditionally high in holding its resale value.

See the U.S.A. in comfort, and at reasonable prices.

Happily, things are looking up in the battle against air pollution. Because, fortunately, a lot has been done by Chevrolet in the past 10 years to check pollution caused by our cars.

In the early 1960s, we began installing emission controls on our engines. And now, every 1971 Chevrolet is equipped to reduce hydrocarbon output by 80% and carbon monoxide emissions by about two-thirds.

You can help, too. Keep your car tuned and those pollution controls checked regularly.

Let that sun shine in.

Chevrolet

Five different wagons.

The bottom one even converts to a motel.

Seats four.

Vega Kammback. It's not only priced less than most other little wagons, it's a little more wagon. Standard front disc brakes. A canopy tailgate that swings up and out of your way. Vega's like summertime—fun and ready for anything.

Seats eight.

Concours "Walk-in" Wagon. Our mid-size that's not quite as large as our full-size wagons. But then, not quite as much money either. It has the two-way tailgate, slanted rear roof and bumper step so if you buy the model with rear-facing third seat, you can open the gate like a door, walk right in and sit down.

Seats eight, plus a large dog.

Kingswood Estate. A very luxurious wagon. A very roomy wagon, especially when you order the model with front-facing third seat. And it has the newest idea in tailgates, one that vanishes. The window slides up and out of sight into the roof. The gate drops down and disappears under the floor. You can load up the back even in a closed garage or tight parking space. Or in a campground without unhitching to unload.

Seats nine.

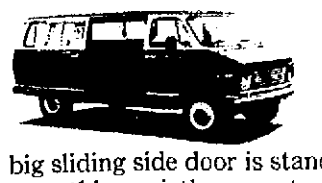

The Suburban. Built on a tough truck chassis, it's able to go where other wagons fear to tread. Camping and Trailering Guide named it "Tow Vehicle of the Year." Ideal for the family who likes to rough it, yet it can be equipped with all the comforts, including enough seats to seat nine. There are two kinds of rear entrances: either the lift-gate tailgate (shown) or panel truck-type rear doors.

Seats 12, sleeps six.

Chevy Sportvan. So big inside, you can almost hear an echo. If you order it with seats front to back, there's room for up to 12 to sit in comfort. The new, big sliding side door is standard equipment. It glides smoothly, quietly on a sturdy triple track, and needs only 4½ inches clearance to open. If you order a camper conversion, there's enough room for a sink, range, hide-a-beds. Just stop somewhere—instant motel.

Who offers all these different kinds of station wagons? Only your Chevrolet dealer.

WELLS REPORT

Miracle on Pine Avenue

No project ever seemed more likely to fail. It was launched against a problem that all the vast resources of government, private endeavor and the gentle legions of organized charity had hardly been able to scratch. Its organizers were wildly impractical people given to outlandish dress and ideas, who had trouble keeping their own bodies and souls together, and who routinely programmed miracles as means of solving financial difficulties.

Yet today, two years later, the Long Beach Free Clinic is still going, still growing. It cannot yet be called successful — it is doubtful that it will ever be possible or desirable to apply that word to the clinic — but it is succeeding.

In the first years after World War II, the spreading revolt of the young against the customs, law and morality of the old was deplored but not taken too seriously. Every war had been followed by its own "lost" generation.

Even those who urged action against "juvenile deliquency," as it was then called, were optimistic. Harrison Salisbury in "The Shook-Up Generation," published in 1958, argued that the means to control delinquency were known, at hand and not too expensive. All that was needed was for officials to stop shuffling papers and apply the knowledge and resources already available.

Even today, it is not readily apparent to most people over 40 that the revolt of youth has become so widespread and profound that it amounts to an alternative culture. Laguna Canyon and Leisure World are in the same county but different countries.

But if youth has its own culture it does not have its own institutions. If a Leisure World resident falls and breaks his hip, he presents his Medicare card at the hospital. If a housewife has trouble counting and drops too many sleeping pills, her husband calls their friendly family doctor. The middle-aged man trying to adjust to never being president of his firm makes an appointment with his shrink.

But where does the runaway who has slept in parked cars for two winter weeks go to check his cough? The 14-year-old, pregnant and abandoned, gets help where? The junkie trying to kick his $17,000-a-year monkey? The 19-year-old who never finishes anything he starts, including school, jobs or marriage?

Easy, you say. There are agencies set up to handle these things. But when a person is sick, hurt or trying to get his head straight, he wants to be with his own people. It's hard to find your people in another country, the country of the welfare worker, the cop, the better-than-you medical receptionist with no needle marks in her bare alabaster arms, a parent's country.

So in the country of the young, drug abuse spreads, venereal disease becomes epidemic, unwanted children come into the world or are averted in sleazy back-room abortions, and hordes of nomads take to the road to elude some shapeless, no-name fear.

Two years ago, a group of young people met to do something about this. Most of them earned less than $3,000 a year, well under the poverty level set by the federal government. They had no assets, no credit, no experience, no friends in high places, nothing but a concern to meet a need that the Establishment with all its resources had failed to meet.

They proposed to establish a clinic that would not charge for health services. They proposed to staff it with physicians, nurses, psychiatrists, psychologists, dentists, social workers and office workers who would donate their time after finishing a full day's work.

Preposterous, but that's what they proposed to do. And since it is necessary to begin at the beginning, they started with one doctor giving examinations in a bathroom.

Two years later, the Long Beach Free Clinic has expanded to two buildings with a total of 65 rooms on Pine Avenue just south of Anaheim Street. There they treat some 2,500 persons monthly for a variety of physical and social ills ranging from drug addiction and venereal disease to being alone in a big city without a friend. The clinic operates a crash pad, called La Cama (the bed), which provides emergency shelter for two nights to persons between the ages of 16 and 24.

The clinic now has nine full-time staff members and God knows how many part-time. Its budget last year totaled $68,000 in cash and contributed supplies. Again, God knows the equivalent money value of donated professional and clerical services. The funds come from private contributions and from city and county assistance.

The Free Clinic has been criticized by some, who have not seen it but have seen its principal clientele, the street people. But the conservative doctors, dentists and other professionals who work there praise it and continue to come back.

It is literally a miracle. People my age do not believe in miracles and I have to rub my eyes each time I visit the Free Clinic to make sure it is there. It exists mainly on air and prayer, of course, and some day it may not be there. But I think it will be. Seeing just one miracle restores your sense of wonder and lets you believe that anything is possible. □

John Wayne . . . Takes shot at today's moviemakers.

Bishop Sheen . . . A special tribute to his writers.

David Hartman . . . The TV doctor was an athlete.

Erich Maria Remarque . . . His last novel still to be published.

Liz and Eddie . . . No alimony for bankrupt Fisher.

Q: John Wayne — who's been making movies for years — does he have any respect for the new crop of moviemakers? — Arnold M., Houston.

A: No, he doesn't. "The men who control the big studios today . . . know nothing about our business," the Duke says. "They're in it for the buck. The only thing they can do is say: 'Jeez, that picture with what's-her-name running around naked made money, so let's make another one. If that's what they want, let's give it to them!' I'm glad," Wayne shrugged, "I won't be around much longer to see what they do with it."

Q: Has J. Edgar Hoover ever defended the FBI against the accusation of being likened to the Gestapo? — Ollie Presbrey, Washington, D.C.

A: Yes. J. Edgar once explained: "We are a fact-gathering organization only. We don't clear anybody. We don't condemn anybody. Just the minute the FBI begins making recommendations on what should be done with its information, it becomes a Gestapo."

Q: With the Oscars, Emmys, and Grammys behind us, what's the most gracious acceptance speech you ever heard a TV star make? — Carmen T., Detroit.

A: Bishop Fulton J. Sheen's confession. Upon winning a Look magazine award during a blistering battle of ratings with Milton Berle (then known as Mr. Television), he said: "I feel it is time that I also pay tribute to my four writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John."

Q: David Hartman (the handsome Dr. Hunter of "The Bold Ones") — how tall is he? Where's he from? How old? Where was he born? Married or single? Stuff like that, please. — Miss M.L., Covina, Calif.

A: David is built like Goliath. Six-foot-five, a 200-pound bachelor, born May 19, 1937, in Pawtucket, R.I. Was an outstanding athlete at Mt. Hermon Prep and doubled as a radio and TV announcer while matriculating at Duke. Following an Air Force hitch, he attended the American Academy of Dramatic Arts; did off-Broadway and summer stock musicals and spent a season on "The Virginian."

Q: The late Erich Maria Remarque, who wrote "All Quiet on the Western Front," did he leave any unpublished works? — Arnold K., Cleveland.

A: Yes. Remarque's widow, actress Paulette Goddard, recently turned over the manuscript of her husband's last novel ("Shadows in Paradise") to his Munich publisher. "It is," the still-glamorous Miss Goddard says, "the most personal book he ever wrote and it's going to be wonderful."

Q: Is it true that, in his career, Raymond Berry, the veteran Baltimore Colts star, caught 631 passes for 9,275 yards and fumbled only once? Didn't he produce a teaching and training film describing his football-catching secrets? And what's he doing today? — Bob Broder, Tucson, Ariz.

A: "Your reader is right," concurs Ray Berry. The training film is now available for sale, by writing to the star at the University of Arkansas Athletic Department, Fayetteville, Ark., where he's now coaching after two years doing ditto with the Dallas Cowboys.

Q: I've heard that Eddie Fisher is suing his ex-wife, Elizabeth Taylor, to collect alimony. Is this true? And is Fisher's career fini? — Laura Clark, Paramount, Calif.

A: Elizabeth is not paying alimony to Eddie. Nor has he threatened such a suit. When they split up there was a financial settlement involving properties that were jointly owned. Though the singer is bankrupt, his talent isn't. And if he has enough guts he'll make a comeback. After all, it's an old American custom to root for the underdog.

SOUTHLAND SUNDAY, JUNE 6, 1971

By Mark Clutter

"What are you writing about now?" asked the grandfatherly bar owner as he poured the drink.

"Happy marriages."

"That is a good topic. We are happily married. It is wonderful to have a good marriage."

"Why are you happily married?"

"I don't know. Just lucky, I guess. I met the right woman."

You have only to watch the graying couple tending bar to realize they are happy. They pour drinks for people who are not completely happy and make them smile. And, although working at opposite ends of the bar, you sense their teamwork. They belong together. And in their free time they tend their garden, go to sea in their little boat, hike or ride their bicycles, go to the mountains or visit their children and pamper their grandkids.

Why should they be so happy when so many of their patrons are seeking the solace of ethyl alcohol? And why should they be so happy when persons who are better educated, richer, more brilliant, more successful, the darlings of the gods are utterly miserable in love?

Is there some neat recipe, some golden way, if one could but discover it, to be happily married?

Southland Sunday asked the experts, the professional marriage counselors who guide the way to better marriages, help to mend breaking marriages and even chart happier divorces.

As we expected, there is no unanimity in their answers. They are like the blind men describing the elephant. "I do not consider myself or anyone else an 'expert' on marriage — the subject is far too complex for generalizations to mean anything," said Hamilton Mark Moody, Ph.D., clinical psychologist, Long Beach.

And yet, there is a direction, a pattern to their answers. No one could sit, day after day, year after year, listening to the problems and the miseries of marriage without learning something.

The point on which all agree is that happiness in marriage depends upon communication. This does not mean mere talking, which may be noise to hide lack of understanding. The function of the counselors, of course, is to provide means of communication, of helping the troubled spouses to come through to each other.

Here are a few remarks on communication:

Gerhard Kohn, Ph.D., Long Beach, said: "I feel the three most important components of a happy marriage are an adult relationship between the two marriage partners, a genuinely working system of communication between them and an empharic sensitivity which allows the individual marriage partners to 'read' the feelings of the other. Most marriages which are unhappy have a component of alienation or aloneness within their relationship ... While this alienation or aloneness appears to be a symptom of our time, it can be overcome with appropriate help."

Richard Laux, Ph. D., Long Beach, observed: "Communications must be open and honest, but there must also be tact so that needless hurts aren't inflicted. Issues between the two partners must be faced squarely and

It was hard to enjoy the spectacular beauty of the Acropolis with Dimitri, my Greek guide. "Be careful, the Turks are barbaric savages," was his ominous warning when he learned I intended to film a documentary in Turkey. I later found the opposite to be true; they were among the friendliest people I had ever met.

Dimitri was only echoing the Greek national rancor against centuries-old Turkish conquests and the enslavement of thousands of Greeks during the reign of the Ottoman empire. Further reinforced by recent outbreaks of violence on the island of Cyprus, where the national hatred between the Greeks and Turks reached its zenith, Dimitri almost shouted: "It's not safe to travel in Turkey!" I later found this statement carried some veracity, especially as applied to Turkish truck drivers who adamantly ride the middle of the road with the same military elan as Turkish soldiers storming an objective. They do not swerve for anyone or anything, even if it means certain death. And on many occasions this is exactly what it meant. Turkish highways are littered with burned our buses and overturned trucks.

And so it was with some misgivings that we pulled out of Athens on a sultry August afternoon, heading toward the Turkish border in our ungainly rolling box: a motorhome that was to be our tour vehicle and abode in Turkey for the next three weeks. The van was shipped out of the Port of Los Angeles six weeks prior to our departure, and was equipped with a heavy duty generator and air conditioner to insure the comfort of the crew and to protect the precious film against the scorching Turkish heat. The genial crew consisted of our producer, the van driver and myself as cameraman and chief grip.

The sad wails of 500 muezzins calling the faithful to prayer rang out in an exotic symphony as we rolled into the proud city of the seven hills, Istanbul, a few days later. It was midnoon and the stereo effect of the chants from 500 mosques seemed to announce our formal arrival into the Moslem world. Buildings seemed to shimmer under the blistering heat as we passed the famed Blue Mosque, the most impressive edifice in Istanbul, fronted by a magnificent courtyard.

Resting in the Bosporus, the narrow stretch of water that separates Europe and Asia, Istanbul is built where a scimitar of water known as the Golden Horn cuts into the European shore. The original capital of both the Byzantines and the Ottomans lay on the western side of the Golden Horn, but the modern city has expanded across the Horn to the eastern side.

Threading our way through narrow streets meant for ox-carts and bicycles rather than cars, our cumbersome van often caused traffic jams of its own. Negotiating a turn sometimes took more than a dash of nerve; a wide swing of the van encouraged some cars to spurt through tiny spaces of street momentarily released by our arcing vehicle, missing us by inches. This bravado was the modus operandi of most Turkish drivers whose extremes in many cases resulted in the inevitable melding of fender to fender. I saw one frustrated policeman frantically sound his siren and turn on his emergency light just to pull out of his parking place onto the lane of traffic.

Crossing over the Galata Bridge that spans the "Horn," we saw a conglomerate of vignettes that typified Turkish city life. Looking like a throng of unemployed steelworkers from the Depression years, hordes of grim-faced Turks wearing shabbily cut trousers and jackets and gray cloth caps jammed both sides of the bridge walkway. The dearth of smiles, I found, concealed good spirits just as their Western clothes hid a largely Eastern way of life.

Local fast freight rode on the backs of porters who struggled across the bridge with burdens of huge sacks and weighty furniture; one man carried an upright piano that would have weakened the springs of a small truck.

Below the bridge, an aquatic jam of ferries and launches added to the frenetic atmosphere of trucks, buses and taxis that compressed themselves on all sides of us.

A few women still clung to the Eastern dress predominant in most Turkish villages. Some of these could be seen strolling over the bridge wearing balloon trousers, called salvar, with their faces partially hidden by veils—outlawed by Kemal Ataturk in 1923. Ataturk, president of Turkey's first republic, also banned the fez and the Arabic alphabet in sweeping reforms aimed at the "Westernization" of Turkey.

Shortly, we reached our destination and swapped the cramped confines of our motorhome for the more spacious but "stuffy" quarters of the Istanbul Hilton, whose multi-storied thrust into space sadly disturbed the graceful skyline of Istanbul's Byzantine domes and needle-like minarets.

That evening we discussed the initial shooting schedule, which was to commence the next day, and I met Halim, our Turkish interpreter and liasion man extraordinaire. Halim soon proved to be the most valued member of our crew as he bartered, cajoled, mediated and promoted in our behalf. We gained access to areas normally taboo to outsiders; without Halim, our efforts to document Turkey would have been futile. His worth was proved the very next day.

Halim had managed to contract the use of a small hotel balcony overlooking a section of the Grand Bazaar. Our objective was to record some of the faces in that vast throng of shoppers. Moslem law prohibits the photographing or duplicating of one's image, so concealed camera techniques had to be employed. I planned to throw a piece of cloth over the camera so only the lens would show. The ornamental iron rail would hide the tripod. If spotted, retaliation would run the gamut between hurled invectives to airborne rocks or shoes. But I feared not, for Halim was at my side.

My vantage point from the balcony was perfect. I ducked my head under the cloth, pushed my eye into the reflex viewfinder and started the camera motor. I zoomed into a sea of unsuspecting faces below, recording those I wanted, as the air filled with the clamor of hawking vendors.

The din of street noise seemed to reach all the way to the balcony, predominantly at a high level off my right side. Then the level increased to a point where it inundated the hawkers below. I jerked my head away from the camera and confronted a loud stream of Turkish insults accompanied by frantic hand waving. An old woman was standing by an open bedroom window adjacent to where I was shooting. She thought I was spying on her and the uncomplimentary verbiage increased to a steady torrent. "What was this infidel doing next to my window?" she screamed to Halim.

Halim quickly displayed his expertise as master diplomat and soother of all troubles. He told her to look at my jacket. I was wearing my white safari coat emblazoned with Turkish insignia on the lapels and left shoulder. The disguise was an experiment. The woman seemed confused. "Can't you see," said Halim, "This man is working for the Turkish Ministry of Tourism! How can he do his job with all this screaming?" A smile immediately broke out on her face and she apologized, saying, "Peace be with you! Peace be with you!" After the incident I decided my jacket was an integral part of my shooting gear while in Turkey.

As Halim struggled with the heavier camera, I grabbed the hand-held Bell and Howell to shoot some "walking dolly shots" below. Here was the real test. With Halim behind me, I pressed the camera against my head and walked among the throng with my lenses pointed directly at their faces. Their was little resistance. The jacket seemed to be paying off.

The Bazaar is a vast maze of stalls and shops, connected to endless narrow streets that twist and turn in their attempt to lose the stranger in the labyrinth. Here you can buy just about anything but a slave girl. I photographed dazzling copperware, ceramics, vases, dishes and tiles that are the prize of Europe's aristocratic families. You can even have your luggage made to order, with copper monograms, ornamental brass work, inlaid with sparkling, phony gems.

One of the most unusual sights for a foreigner to see in Turkey is the water vendor. Strapped to his back is a fancy, rectangular-shaped water dispenser, sometimes mirrored on all sides, or capped with tiny copper minarets. For about three cents a glass you can quench your thirst. Halim ordered a glass from a vendor outside the Bazaar so I could record the sequence. A common glass used by hundreds of customers was first rinsed

SWIFT IS INTRODUCING A NEW LITTLE HAM FOR NO SPECIAL REASON.

Here we are introducing a brand new ham with the biggest ham holiday of the year, Christmas, still a long ways off, and ham's second-biggest day, Easter, another four months after that.

Which is exactly how we planned it. Because our new ham just isn't a big holiday-type ham and never will be reserved for those special occasions when you've got a houseful of people to feed.

Sugarplum.® The Everyday Ham with the glaze on top.

Sugarplum is a 2¼ lb. family-sized ham. And we're introducing it today because it's as good a day as any to have a little ham for a change.

New Sugarplum is tender, juicy and extremely lean. All the things you've come to expect in a Swift's Premium ham. Plus a few things you'd never expect in a million years.

Like the super-convenience glaze mix that comes right in the cap. Just add water, heat, and you've got a delicious pineapple or brown sugar glaze that your own mother-in-law wouldn't guess wasn't homemade.

The shape of hams to come.

Sugarplum also happens to be perfectly round to give you 16 to 18 perfectly identical slices. You can serve Sugarplum hot or cold in sandwiches, whip up some ham and eggs for breakfast, or serve it for snacks or supper, any time.

Look for Sugarplum, the everyday ham with the glaze on top, and give it a try this week. For no special reason.

Except to save a quarter.

out by a little water. The vendor then ran his fingers on the inside of the glass to guarantee no impurities. Then a glass was poured for Halim. He downed it with gusto in a ritual familiar to him since childhood.

Feeling a little hungry, we grabbed a cab back to the hotel, stowed the gear and walked to a little restaurant down the street. We ate shish kebab and salad and drank beer. Most of the conversation sounded like para, para, para and araba, araba, araba. Para is the lira that's lacking in most Turkish pockets and araba is the unobtainable car that the para will buy.

That afternoon we boarded a ferry and headed across the Bosporus to the Asiatic side of Istanbul. Our objective was to photograph a prayer ritual outside, and if possible inside, a mosque. We selected a small one and paid off the caretaker who quickly disappeared. Our timing was bad, though. Trying to remain as unobtrusive as possible, I shielded my camera as a funeral procession entered the mosque courtyard where we were standing. The pallbearers carried a wooden coffin and their bereavement was obvious. If they had spotted my camera, Halim would have really had his work cut out for him. We were violating a strong Moslem taboo. The group passed to a graveyard in the rear and we felt safer.

Using Halim as a shield, I quickly shot some footage of a small group of worshipers with my hand camera. They were performing their ablutions — a ritualistic washing of the hands and feet — at a rotundular fountain in the courtyard. Near the entrance to the mosque a few Moslems were praying next to a tiled wall. The area was surrounded by a latticed wrought iron rail. I poked my lens through an opening and cranked away. Fortunately, the noise of the camera went unnoticed. The worshipers seemed to be too involved with their prayers to be aware of outsiders. Their prayer ritual is specific and sequential. They stand, sit, then press the forehead to the carpeted floor.

Halim and I then removed our shoes and entered the mosque. I quickly shot again, and in seconds we departed silently, like thieves in the night.

Close to the mosque, on a hill overlooking the Bosporus, hundreds of stone caskets sprawled over the sun-scorched ground. Shrouded in mystery, the casket lids bore meticulously carved Hebrew inscriptions; their origin seemed unknown. A professor at the University of Istanbul theorized they might be the remains of a Jewish settlement that fled Spain during the infamous Inquisition some 600 years ago.

The next few days we shot scenics and local color around the periphery of Istanbul.

If the eyes are the windows of the soul, then certainly people are the windows of a nation, for they reveal a great deal. We hid our camera in a second-story window and captured the following scenes: A man getting his head shaved by a street barber in a parking lot, an outdoor haberdasher whose inventory of ready-to-wear hung on a nearby fence, and the common sight of boys walking together, side by side, arms locked in friendship. Turkish tradition still keeps male and female apart, and, although the boys are aware of the girls, a date is out of the question.

A fresh, balmy breeze kicked up as our ferry glided over the placid waters of the Sea of Mamara. We were under way once again, heading toward the southwestern coast of Turkey to document the rural life and antiquities of this remote area. The ferry afforded us a shortcut that would have speeded our arrival into Izmir, but our motorhome developed problems. Constant vapor-lock slowed us down.

Following a circuitous route, our motorhome limped through Bursa, Balikesir and Manisa. A faulty generator knocked out our air conditioning and refrigeration, placing our film in jeopardy. The delicate color balance could be affected by excessive heat. Inside the van the heat was unbearable. The thermometer read 107 degrees. We were constantly at the mercy of Turkish truck drivers, whose kamikaze tactics terrorized all motorists. They drove as if they had a special divine protection; or perhaps they believed the brightly painted inscriptions on their bumpers and radiators which stated, "Allah is my guiding light," or "Allah will protect me."

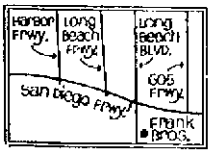

Looking more like a chic Mexican resort than a Turkish port of call, Izmir came into view a few days later. This charming, friendly city on the Aegean Sea boasted palm trees, spacious parks and ultra modern hotels. Here we overnighted and early the next morning struck out for the enchanting port of Kusadasi; we learned that an exotic belly dancer was performing daily at the Caravanserai of Mehmet Pasa.

For almost a thousand years the caravanserais have been a tradition in Turkey. They provided a form of shelter and entertainment that is hard to match, even today. Wealthy merchants, leading heavily laden camel trains, eagerly sought refuge at these "inns." They partook of excellent food, rested on thick Persian rugs and feasted their eyes on the provocative movements of the belly dancer. Today, only a handful of these "inns" remain.

The courtyard of the Caravanserai of Mehmet Pasa was filled with small tables, fully occupied. Each table had a narghile, or water pipe. The music started to play. From the balcony, the well endowed belly dancer walked gracefully down a long flight of steps to the courtyard. Her costume was brief, partially "concealed" by a transparent veil. She started her dance. A series of undulating movements seemed to hypnotize the crowd. Then she glided through some turns and spins, accompanied by an increased tempo in the music. The thin veil followed her movements, enhancing the provocative aura of the dance. Her undulations quickened, and so did the pent up enthusiasm of the crowd.

I was filming this segment of the dance from the balcony and saw one young Turk leap from his chair. He rushed over to the dancer and slowly placed some lira notes inside her low cut halter. Another man quickly followed his lead. Although Turkey's social code is stringent, this is an accepted means of rewarding a performer. The lovely dancer led a more guarded life than her profession would seem to imply, also. During, the filming, the performer's mother was watching from behind an archway; she escorted her daughter to and from all performances.

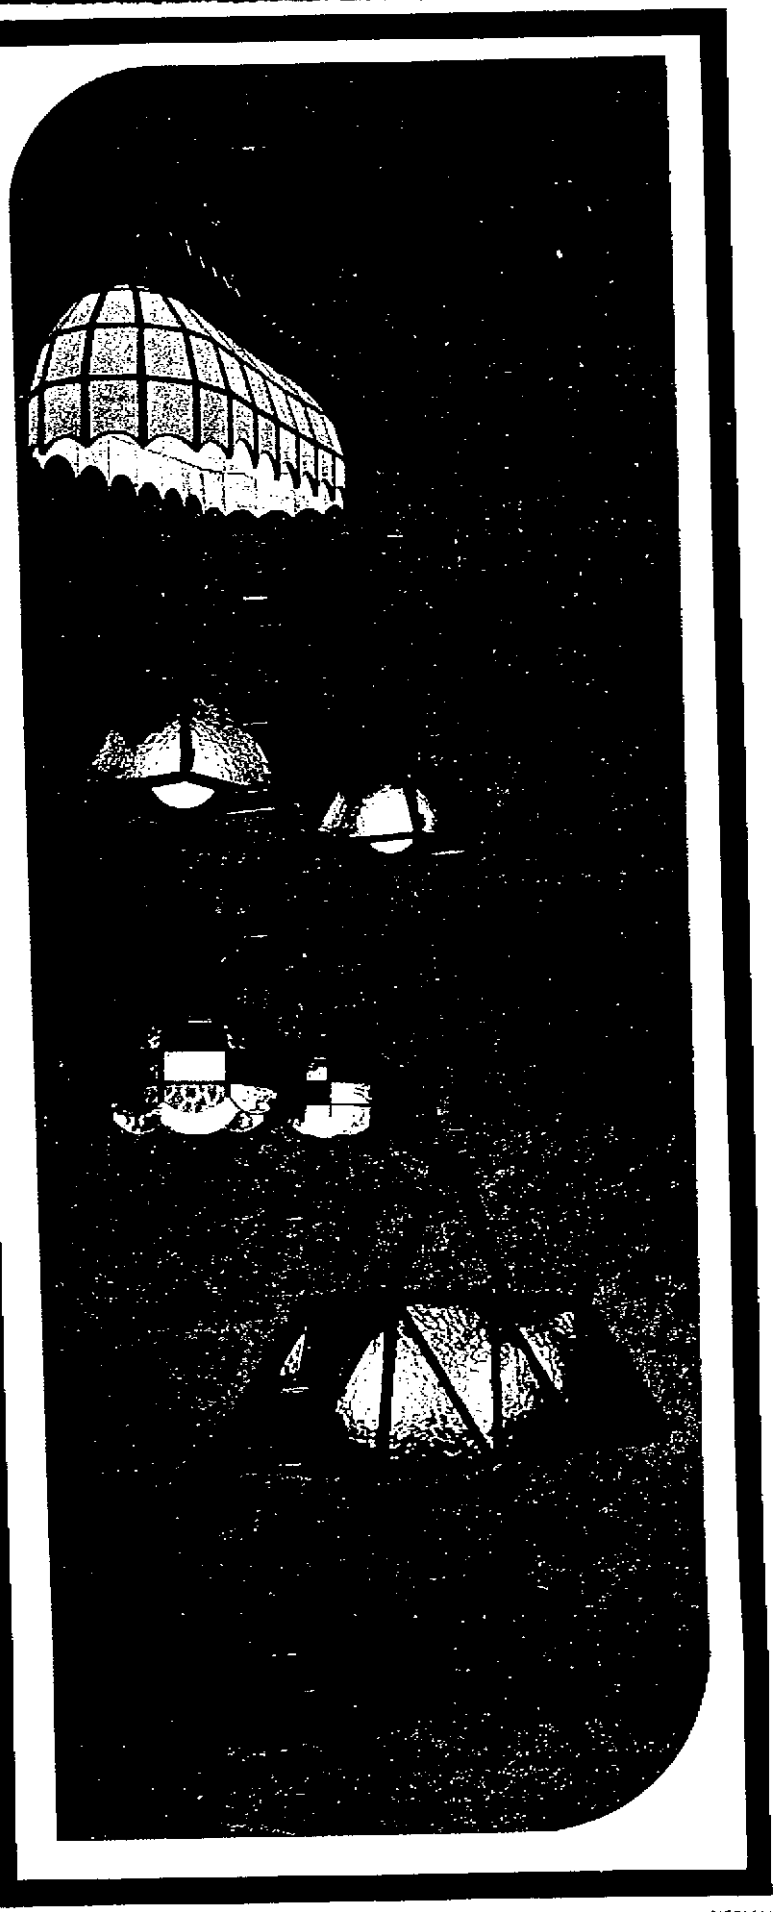

To me, this was one of the most enjoyable shooting sessions of the trip, and the most frenetic. I alternated my shooting from the balcony to the courtyard. The heavy camera with the zoom lens was set up on the balcony. Halim stood at the bottom of the steps with my hand camera, ready to pass it to me as I flew down the steps. I must have rushed up and down the steps at least eight times within 10 minutes; but on a limited budget, one cameraman has to do it all.

That evening we returned to Izmir and retired early. It was dawn the following day. We stood on the sight we had longed to see ever since our arrival in Turkey; the world renowned ruins of Ephesus, founded in the 14th century B.C. Here, Halim pulled off the most remarkable stunt of the entire trip. He had secured permission to drive the van onto the famed Arcadian Way, once the main street in the ancient city. The long marble avenue, still in remarkable condition, once stretched from the center of the city to the Aegean Sea. Using the van as a camera dolly, we slowly moved up the marble street photographing the partially crumbled columns that flanked us.

There are no words to express one's feeling of awe at Ephesus. Its violent history has seen the invasion of Roman legions and has heard the rumble of war chariots echo through its streets. Even the Apostle Paul preached here to a hostile crowd. All these great names in the theater of history were former tenants: Andronicus; Croesus, King of Lydia; Cyrus the Great; Alexander the Great. Even Cleopatra entered Ephesus in triumph. The most striking building at Ephesus is the Temple of Hadrianus. Photographing its interior reliefs that depicted the founding of Ephesus, I wondered how exquisite Hadrian's temple must have been 3,000 years ago, when wealthy Romans gathered here.

Threading our way back from Ephesus, we came upon a camel caravan crossing the dusty road ahead. I told Halim to stop and ask the camel driver where he was heading. The driver mentioned the village of Menemen and said he would be there the next day. We were anxious to document a camel wrestling event. The spectacle of camel wrestling, like the bullfights of Spain and Mexico, is a part of Turkish tradition and has never before been phorographed by outsiders, if indeed they were photographed at all. Recording the event would add an exciting element to our film.

Early the next day we struck out for Menemen. An hour's drive later we were on the outskirts of a small village. Seated by an ancient wall was a small group of women, some hiding their faces behind veils. I wanted to record their reaction to my camera, openly. I told Halim what I proposed to do. He said he would stop the van close to the group and wait, leaving the door open. I jumped out, pressed the camera button and cranked away. One girl stood up, waving her hands in front of her face, and the others hurled a barrage of insults. Then the shoes started flying; several hit me lightly. An older woman went for a rock. I

Movies hit hard times in the '60s until "along came new and young guns with low-cost films and retaught a lesson once learned but forgotten," notes Dore Schary. Below, Dustin Hoffman (left) and Jon Voight in scene from the hit "Midnight Cowboy."

Dore Schary has written the screenplays for more than 40 movies, eight of them Academy Award winners . . . "Boys' Town" and "Sunrise at Campobello," to name two. He came to Hollywood in the depths of the Depression and has lived through its paroxysms from the advent of sound, color, wide screen, 3-D and TV pilot films. Now the outgoing commissioner of cultural affairs for New York City (he wants to return to writing), Schary ponders Hollywood's history, glorious and inglorious. Is it art? Is it dying? Like Broadway, Hollywood can be said to be a "fabulous invalid"; but, as Schary shows in the ensuing article, reports of its death may be grossly exaggerated.

IS HOLLYWOOD DYING?

By Dore Schary

Photography came to America in 1839. It was greeted as a cute device, the use of which developed into a long-running debate — But Is It Art?

Matthew Brady gave us a record of the Civil War which heated up the argument. Yes, it was history and looked suspiciously like art.

Stereopticons gave us migraine headaches and a more intense discussion, which changed course when Thomas Edison took some previous research by Lumier and others and out of a black box produced a series of photos on a reel of film in such quick succession that the movement of people in front of the lens quite properly was called moving pictures.

A new gold rush to California came into being. No burros but trains. No picks and axes but some folding money. No sluices leading to pans and sieves but cameras turning film in rhythm to the tune, "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles."

It was a wild and free time. Claims were staked out in outdoor studios, and three-sided jerry-built stages contained indoor sets with the empty fourth wall flooded by sunlight powered in by reflectors.

The theater looked on these lurid, proceedings with amused contempt.

These "movies" certainly were not art, they were to the cognoscenti a degrading method of making a living.

Along with the boring dialogue about whether movies were art or not, each change that took place in Hollywood (THE FILM CAPITAL of the world) brought on dire and ominous prophecies: "Hollywood is dying." "Hollywood is almost dead."

It is these matters — art and Hollywood's mortality — to which the writer will address himself.

In 1914 a director, David Wark Griffith, made a film called "The Birth of a Nation." Produced today it would justifiably bring on riots, but it had stunning new ideas — close-ups, dissolves, extraordinary deep focus battle scenes and remarkable photography which paled previous films into blurs.

The "But Is It Art?" conflict rose to new decibels as partisan numbers increased on both sides of the issue.

A BABYLONIAN ERA

As the years wore on, even the most hard-nosed unbelievers began to get religion. Motion pictures took on the respectable name of cinema as directors Rex Ingram, Erich Von Stroheim, Josef Von Sternberg, King Vidor, Lewis Milestone, Victor Fleming, Clarence Brown, James Cruze and a host of others flocked into town, attracted to a medium that not only promised them an opportunity to fashion an art into new forms but a hell of a good chance to make big money with which to buy cars, homes, wives and classy clothes.

It was a Babylonian era of opulence rather screwed up by Moorish and Spanish rancho architecture and the birth of the super-star system and the big studio concept.

Independent companies caught in the growing net of the expansion were absorbed by the big spiders.

Pictures were drawing in the patrons in uncountable millions and huge palaces were built in this flourishing Xanadu by the Kubla Khans of Paramount, R.K.O., M.G.M. and Warners, to exhibit films such as "The Big Parade," "The Four Horsemen of the Acpocalypse," "Greed," "Seventh Heaven," "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "What Price Glory?"

The "business-art" industry had passed by the Pearl White serial age and was soon to enter the talking period of time, which it did with "The Jazz Singer" in Vitaphone with Al Jolson breaking your heart singing "Mammy" on one knee.

Well, Charlie, this 1927 phenomenon opened up the old feuds and the McCoys and the Hatfields opened up again with their muskets.

When I arrived in Hollywood in 1933, Welford Beaton, owner and editor of Spectator, a movie magazine, was continuing to raise hell about talking pictures which he considered an abomination, a trick, a device (remember 1839 and the photograph?) and urged a return to the beauty, grace and quiet of the silent film.

Beautiful stars with less than beautiful voices were turned out to pasture as actors with voices but little photogenic quality were brought out to replace them and, in turn, were replaced.

It was a bloody and awful time. The mercenaries most sought after to tackle the job of taking sound and grafting it into a new form of art in the film were the writers.

It was for them a golden age of patronage. By train they streamed into Hollywood, determined to obey the first commandment laid down by an unknown Moses of writers — "Don't buy anything you can't take home on The Chief." (For the younger folk it must be made clear "The Chief" was the deluxe train that brought the new goldminers to Hollywood.)

The demand for pictures was enormous; the studios were thriving; talkies were no longer a sometime thing and the writers were riding tall in the saddle — it was, indeed, the best years of their lives as screenwriters.

Many of those early pioneers are still around. George Seaton, Joe Mankiewicz, Leonard Spigelgass, Philip Dunne are still working their claims. Others such as Norman Krasna, Sidney Kingsley, Allen Rivkin and your correspondent are onlookers and sometime participants.

IT IS SO ART

There was a shaking-down period to get the talking track to match the picture, but soon the "It Is So Art" tribe had good arguments: The realistic films, "Public Enemy," "Scarface." Comedies, "It Happened One Night," "Lady for a Day," "The Awful Truth." Drama, "The Informer," "Gone With the Wind," "Grapes of Wrath." All these plus a few good musicals, westerns, melodramas won many sharp victories and the deniers retired sullenly to their small offices.

Color was the next issue that brought out the tomahawks. Black-and-white films were for us — we dreamed in black and white — the great films were all in black and white — they were our unconscious and movies were our dreams — that's why they were art — color destroys the whole mystery of cinema art.

These persuasive arguments were challenged and almost clobbered to death by "Gone With the Wind," which made the use of color in film an art form and laid to rest an additional shibboleth, "An audience won't watch a picture if it's over two hours long." David O. Selznick's epic privately referred to (before its release) as "Selznick's Folly" turned into a giant-killer which ran over four hours in length.

However, while color became popular in epics and costume pictures, Orson Welles wheeled out the filmic biography "Citizen Kane," and the black-and-white adherents added another marker to their score.

On the way to further art achievements, the movies had a funny thing happen to them — World War II. Color was rare, too expensive, too complicated, and eveyone reverted to black and white as Lucky Strike green went to war along with motion pictures.

(Years later Darryl Zanuck never forgave the army for shooting all war footage in black and white. The lack of color cut millions off the gross of "The Longest Day" (though it did well enough to make many bankers forget the disastrous "Cleopatra.")

Everyone was so concerned with fighting the Japanese and Germans and Italians that the But Is It Art rhubarb faded away — temporarily. There was no TV — no bowling businesses — no traveling — little golfing — and movies were raking in millions.

Some of the movies were damned good, though they were loaded with lots of propaganda — hurrah for us, England and Russia, and our allies and bad cess to the other guys.

First there were government hearings charging movies for warmongering. That Punch and Judy show flopped. After the war there were other hearings to prove the movies were loaded with Russian propaganda. That tragic production didn't prove its point but did ruin or interrupt the careers of many talented creators and unearthed some Communists whom no one ever proved to have done anything harmful except carry a party card.

NEW SCREENS NO CURE

Growing into a husky giant competitor was TV. At the same time Italy, France, England, Japan and Sweden were beginning to develop their own film empires and, before you could say Samuel Bronston Productions, Hollywood was fighting its own two-front war.

New shapes of screen were in the experimental stage. Cinerama led to Cinemascope which led to Todd A.O. which led to MagnaScope. All in luscious Technicolor, Agfa and Metrocolor and who remembers what.

With massive screens and bright colors came "surround" sound which scared hell out of you as the roar of cannons came bursting around you and you found yourself looking for the source of sound rather than watching what was going on with the people on the screen.

It was inevitable that the "Art" brouhaha would be revived. But the experimental era settled down — gone forever was the postage-stamp screen — the wide screen of reasonable dimensions became a way of life — and as color became a TV staple, Hollywood went all color. The 3-D movie, which had a mild fling of success before it became obvious it would produce a race of wall-eyed and myopic Americans, died the death it so richly deserved. No one shed a tear.

But movies are mercurial — uncontrollable. Just when everyone thought they could begin to breathe easy, they discovered they were suffering from emphysema brought on by TV exhibition.

TV was a maw that ate up the backlog of old movies.

Foreign films were getting more candid, and the motion-picture code which had always been too restrictive had to bend with the wind. But the wind was strong and the code was jettisoned into the poor frail thing it is today.

The era of breast and buttocks was born and oh my friends and oh my foes what a fire-fight that brought on. Liberation at last! Licentiousness has carried the day. Off with your clothes! Hypocrisy is dead! March the road to victory with rape and violence and, really fellows, adultery was never a sometime thing. Read your Kinsey again.

Color became king in the early '40s, but Orson Welles (above) wheeled out "Citizen Kane" and the black-and-white "Is It Art?" adherents added another marker to their score.

IS HOLLYWOOD DYING?

But the trouble was still there until Richard Zanuck bought "The Sound of Music" and Robert Wise turned it into a money tree. That quite obviously was the way to go — and go everybody did into multi-starred, multi-millioned movies — 8, 10, 15, 20 — who'll say 24?

Somebody said it — and then, after windfalls like "The Graduate," the windfalls turned into roadblocks and the casualties were piled high and Paramount, Metro Goldwyn Mayer, Twentieth Century Fox, Columbia and Warners were in jeopardy.

And along came the new and young guns with low-cost films and retaught a lesson once learned but forgotten.

"They don't have to be costly to be good."

"Easy Rider," "Midnight Cowboy," "Joe," "Lovers and Other Strangers," "Goodbye Columbus" and leave us not forget "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" — not to mention a swarm of first-rate films from European film makers which proved to be far better investments than "Mayerling" or "Paint Your Wagon."

So grieve not. Hollywood is neither dead nor dying. It's changing. And perhaps all for the good.

The critics — Kael, Canby, Simon, Crist, Sarris, Farber, et al. may disagree (May? Hell! They do disagree) about which pictures are art, but they agree that films — or cinema — or motion pictures — or plain movies — are an art. They are made by artists (some good — some lousy) and sold by businessmen (some smart — some stupid). But all art has the same cycle — the artist creates and the entrepreneur sells — be it ballet, opera, sculpture, painting, drama or Andy Warhol.

So the long, silly discussion is at an end. Don't say, "But is it art?" Say, "Of course it is." □

IS HOLLYWOOD DYING?

THE AUTHOR

Academy Award-winning writer Dore Schary is as familiar to movie fans as the roaring Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (M-G-M) lion, whose credo "Art for Art's Sake" he has made his own life style. "It would certainly seem," said Cue magazine, "that he has discovered a magic key to living a fully public life in a remarkably private and distinctly personal fashion."

Schary has authored 40 screenplays, eight of them Academy Award winners including: "Boys' Town"; "Battle of Gettysburg," a documentary; "Lonelyhearts"; "Sunrise at Campobello," adapted from his stage play, and "Act One."

He also has directed about 350 films ... classics such as "Lili," "The Red Badge of Courage," "An American in Paris," "Ivanhoe" and "Tea and Sympathy." Thirty-four copped Oscars under his aegis.

Born in Newark, N.J., the young Schary worked variously as haberdashery salesman, printer's devil, reporter and buyer of china. He began an acting career in summer stock, but turned to his chief love, playwriting, soon after. His effort, "One Every Minute," won him a contract with Columbia Studios, and he arrived in Hollywood with $36, a bride and high hopes.

Not even the Depression could squelch his speed, zest and talent. With his award-winning screenplay for "Boys' Town" at M-G-M, Schary rocketed to executive rank. Eventually, after successful stints with Vanguard Productions and RKO, he was named vice president in charge of production at M-G-M and recognized as a figure of enormous authority in Hollywood.

His approach to production is guided by numerous convictions. He believes "there are no substitutes for enthusiasm, imagination and entertainment that dares to be different" ... has "a high respect for the intelligence of the American audience" ... and is convinced that "any sacrifice of quality in picture-making is economically unsound."

Sometime this month he will relinquish his post as New York City's commissioner of cultural affairs. He presently is negotiating with Jimmy Durante to produce and write the book for a Broadway musical based on the comedian's early career.

In addition to his many community and national activities, Schary contributes frequently to popular magazines, lectures widely and is author of "Case History of a Movie," "For Special Occasions" and the screenplay "Storm in the West" with Sinclair Lewis.

In his article "Is Hollywood Dying?," the author includes us in on an examination of his favorite, mercurial "patient" — Has the Silver Screen gone gray? Has she prostituted her art away? — and he comes up with a fascinating diagnosis. □

Married

threshed out even if this leads to fights. Any fighting that does occur should be fair. For example, this means sticking to the issues at hand, listening to what the other partner has to say before responding, and not hitting below the belt (e.g., character assassination.)

"A good marriage takes a lot of trust, respect and hard work. Each marital partner should behave as if the marriage were a one-year contract renewable at the end of each year only at the option of both parties. With such an outlook, both would be inspired to really get in and do their best."

George D. Demos, Ph.D., Long Beach, writes: "There is no single secret (of happy marriage), but from my experience it consists of a combination of many factors that impinge upon the relationship.

"One could easily make a list of some of these factors which are relevant but, as simplistic as it might appear, so much seems to depend in my judgment upon the qualities of open communication. This implies not only the willingness to talk and express one's feelings, both positive and negative, but also the willingness to listen and be empathic with regard to the other person's feelings."

Many persons today seem to equate happy marriage with "sexual adjustment." The bookstands are filled with volumes purporting to explain how to achieve happiness through sexual techniques. The marriage counselors do not stress the importance of physical sexual activity. Few even mentioned it.

Two counselors, however, feel that physical contact is an important part of communication in a happy marriage. They are William E. Hartman, Ph.D., and Marily A. Fithian, the Center for Marital and Sexual Studies, Long Beach. They gave this statement:

"We counsel couples only in relation to sexual problems, so our frame of reference is from that dealing with sexual dissatisfaction.

"So you wish to be happily married? Get rid of sexual myths. Don't let problems from other areas of your marriage slip over into the bedroom. The best method, we have found, is to get you to develop an intimate relationship between you and your spouse. There should be a lot of nonverbal communication of a positive sort transmitted through touch between you and your partner.

"Sexual mechanics can be learned, but, unless they are in the context of a meaningful relationship, they don't make much sense. The best thing a couple can do is get in touch with each other and to enjoy the touch. It should not be simply a prelude to intercourse but a part of the daily pattern of living and loving. Focus in on feelings of pleasure and warmth derived from being touched and touching each other. Masters and Johnson call it sensat focus, and we, like they, feel this essential to a good on-going relationship."

How well do you love yourself? Most counselors stress mature self-regard as a principal ingredient in a happy marriage. How can you have respect for another if you don't respect yourself?

Herbert and Lois Abrams, Los Alamitos, stated it this way: "The most prevalent factor in one's existence, be it married or single, is positive individual self-regard. We have found that couples with marriage problems lack this individual self-regard.

"We emphasize the concepts of: Examine oneself first, find meaning within one's own existence, accept yourself as an individual and understand yourself and your role within the framework of your life. We feel that life and marriage are continuing processes, ever growing ... ever becoming."

David R. Ruderman, Ph.D., Long Beach, said: "If you can follow your own likes and dislikes, it is possible for you to keep in line with your own personality. It is a fact that whatever we find is as good as we deserve. The problem is less the adequacy of the other person than one's own ability and willingness to do the best with what one is and what one has."

The self-regard may transcend the ordinary world to an ideal of what it means to be a human being, believes John W. Koekkoek, Pacific Christian College, Long Beach. "A uniquely necessary factor that can make the added difference in a marriage is the recognition and acceptance of a spiritual dimension (man is more than a noble animal) in the marriage relationship. This is not the embracing of a particular religious stance but realizing that marriage is fundamentally a relationship of two people who are spiritual beings and, hence, must be related to each other primarily in terms of attitudes, goals, values and purpose."

Richard A. Hogan, Ph.D., Downey, sees true self-love as the basis for happy marriage. "A happy marriage develops when each partner assumes the full responsibility for his own happiness. In this case each person is literally 'married to life,' but chooses a marriage partner to share this with. Thus, aliveness, vitality and happiness are developed by each person in his own life and brought into marriage to enrich and deepen the intimate relationship."

When two such persons mate, the result can be pretty wonderful. Christopher S. Rubel, Rel. D., Whittier, offers this remark: "A happy marriage cannot be possible ran for the van and jumped in as Halim thundered off.

TURKEY in the raw

Seconds later we entered the small village of Menemen. It seemed deserted. Suddenly, the air was filled with the sound of hoofbeats as dozens of turbaned Turks on horseback flew at us from every direction. They encircled our vehicle. Sharp, piercing eyes framed their hard, stoic expressions that seemed to convey a hostile attitude towards us. We did not feel welcome here. Even Halim seemed uneasy. Rural Turks are suspicious of strangers. Halim spoke to the leader and explained our intrusion.

In a turnabout that I had never before experienced, hostile glances melted away and we were feted in a manner befitting a visiting Sultan. The entire village turned out in our honor. We feasted and were entertained by folk dances. The hospitable village mayor granted us permission to film anything we desired. We set up our gear and started the film racing through our cameras.

The women were noticeably absent, except for the dancers. I learned later that the women were out in the fields performing a variety of chores. The men led a more leisurely existence. They passed the time indulging themselves in cards, drinking raki, a potent Turkish liqueur, and occasionally staging a camel wrestling event.

Soon we were led to a large field where five camels stood nervously around. The camel driver we had met the other day was tending his charges. A female camel was paraded in front of the four muzzled males and the spectacle began. Dust flew from the flying hoofs of the camels as a pair fought to bring each other's head under the other's body, holding him there to the death. Raucous, screeching noises expressed the anger of the animals as their muzzles whitened with froth. Lead ropes separated the camels before any harm could be done; the animal who could still lift his head was declared the victor.

Our cameras recorded a rare spectacle and we felt satisfied. Halim thanked the village mayor and we all shook hands. The mayor invited us back, saying we were welcome any time. I replied to him in the traditional Turkish response: "Hos bulduk — We have found welcome here." □ with unhappy or unfilled persons. If two miserable, lost, unidentified, dispirited, sexless and/or bored persons marry, there will be one miserable, dispiriting, sexless and boring marriage. If two filled, self-actualizing, sexy, loving, caring, inspirited, learning, living, mated persons come together in a relationship where they can carry out at least all of who and what they were before marrying, man! you'll see the wildest, most beautiful, dynamic, ongoing, complementary union you've ever witnessed."

Such free spirits cannot be "owned" or "possessed." Counselors warn that the common notion that one owns a spouse as one owns a car or a work of art is a frequent cause of marital shipwreck.

Dr. Moody said: "The only factor that can be stated as a generalization is that happy marriages are most frequently typified by an absence of possessiveness, of efforts to 'control' one's mate, an absence of attitude that a person 'owns' his mate. This assumes that one has a great deal of respect for the individuality of one's mate and does not try to 'mold' one's mate to fit some preconception of the perfect partner. Maturity in marriage often consists of learning to accept one's partner with all his or her weaknesses without having to change them."

Marriage in this "Year of Grace 1971" has many perils. It is a time of changing mores, displaced populations, alienation of the individual to his society, the threats of overpopulation, pollution, disorder and global war. All these have their impact on marriage.

But the state of the modern world is not the worst enemy of happy marriage. The foe is something old-fashioned, seeming sweet and beautiful, the lovely dream rooted in literature and drama. It is spelled R-O-M-A-N-C-E.

So many people think that marriage will solve all their problems, say the counselors. Just say the magic words and live happily ever after. Only it never works out that way.

Listen to Bruce Wallerstein, M.S.W., Long Beach: "I have always found that couples who are having the most problems are those whose expectations are not being fulfilled. This develops when the two people go into a marriage feeling that everything will be beautiful as soon as the ceremony is performed. This occurs not only with the young people whom I see weekly at the Free Clinic in Long Beach but also with the 'supposedly mature' adults whom I see in my office. I hope the new premarital counseling law helps to alleviate some of this problem by at least giving the young people an opportunity to look at marriage in a more realistic way. As for the adults, the situation is more difficult since we can do no wrong in choosing a spouse."

Miles Renear, B.D., Whittier, remarked: "Marriage is for adults, not children. Unfortunately most of us are far from emotionally mature in many areas. We therefore carry into marriage a childish expectation that our partner will meet our needs like an indulgent parent, and of course we resent the same expectation when it comes from our spouse. For many, therefore, marriage might be described as two children playing house each in search of an all-loving parent.

"The basic remedy for this state of affairs is a willingness on the part of each partner to resume his or her arrested growth toward emotional maturity. No one blueprint will work for everybody, but certainly one of the essentials is the blending of honest expression of one's own feelings with a genuine concern for the feelings of the other. St. Paul, though he was a bachelor, summed it up succinctly when he wrote: 'Speaking the truth in love, we are to grow up in every way.' (Ephesians 4.15.)

"An essential part of the maturing process is also to divest ourselves of the unrealistic belief that a woman's husband must be continually romantic and that a man's wife must be a constant sexpot. Measured by these standards we all would fail the test of being a good mate."

Dr. Ruderman adds: "There is no person in the world just waiting as half for the other half to complete his life. The right person is a daydream patterened by ideals, magic and mysticism. Scientific research indicated that a great many people of the opposite sex are perfectly fine choices. Further, even an undesirable choice implies only lesser probabilities for marital success. Perhaps the primary factor for a proper choice is the willingness to choose at all, plus common sense and determination to make the best of what one gets."

Amanda Rohde Jansen, ABEPP, Long Beach, warns: "Many people, especially young people, mistake infatuation for love. If marriage is based largely on extravagant passion, the attraction is soon satiated. Then nothing is left except cold reality which the partners usually are loath to accept. The marriage becomes a bond, often irking both mates. For a happy marriage there must be sharing of experiences, including sexual compatibility. There must be sharing of everyday needs; of emotional needs such as art, music, drama, motion pictures, television; and of spiritual needs, belief in God, attending church and abiding by their marriage vows."

The cliches of the mass entertainment media often give wrong notions about marriage. Norma L. Sadwick,

Ph.D., Los Angeles, said: "All too frequently the major ideas about marriage for the young people of the 1930s, 40s and 50s were formed in the movie theaters while viewing the romantic comedies of those days. Similarly, the young people of the 1960s and 70s are bombarded with the idealized family situation comedies on television."

Can happiness be attained in marriage? Can happiness be attained at all? Everyone knows couples — not many — who are unusually happy, but if they told their stories they would mention periods of sorrow, heartbreak, anger and despair. Happiness cannot be acquired as one acquires a car or a house. It is a fluid thing requiring growth, change, continuing effort. The counselors point this out again and again.

In the give and take of marriage there must be largeness of spirit. The Rev. R. J. Thomas, Psychological Counseling Center, Long Beach, says: "To give and take also means to forgive and forget. Each partner must serve the other in sickness or sorrow as well as in times of joy and peace ... Couples forget the contract specifies for better or for worse and want to accept only the good times. Marriages must be made to work for it is not just a personal venture between man and woman but is the happiness of future generations."

Robert N. Jones, Manhattan Associated Counselors, Manhattan Beach, remarked: "Happiness in any context is never permanent. It is a process of varying degree involving two or more people in the context of relationships. Marital happiness is achieved, therefore, in the process of growth and change intellectually and emotionally. It is derived from a relationship that is free, open and responsible to growth and change."

There is always some pain involved in achieving happiness. S. E. Caukins, Psychological Counseling Center, Long Beach, comments:

"Marriage IS NOT the pursuit of happiness but an opportunity to create a mutual relationship for growth and development. In all change, even passing through the pangs of adolescence, there can be a great deal of pain as well as satisfaction. Couples should recognize unhappiness is a symptom pointing to underlying needs that must be resolved in order to grow.

"A fertile and rich climate for growth must include the qualities of mutual respect, acceptance, empathy, communication, assumption of responsibility, sexual attraction and love. Communication must express feelings, affection and hostility in a balanced and creative manner. Personal feelings can be expressed strongly and loudly; the partner must never be attacked personally. They both must be mature enough to assume the pain of responsibility that results in any give and take, sharing, or love relationship. Love means someone else's life is as important to you as your own. It is a multiple extension of self. It can never be a substitute for our own inadequacies or frustrations."

For some persons, the only way to avoid an unhappy marriage is to avoid marriage. Jacqueline C. Bouhoutsos, Ph.D., president of the Los Angeles County Psychological Association, says: "The basic question which must be asked people entering a marriage or deciding to end one is a philosophical one. It is the question of whether they prefer to be alone and take all that entails — both benefits and disadvantages — or to be with another person, with all that entails.

"If you have an ability to love — to care — for another human being, if you do not need love in return, but can accept it when it is given, you have a good chance of finding marriage not only a tolerable state, but one which is even pleasurable at times.

"If you can't love freely or don't want to — avoid marriage like the plague. Divorce is an unpleasant procedure at best, and a marriage for you, or with you, would be pure misery."

John T. Gilfillan Jr., M.D., of the Gilfillan Psychiatric Medical Clinic, Westminster, gives four pieces of advice concerning happy marriage:

"I first would say that husband and wife should always try to be out-spoken in telling each other not only complaints but compliments. So often we find couples who from fear or desire to keep the peace hold back expression of their strong feelings which then simmer below the surface and find outlet in roundabout ways, usually inappropriately in retaliation.

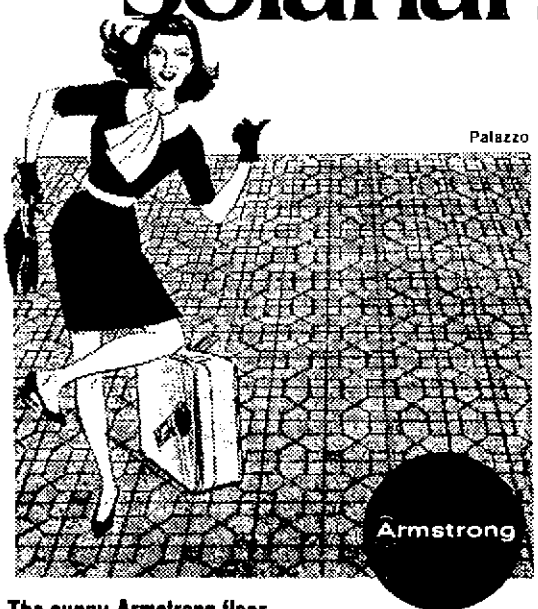

"Another common problem is the tendency for husbands to forget that the wife has a continuing need for social stimulation and variety. The man is busy all day outside the home with plenty of social interaction while the wife becomes bogged down in a repetitious round of household chores and longs for excitement.

"A third big thing to remember is that parents must be clearly united in policy toward their children. Differences should be worked out between father and mother first and then the rules may be presented to children. Unfortunately we often see battles fought through the children or some kind of choosing up sides which is exploited by the children with a breakdown of discipline.

"Lastly I would suggest that sexual problems not be used as excuses for marital distress for they are seldom causes but rather the results of interpersonal difficulties." □

The Milk Way

PHOTOGRAPH BY CHARLES SNIDER

By Virginia Heffington
Food Editor

June is dairy month — a good time to talk about California's number one agricultural industry.

The state's dairymen produced and distributed more than 3½ billion quarts of milk last year — a far cry from the handful of dairy cows 200 years ago which were mostly in the San Diego area, supplying the Mission and the sparsely settled Mission territory.

California is a fluid milk state, meaning that most of our milk is used for drinking purposes. However, in 1970, enough milk remained for almost 60 million pounds of butter, 150 million pounds of cottage cheese, plus plenty of whipping cream, yogurt and ice cream.

No one denies that even adults need calcium every day and milk and most dairy products are the best sources of calcium in the American diet, according to Fredrick J. Stare, M.D. and professor of nutrition at the Harvard School of Public Health.

"It's a lot easier to get the calcium you need from dairy products than from other foods. You need a lot of green leafy vegetables like lettuce and kale or plenty of fish with bone like canned salmon or sardines to take the place of dairy foods," Dr. Stare claims, pointing out that though butter is a dairy product, it contains no calcium. "It's almost all fat."

Best sources of calcium among dairy products are whole, skim or dry milk, buttermilk, Cheddar or similar cheese and ice cream. Cottage cheese is a good source of calcium but not nearly as good as other cheeses, Dr. Stare says.

Though he disagrees with the dairy spokesmen who recommend a quart of milk a day for adults, he feels the best way to improve most people's diet is by a glass of milk or an ounce of cheese a day.

"The overemphasis of dairy people on milk crowds out other necessary foods like oranges or strawberries, which are excellent sources of vitamin C. And milk is a very poor source of C."

We include three recipes using dairy products. Potato salad takes on tangy flavor made with cottage cheese. Pink Cloud is a summer cooler for the young set made with peppermint and pistachio ice creams, milk and a little lemon-lime carbonated beverage. Ice Cream Punch is an easy answer to a shower, wedding reception or graduation party if you don't want your punch spiked.

ICE CREAM PUNCH

- 2 cans (5 or 6 ounces each) frozen lemonade concentrate
- 1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange-juice concentrate
- 9 cups cold water
- 5 pints pineapple or lemon sherbet
- 1 quart vanilla ice cream

Combine frozen concentrates and water. Spoon sherbet and ice cream into punch bowl, breaking in small chunks with spoon. Add juice mixture, stirring till sherbet and ice cream are partially melted. If desired, trim with orange slices and sprigs of fresh mint. Makes 5 quarts or 40 one-half cup servings.

PINK CLOUD

- 1 scoop peppermint ice cream
- ⅔ cup milk
- ⅓ cup lemon-lime carbonated beverage
- 1 scoop pistachio ice cream

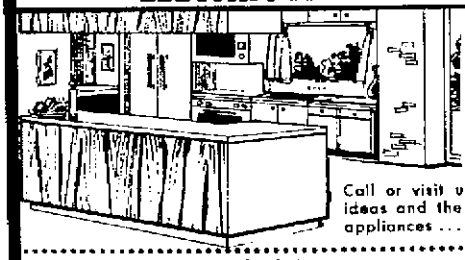

Blend peppermint ice cream and milk in tall glass. Gently stir in carbonated beverage. Top with pistachio ice cream. Makes 1 refreshing serving.

COTTAGE CHEESE POTATO SALAD

- 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 4 cups cooked, sliced potatoes (about 4 potatoes)
- ¾ cup sliced celery
- 1 cup cottage cheese
- ¾ cup mayonnaise or similar salad dressing
- ⅔ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup sliced radishes
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard

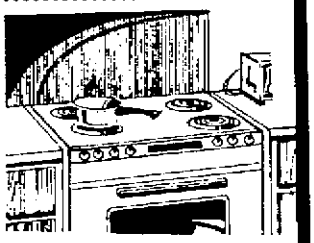

Combine ingredients and chill. Serve with cherry tomatoes. Makes 6 to 8 servings. □

A Bernal Street Family

By Frank J. Canney

Houses grow old and tired. So do entire blocks and neighborhoods. It was this way on Bernal Street, part of my postal route in a Northern California city. Due to age and neglect, almost all of these homes had become seriously rundown. The siding paint was streaked and peeling and the front yards had turned brown from lack of care.

But there was a single exception to this: The house of the Clark family. This stood out like an orchid on a slag pile. And the Clarks were unusual for another reason.

They were black.

In a neighborhood consisting mostly of whites and a few Mexican-Americans, this family had received an uncertain welcome when it moved in a year ago. Within a few months, however, four other houses were occupied by blacks. Soon it looked as if this block would become another bright spot in civic life — a peacefully integrated district.

But this was before the Clarks' actions made them stand out like a Black Students Union in a small Mississippi college.

And before hate and envy almost ruined their lives.

Mr. Clark and I got to know each other quite well. One day, while delivering their mail, he told me that the little house had cost him $7,000, complete with mortgage.

"Lettie and I saved for three years to get the down payment," he said with a glint of pride in his dark eyes.

He had a good reason for pride. I recalled that the former owners had sold him what amounted to a shack, with peeling paint, a sagging front porch and a weed-grown lawn. The wiring and plumbing had been of the hit-and-miss variety, with the former presenting a definite fire hazard. But Mr. Clark, who worked in the local railroad yards, installed new wiring and plumbing right after moving in. Then, with the help of his wife, he painted inside and out and built an enclosed porch. Next he tore up the front and back lawns, putting in new grass seed and planting a border of flowers and shrubs. He put the finishing touches on everything by constructing a white picket fence around the front lawn.

Soon the neat little house became the focus of attention on the block.

And of many envious glances.

I heard remarks about those "uppity colored folks" from only one person on the block. "Those Negroes think they can come here and put themselves above us white people," said a thin, complaining woman. But I detected an expression of envy in her eyes as she gazed at the Clarks' neat, green-bordered home.

I handed her the mail, saying nothing. I felt like asking, however, why she and her husband did not paint and repair their own house, which had become almost a shack due to years of neglect.

Then came the day when a terrible change came into the lives of James and Letitia Clark.

I was just rounding the corner one morning on my mail route when I noticed a group of people standing halfway down the block. Walking closer, I saw that they were clustered in front of the Clark home.

Sometimes you can sense matters of a tragic nature. You can even smell them. Or even taste them like some kind of bitter medicine.

So it was, right now. I speeded up my mail deliveries and soon came in view of what had been the neat little house of the Clark family.

But it was neat no longer.

I came to a stop and almost dropped the packet of letters from my hand. The house and lawn had been turned into a shambles. Months of hard work had disappeared in a few minutes of vandalism. Something had been run repeatedly over the lawn, cutting deep ruts, tearing up the flower beds and knocking down the picket fence. Red paint had been thrown over the porch and part of the siding. A rock had finished the job of destruction, breaking the glass in a large bay window.

Often, when damage is done to a dwelling, it is only of a material nature — which is bad enough in itself. In this case, however, the damage went far beyond defacing paint and broken boards and glass. For some homes have personalities, assumed from the love and care that the occupants have bestowed upon them.

Such was the home of James and Letitia Clark.

Now they stood on what was left of their porch. They said nothing at first when I walked up. "What happened? Who could do such a thing?" I wanted to ask, but the words stuck in my throat.

"They're bad folks in the world," said the husband listlessly after a moment. His dark eyes looked as if they had been beaten deep into their sockets.

Letitia sobbed into her handkerchief. After drying her eyes, she managed to blurt out what had happened. "A crashing sound woke me up last night," she related, going on to tell about the sounds of shouting, the roaring of a motor, and the crash of breaking wood and glass. They rushed out to the porch just in time to see a car racing away in the darkness.

Mr. Clark met me when I stopped the next afternoon with the mail. "Do you have any idea who could have done such a terrible thing?" I wanted to know.

He shook his head. "The police asked the same thing. But there's not much we could tell them. Our neighbors seem all right. The white folks are kind of uppity, but . . ." his voice trailed off as he apparently did not want to hurt my feelings.

Lettie Clark came out on the damaged porch at this time. She placed a comforting hand on the shoulder of her husband. In her sensitive eyes you could see the ancestral hurt of three centuries.

Only it would be deeper from now on.

Two days later, in making my postal deliveries on Bernal Street, I received a pleasant surprise. Four black men and a Mexican-American were engaged in working on the Clark house. Three of the men were painting over the ugly red stains defacing the porch and siding, while the other two spread seed on what would be a new lawn.

Mrs. Clark stood in the doorway. Her expressive eyes shined like those of a child on Christmas Eve. "The men want to finish the job before my husband gets home from work," she pointed out to me. "They want to show him what some folks can do at a time like this."

Despite Lettie's obvious joy, I detected a certain reserve in her manner. Gazing at the workers, I quickly knew what was troubling her. There were only two races here. There should be three.

Where are the white folks? she must be thinking. And the same thought crossed my mind. Where are my own people at an important time like this? Suspecting that one of their own number might have caused the damage to this once-neat home, were they ashamed to come forward and repair their wrong-doing?

Then another Mexican-American entered the front yard. Although the day was quite warm, he wore a large coat with many pockets. Everybody stopped work and stared at him as he walked up to Mrs. Clark.

"Senora," he said, politely removing his hat. "I am told to bring something to you and your husband."

The newcomer reached into his voluminous pockets and brought forth handfuls of bills of varying denominations. They were mostly ones, but with a few fives and one ten, that he gravely handed over to the lady of the house.

"Mr. Grijalva, where did you get all this money?" asked Lettie Clark, and her voice was high with excitement.

"From your good neighbors, Senora. They collect money for you to repair damage to house. A very bad thing indeed, this damage ... Count the money, por favor, Senora," he said, twisting his hat in calloused brown hands.

Lettie began counting with trembling fingers, now and then pausing to make certain she had not missed a single bill. "Ninety-eight dollars and twenty-seven cents," she said finally with a catch in her voice.

"No, Senora, more than that." Mr. Grijalva reached into a back pocket and brought forth a wallet. He opened it and removed two dollars, adding it to the total. "Now is one hundred dollar and twenty-seven cent. Is much better, yes?"

Lettie tried to thank him, but could not do so. She grasped Mr. Grijalva's hand and held it tightly for a moment. Meanwhile, her quick eye had detected something that was both unsettling and satisfying. She noticed that the man's wallet was empty after he had removed the two dollars. Her first reaction was to give back this money. She thought better than doing this, however, on realizing that such an action would hurt the pride of this field-worker.

Looking around, Mrs. Clark's dark eyes blinked. She tried to hold back the tears at the sight of the men around her. The two Mexican-Americans and the four blacks shuffled their feet in embarrassment.

Then she noticed something else. In many houses along the block people stood on their front porches. Apparently they had done this while Mr. Grijalva was handing over the money. And these folks, most of them white, were intently gazing at Lettie Clark. They stood there expectantly.

They were waiting, just waiting.

Mrs. Clark swallowed hard. Then she waved at her neighbors, faintly at first, then with arm-swinging abandon. The woman next door waved back. A couple across the street started walking over. Then two other couples left their porches and strolled after them. Some carried brushes and shovels.

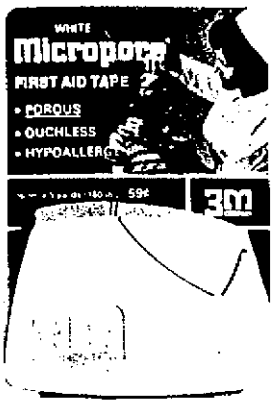

A few minutes later a score of people, black, brown and white, stood in front of the Clark house. Most of them didn't stand very long. They used their brushes and shovels to help paint the siding and to spread peat moss over the freshly seeded lawn.

An elderly woman walked across the street with a small shrub in her hands. She bent down and tenderly planted it by the porch.

I gazed at Letitia Clark. She looked back at me. Her dark eyes were wide. She placed a trembling hand over her mouth.

The houses of Bernal Street no longer look so old and tired. They seem to have acquired an air or order and neatness, even of brightness.

Like most of the people who live in them. □

GOURMET GUIDE

by Tedd Thomey

His friends call him the quiet host. During the busy luncheon and dinner periods, he's almost always present, but unobtrusively.

He doesn't shout greetings across the tables. He doesn't rush to the door and pump the hands of arriving guests. He blends in with the dining room background, stationing himself where he can keep an eye on the action. Occasionally he chats with the guests, making sure they're comfortable and everything is going well.

His name is Jose Pielago, but his friends — and they are legion — call him Peppy. He's a smallish man, partly bald, with a warm but almost shy smile. His restaurant is Peppy's, perched on a San Pedro hill at 584 W. Ninth St. between Pacific Avenue and Gaffey Street.

Peppy's is a remarkably popular, remarkably successful restaurant because it serves wonderful foods at intelligent prices. But the real reason it's so successful is because it sincerely reflects the personality and philosophy of Peppy himself.

Half a century ago, Peppy was born in a small house where the restaurant now stands. He has lived in the neighborhood all his life. Working hard, planning wisely, he has seen his restaurant grow from a small place into a large, two-story establishment acclaimed by visitors who drive there from throughout the Los Angeles and Long Beach areas.

The restaurant, combining modern and roaring '20s decor, is designed with the things Peppy likes — stained glass windows, old-fashioned crystal lamps, figurines and mirrors. He serves the things he likes to eat himself — thick, juicy, tender steaks, prime rib au jus, grenadine of beef, lobster-steak combination, king crab legs, scal-

No one ever leaves Peppy's feeling hungry, because the diners are huge, including relishes, steaming soup, big salad with croutons, baked potato, hot garlic bread and a little pot of hot au jus gravy. The prices are amazing. The superb special ball tip filet mignon is still only $2.95 and some of the dinners are only $2.50. Prime rib is $2.95 and so are many other entrees. Everything is prepared under the direction of Howard Brubeck, a truly gifted chef.

Peppy serves Sunday dinners from 3 p.m. on. Parking is available at the adjacent Glendale Federal Savings lot Sundays and daily from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. Peppy's upstairs banquet facilities, resembling a boat, can accommodate 100 persons.

RON SCOVILLE
Ceiling of Stars
Caricatures by Larry LaVoie

Is Monday a good day to visit the Executive Suite, 3400 E. Pacific Coast Hwy. at Redondo Avenue?

Definitely yes. If you're in the mood for a hearty executive-style luncheon — served by pretty girls — this beautiful, multi-level restaurant is a perfect place to take your business associates. It's also a fine place to visit on Monday night when the upstairs and downstairs dining rooms serve choice steaks, prime rib au jus, veal specialities, sweet tender lobster and other top-notch dinner entrees.

Owned by Ron Scoville, who's a young executive himself, the Executive Suite serves luncheon and dinner Monday through Saturday. The nighttime action is particularly interesting Thursday through Saturday nights when the Starlight Terrace dining room offers dancing and entertainment. The music is contemporary with a youthful flavor, but not too loud. The room has view windows looking out on the city lights and its low ceiling twinkles with tiny bulbs resembling stars.

Is Sunday a good day to visit the Executive Suite? Certainly, if you're in the mood for liquid refreshment only. Today is the one day of the week when the kitchen is closed. But the Penthouse lounge, decorated in a smart blue motif, will be open from 3 p.m. on.

The Executive Suite is a popular luncheon spot because the food is so delicious and reasonably priced despite the elegance of the surroundings. Served from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. are such sandwiches as the Executive, juicy roast beef on grilled sourdough bread, and the V.I.P., thick tender baked ham. Both are $1.50 with fresh French fries, tomato and cheese.

Also served are eggs Benedict, $2.50; the Executive Burger, $1.25, and daily plate luncheon specials, $1.95. The service is by long-legged waitresses who are as lovely as fashion models. Their costumes include blue velvet hot pants, white boots and white blouses.

Ron, his manager, John Murrell, and their white-hatted, talented chefs offer dinners designed to appeal to young account executives and their dates as well as white-haired business tycoons and their wives. The entrees, $3.45 to $6.25, are prepared from the finest possible ingredients.

Included are a large chilled salad with croutons and choice of dressing; fresh baked potato, French fries or stuffed potato and hot sourdough bread. The tables in the downstairs dining room are topped with crisp linen cloths and the serviceware is solid and attractive. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A new hypothesis is offered to explain how an intrauterine device (IUD) prevents pregnancy.

Dr. G. Chaudhuri of the department of pharmacology of Charing Cross Hospital medical school, London, believes that an IUD causes the local release of a chemical known as a prostaglandin.

In offering the new explanation, Dr. Chaudhuri reviews three earlier hypotheses:

1. That in some unexplained manner, the IUD causes rapid transport of the ova (eggs) through the Fallopian tubes (oviducts) to prevent an encounter with sperm.

2. That inflammation of the endometrium (lining of the womb) prevents implantation of a fertilized ovum (egg).

3. That local release of a pharmacologically active substance prevents pregnancy.

Dr. Chaudhuri suggests that the prostaglandin hypothesis may bring together the earlier hypotheses.

The researcher notes that it already has been established that prostaglandin E2 and F2-alpha can induce labor or abortion.

Consequently, he says, slow continuous release of a prostaglandin into the inside of a womb containing an IUD could increase contractions of the Fallopian tubes (through which the ova travel). Such contractions would accelerate the passage of ova and prevent implantation.

The report is in Lancet, a British medical journal.

The increasing resistance of the micro-organism that causes gonorrhea is creating a crisis in gonorrhea treatment in Southeast Asia, at least one doctor contends.

Dr. R. R. Willcox, consultant venerologist at St. Mary's Hospital in London, England, says that high doses of procaine penicillin alone are proving to be inadequate therapy. Treatment failure rates are high.

Needed is more research in the development of concentrated injectable penicillins, new combination drug approaches and new antibiotics capable of single-injection cure.

The report is in Skin & Allergy News, a medical newspaper.

A drug called glaphenine appears to be more effective than codeine in alleviating pain after dental surgery.

Onset of its pain-killing property occurs in one hour, with a peak effect reached between two to four hours after taking.

Two doctors say they have laid to rest a claim that a certain surgical operation can benefit a person with severe asthma.

The operation, now in disrepute with most physicians, is known as glomectomy — the cutting out of one of the carotid bodies, a tiny piece of tissue in the neck.

Drs. William S. Curran and William G. B. Graham of the University of New Mexico school of medicine say a follow-up study of the largest patient series of its kind shows this:

No difference was found between the operated group and a group given a sham operation.

(In the sham operation, an incision was made but a carotid body was not removed. The patient was led to believe he had undergone the operation.)

Six years ago, a survey of thoracic surgeons showed that most had abandoned the procedure. In 1968 the American Thoracic Society reported that glomectomy had not proved to be an effective treatment for asthma.

Still, a number of doctors continue to perform the operation, convinced of its merits not only in asthma but also in bronchitis and the lung disease emphysema.

The New Mexico series, said to be the largest controlled study of its kind, involved 23 patients. Findings are reported in the American Review of Respiratory Disease.

A new disease, tanapox, caused by a virus has been responsible for two epidemics in Kenya, Africa.

Several hundred persons were affected. The epidemics occurred among the Wapakomo tribe along the Tana River (for which the disease is named).

Symptoms consist of a short feverish period with headache, prostration and a few pox-like lesions on the upper part of the body. A virus unrelated to the smallpox group has been implicated as the causative agent.

A similar if not identical pox virus has caused epidemics in monkey colonies in the United States.

The theory is that the disease spreads mainly among monkeys and may be transmitted to humans. Mosquitoes may also be involved in the transmission process.

The report is in the British Medical Journal. □

Q. What is President Nixon's reason for not announcing his troop withdrawal timetable from Vietnam? And does it make any sense?—Lisa Dean, Hartford, Conn.

A. President Nixon has said many times that if he were to "announce a date for ending our involvement," such announcement would allow the enemy "to marshal their attacks against our remaining forces at their most vulnerable time."

Several impartial observers believe President Nixon to be wrong in this judgment. For example, Claude Julien, writing in Le Monde of Paris, says of Mr. Nixon's contention:

"This argument does not really hold water. Neither Hanoi nor the PRG (Provisional Revolutionary Government) has any interest in launching attacks—and they have not launched any attacks—against forces which are already being withdrawn. An enemy offensive would justify calling a halt to withdrawals; Hanoi is perfectly aware of this and carefully avoids any gesture likely to compromise evacuation of American forces."

Other observers point out that Mr. Nixon has announced his withdrawal schedule except for the residual force of 50,000 U.S. troops which, they say, he plans to leave in South Vietnam indefinitely. By Election Day, 1972, Mr. Nixon will be able to announce that he has withdrawn more than 475,000 U.S. troops from Southeast Asia since he took office.

Q. What is Cloverlay?—Leo Tams, New Providence, N.J.

A. Cloverlay is a Philadelphia corporation which owns 30 percent of heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

Q. Which states in the Union have more U.S. Senators than Congressmen?—Alice Brinkley, Lawton, Okla.

A. Nevada, Alaska, Delaware, Vermont and Wyoming each have two U.S. Senators and one member of the House of Representatives.

Q. Is it true that all the major television networks in the United States have turned down an excellent TV series because of its title: David Obst—Proctologist?—Elmer Hirsch, Culver City, Calif.

A. Such a series has neither been submitted nor rejected.

MELVIN LAIRD AND WIFE

Q. Why is Melvin Laird quitting as Secretary of Defense?—May Clark, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich.

A. Laird did not want the job to begin with; he accepted it largely because Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson (D., Wash.) would not take it. Certainly it has not helped Laird's political position in his home state of Wisconsin. Thus, he plans to leave the Pentagon at the end of 1972. Being Secretary of Defense in this country is a thankless, controversial, almost hopeless job.

Q. Does anyone know what happened to the Spanish gold deposited in Russia during the Spanish civil war of the 1930's?—Thomas B. Knox, Ucaipa, Calif.

A. On Feb. 5, 1937, approximately 60 percent of Spain's gold reserves were deposited in Moscow by the Spanish Republican Government. A receipt was given to Juan Negrin, then Minister of Finance. The gold was used to pay for armament and supplies provided by the Soviet Union. By 1938 Spain's gold reserves in Moscow were down to $100,000. The Franco Government in Spain is satisfied today that Spanish gold was not stolen by foreign Communists but was spent by Spaniards for war materiel.

Q. I hear tell that Doris Day's son, Terry Melcher, is one of Hollywood's greatest lovers. First, he captivated Candy Bergen. Now, he's got Dean Martin's daughter, Claudia. What has this kid got on the ball? Helen Donnell, Santa Fe, N. Mex.

A. Terry Melcher, 29, son of Doris Day and her first husband, musician Al Jordan, has money, personality, show business background, and the position of executive producer on his mother's television program.

Claudia Martin, Dean's twice-divorced daughter, hopes to take Melcher for her third husband. Actress Candy Bergen once thought of marrying young Melcher, too. The Manson gang marked Terry Melcher for assassination, and it was only through luck that he escaped the horrible murder which befell actress Sharon Tate and six others.

Q. At one time Lyndon Johnson relied on George Reedy, his White House press secretary, more than on anyone in the U.S. Government for advice. How come then he did not invite Reedy to the opening of the L.B.J. Library in Austin?—Tex Methuen, Dallas, Tex.

A. Lyndon Johnson is an emotional man who frequently mistakes dissent for betrayal.

GEORGE REEDY AND PRESIDENT JOHNSON

Q. Who is responsible in the U.S. military hierarchy for declaring inhabited areas as free-fire zones in which anyone and everything can be destroyed?—David Beame, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. The practice was begun in World War II when air power was used to destroy entire communities and cities.

Q. I understand that Spiro Agnew does not want to run on the Republican ticket with Nixon in 1972, because if he becomes Vice President again his salary will be $62,500 a year; if he goes out on his own as a lecturer he will earn $500,000 a year. Is this right?—Ronald Larson, Towson, Md.

A. Agnew is one of the most shrewd and calculating men in American political life. (Read Agnew—The Unexamined Man by Robert Marsh, a member of Agnew's campaign and gubernatorial staffs from 1966 to 1968.) As such he realizes that financially he must strike while the iron is hot. Should Nixon drop Agnew from the 1972 ticket, Agnew will certainly earn more on the lecture circuit than he would have as Vice President.

BUSTING OUT ALL OVER—BRIGITTE BARDOT

Q. Is it true that every town hall in France will soon display a plaster bust of Brigitte Bardot?—Franz Brandt, Montreal, Quebec.

A. Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, a French publisher and legislator, has suggested that Miss Bardot's figure represents France's finest export, and that her bust should adorn every town hall. But to date, only half a dozen such busts have been purchased.

Q. I would like to know how a company like MGM can show a quarterly profit when it consistently releases flop pictures.—H. T. Allen, Phoenix, Ariz.

A. MGM continues to liquidate assets. It not only has sold off its British studio but some months ago sold all but two of its 14 movie theaters in Australia for $6,400,000 along with its film distribution company.

ROSENSTIEL

NICHOLS

Q. Who is Lewis Rosenstiel and what is his connection with the FBI?—Richard Carter, New York, N.Y.

A. Lewis S. Rosenstiel, founder and until 1968 chairman of the board of Schenley Industries, liquor distillers, is the founder of the J. Edgar Hoover Foundation, created to "perpetuate the ideals and purposes to which the Hon. J. Edgar Hoover has dedicated his life." The president of the foundation is Louis B. Nichols, formerly assistant director of the FBI who left the agency to go with Schenley at a salary of $100,000 per year. Mr. Rosenstiel has had a most interesting past some of which is now coming to light via a New York State crime investigation, headed by John H. Hughes, a Republican state senator from Syracuse.

Q. Why is Hugh Downs leaving the Today show?—Jennie Atherton, Tampa, Fla.

A. After meeting a 4 a.m. deadline for the last nine years, Downs is tired of the routine, wants to write, travel, lecture, teach in normal hours. He has plenty of money, can pretty much do what he chooses.

Q. Does Elvis Presley wear a gun? Isn't he the single largest gun-buyer in America?—T. P., Memphis, Tenn.

A. Presley collects guns but does not carry one. Frequently he will enter a gun store, buy $2000 worth of arms at a crack.

GUN COLLECTOR PRESLEY

Q. Who said, "The money that men make lives after them"?—Pieter Van Alsteen, Massena, N.Y.

A. Samuel Butler (1835-1902), British novelist and satirist.

Q. What will history have to say about Attorney General John Mitchell?—Mavis Caine, Tuscaloosa, Ala.

A. It is difficult at this point to predict. Most probably historians will record that it was he who recommended to the President for possible appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court, Judges Haynsworth and Carswell, both of whom the Senate refused to approve. More likely Mitchell will be remembered for the outspoken statements of his spirited second wife, Martha, who will go down in history as the most colorful woman of the present Nixon Administration.

MITCHELL AND MARTHA, A WOMAN TO REMEMBER

Q. How much of the motion picture, "Patton" does Gen. Omar Bradley own—10, 20 or 30 percent? —Darah Brandt, Portland, Ore.

A. Bradley gets 5 percent of the net profits not only for advising on the film but for allowing himself to be portrayed by actor Karl Malden.

What Westerns Have Done to John Wayne

by Lloyd Shearer

At 64, John Wayne has seven children, four by his first wife and three by his third. He also has 19 grandchildren. Periodically each of his children appears with him in a film. In "Big Jake" (above), his youngest son, John Ethan, 8, makes movie debut.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Once you've seen a screen star on television, acting in a weekly TV series, you know one thing—that particular film star is passé on the big screen.

Doris Day, Glenn Ford, Robert Young, Lucille Ball, Danny Thomas, Robert Wagner, Jackie Gleason, Henry Fonda, Jimmy Stewart, Tony Quinn—these and others whom you see, have seen, or soon will see on the video tube—have had it in feature motion picture films.

For the most part they are over the hill, too old to attract today's predominantly young movie audience. They are using TV for the fast buck and the slow residuals.

In all of screendom there remain only three superstars who can demand and obtain $1 million per motion picture plus a profit participation. They are Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, and John Wayne. And of these three, "Duke" Wayne is the most reliable and biggest money-maker of them all.

Last of the legendary film stars of the Bogart, Cooper, Flynn, Gable era, Wayne is the undisputed box-office champion of all time. For 19 of the last 20 years he has appeared in the box-office "top ten." His films have grossed close to $700 million, and he has probably earned (and lost) more money from the motion picture industry than any other modern star you can think of.

He is 64 and over a span of 42 years has acted in some 250 films, most of them cornballs but a few, like Stagecoach and Red River, classics.

Wayne survives and flourishes not because he is a particularly talented actor—"I don't act," he likes to say, "I react"—but because his milieu is the western, which critic Dwight MacDonald once described as "one of the most vapid and infantile art forms ever conceived by the brain of a Hollywood movie producer."

Good guys and bad guys

In westerns all problems are simplistically solved, traditionally by the face-down, the shoot-out, the right-to-the-jaw. There are good guys and bad guys. The good guys are rugged individualists and patriotic pioneers. The bad guys are Indians, cattle rustlers, or murderous outlaws. There are few subtleties in Wayne pictures. No one remains long in doubt as to the hero's identity.

However primary his films, no Wayne

continued

Wayne met and married his third and present wife, Pilar Palette, in 1953 when he was scouting for movie locations in Peru. She was a Peruvian airline hostess.

product of recent years has failed to turn a profit, even The Green Berets, which best reflects how Wayne feels about the U.S. involvement in Vietnam. "At some point we've got to stop communism; so we might as well stop it right now in Vietnam. . . The only trouble is that we're lacking in leadership. There's no leader to tell the people that we ought to be fighting an all-out war and fighting it to win."

Since the deaths of Adolphe Menjou, and Ward Bond, with whom Wayne in 1944 helped put together the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, Duke is possibly the most politically rightist and certainly the most dedicated anti-Communist of all Hollywood film stars.

A Birch Society short

He endorsed Barry Goldwater in 1964, was wanted by George Wallace as a running mate in 1968, has always regretted that Gen. MacArthur never ran for President, and not too long ago starred in No Substitute for Victory, a hawkish short distributed by the John Birch Society in which he explains how American soldiers in Vietnam are dying because of the no-win policy espoused by a bunch of pinkos in the U.S. Senate.

When Wayne first broke into films in 1929, having been a scholarship football player at the University of Southern California and a summertime prop boy on the old Fox lot at $35 a week, he was a political innocent.

Raoul Walsh, the grand old one-eyed director who gave Duke his first leading role in The Big Trail, along with Marguerite Churchill and Tyrone Power's father, remembers him as "a nice, tall, handsome, respectful kid who wanted to get ahead and did what he was told.

"Back then," Walsh recalls, "Duke never discussed politics. His name was Marion Morrison before I changed it, and it was Depression time. All he wanted to do was to earn a living. I pulled him out of the prop department and talked Sol Wurtzel into raising his salary to $75 a week. He was never the brainiest guy in the business, but he was a kid who kept his word, pretty goddam unusual for an actor, and he was grateful.

'Authentic folk hero'

"I mean he's always been grateful for having been born in a country where he could start in from scratch with nothing, no acting background, no dramatic skill, and work his way up into becoming a folk hero. That's what Duke's become, an authentic American folk hero. People know that he drinks, raps, shoots his mouth off from time to time. They know he's not an intellectual giant. And the dumb things that guy has done in the past. Like for years all of his money was put into the world's lousiest investments. I think after 25 years of working his butt off, Duke woke up one morning and found that financially he was nowhere but eardeep in Panamanian shrimp boats.

"Nowadays," Walsh surmises, "I guess he's in better shape, but he's never been one to wail or complain. I remember when he came down with cancer of the lung. He took it in stride and beat it.

"I wouldn't call him a profound or erudite man, although he goddam well knows the movie business inside out, but he's a friendly guy, a decent human being. And the most important thing of all is that he fills a need. People need a hero, someone they can identify with, someone they can look up to. Duke's the only western hero left in pictures, and in real life that's the image he projects, a two-fisted, straight-from-the-shoulder guy, friendly, warm underneath, strong, reliable, all that crap.

'Plays himself'

"In my opinion the roles he's played over the years have turned him into the kind of guy he is today. With minor variations he generally plays himself.

"Some folks may resent his being a war hawk or way over on the right, but goddam it, whoever heard of a cowboy radical?"

This reporter remembers discussing communism in Hollywood with Wayne several years ago on location in Texas.

"You been around this business a long time," he declared. "And you know goddam well that it was infiltrated in the 1930's and '40's by a bunch of Reds, especially writers and directors, some of the biggest names in town.

"What were they doing? Who were they representing? There they were earning a grand, two grand a week, and they were denouncing the capitalist system and free private enterprise, and everything the Soviet Union did was great. Hell, I'd go up to one of these guys and just ask outright, 'Are you a Commie?' and the sonofa . . . . . would lie in his teeth and say, 'Hell, no.'

"Next thing you know, some Congressional committee would investigate, and sure in hell, the guy would turn out to be a card-carrying Commie from way back. I didn't see a damn thing wrong in turning these Commies in. Because after all, what were they after? Simply, they wanted to use the motion picture industry to destroy the American system. And you know something? There's no better way of doing that than using the motion picture medium. It's been the best goddam propaganda medium I know.

"Another thing," he said between drinks, "I've never regarded being anti-Communist as a sin, not when the Commies want to knock you on your butt and destroy everything you've ever built and everything this country stands for. And by that I mean such simple basics as liberty, freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of religion, and all the rest of our rights."

Faith in the system

Wayne is not a particularly widely-read or educated man but neither is he the unreasonable bigot some of his detractors paint him. He concedes there are many inequities and ills in the American way of life but he feels strongly that the system carries built-in safeguards and enough means of correction and reform.

Politically and intellectually he is probably on a par with Spiro Agnew of whom he says, "Nobody likes Spiro Agnew but the people," which is pretty much how he feels about himself. A veteran Republican, he's helped raise money for Nixon, Goldwater, Ronald Reagan and George Murphy.

Wayne has been married three times, always to a Latin-American. Once when I asked him why he chose to marry

June, 1933, when John Wayne took Josephine Saenz as his first bride. They were divorced in 1945. Each of his three wives has been a Latin American.

Wayne with second bride. His 1946 marriage to the late Esperanza (Chata) Bauer was a childless and stormy one that was ended through divorce in 1953.

Wayne as he appeared in John Ford's memorable 1942 western, "Stagecoach."

1949: "Sands of Iwo Jima," one of his many service films in a career spanning 42 years and some 250 motion pictures. Wayne is top box-office draw.

In "True Grit," for which he finally won his first Academy Award in 1970.

senoritas, he replied, "You die your way and I'll die mine." His first wife was Josephine Saenz with whom he had four children: Michael, chief of Wayne's Batjac Production Company; Toni (Mrs. Don La Cava); Patrick, a talented young actor, and Melinda (Mrs. Gregory Munoz).

By his second wife, the late Chata Wayne, he had mostly trouble, and by his third, a former Peruvian airline hostess, Pilar Palette, he has three children, Aissa, 15; John Ethan, 8, who's appeared with his father in Big Jake and is also working with him in his latest film, The Cowboys, and Marisa Carmela, 5.

Yacht and 11-room house

A few years ago Duke sold his Hollywood home and moved to Newport Bay, Calif., where he divides his time between a $175,000 Bayside residence of 11 rooms and seven baths, and his yacht, The Wild Goose, a converted U.S. minesweeper refitted as a 136-foot yacht.

Easily accessible, frank to a fault, friendly as an old shoe to all comers, Wayne is nevertheless almost always conscious of his status as a superstar and tries to behave accordingly.

Several years ago when his second wife, Chata, sued him for divorce, I went to Wayne and suggested that since the only thing involved was money that he avoid the washing of dirty clothes in public and settle out of court.

He refused, and Chata, eaten by greed and vindictiveness, told stories, all untrue, that Duke was impotent and sterile, that he slapped her around on occasion, that he was impossible to live with.

When she started to narrate this fiction on the stand, I again went to Duke before the next day's court hearing and once more suggested that he settle the whole thing in the judge's chambers, explaining that Chata's lawyer, Jerry Rosenthal, was amenable to such a settlement.

Duke shook that magnificent weather-beaten face of his. "No," he said flatly. "I want the public to know the truth. Do you realize that all over the country this morning, people are getting up and they're asking themselves one question: 'Is Duke Wayne gonna take this crap from Chata lying down?'"

I agreed with Wayne that on that particular morning as on all others, people throughout the United States were awaking and arising. "But the question they're asking," I said, "has nothing to do with you. They're simply asking 'what time it is?'"

Duke scowled at me for a moment. "You sonofa . . . . . ." He smiled. Then he and the lawyers settled the mess out of court.

Bob Hope, Wayne, Gov. Ronald Reagan, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra during a fund-raising rally to reelect the California Governor. The cowboy star is a firm right-winger in politics who also backed Goldwater in 1964.

My Favorite Jokes

by Thelma Lee

EDITOR'S NOTE: Thelma Lee tells the audience her age is "somewhere between 30 and 60." When she sings "I'm Glad I'm Not Young Anymore," she confides, "If I took off everything that didn't belong to me, nothing would be standing on the stage . . . No, I'm not going to kid you. I've been married for 33 years and I have no intention of telling jokes about my husband—because he's not that funny." Yet she does go on to tell some of the funny aspects of their life together. "But I absolutely stopped telling mother-in-law jokes—as soon as I became one."

The attractive comedienne started her career as a dancer, then singer. She's done musical comedy and is constantly adding tales and humorous insights from her travails as housewife and mother to her comic repertoire. She entertains at hundreds of ladies luncheons a year and at resort hotels. She has guested on the Ed Sullivan, Johnny Carson, and Virginia Graham television shows, is currently appearing with the road company of Fiddler on the Roof in Shady Grove, Md.

Thelma Lee is the mother of a son, 29, and a daughter, 24. She and her husband, Zick Matt, a horse dealer and trainer, live in Port Chester, N. Y. Herewith some of her comments on family life:

It's not easy to be just a housewife. I want to tell you something. When my husband picked me up and carried me across the threshold it was not an act of love—he was taking me to work!

You think the government has space problems—we women have the space problems with the crummy freezers we're forced to use. You can't buy what you like to eat, you have to buy what fits. And I measure before I go shopping. I say, well, I have 2 inches here, 4 inches there. So I even found myself saying to the butcher: "I would like a chicken 2 by 4 by 7. And I would like you to take his left leg and wrap it around his neck, and if my calculations are right, I can take four meatballs and put them under his armpit into the freezer!"

There are some men who think we women run home from club meetings and put TV dinners on the table. First of all I happen to be a very good cook, and my food melts in my husband's mouth—while it's defrosting.

Teenagers do everything with a telephone except hang it up. My son was always on the phone talking to his girlfriend. So I got him his own phone. One day I came home and he's talking on my phone. I asked him: "What are you talking on my phone for?" He said: "I can't tie up my line."

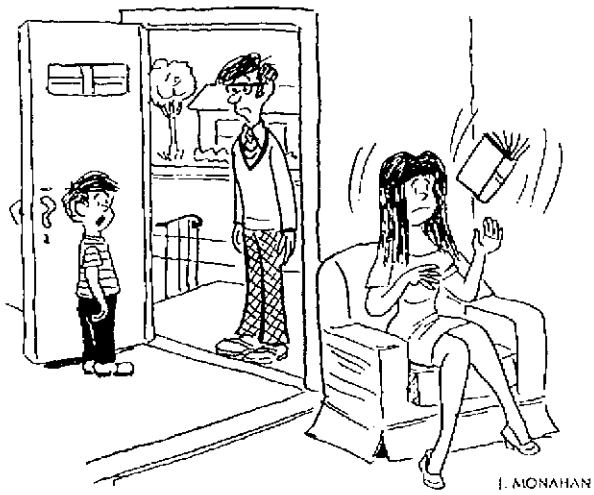

When he turned 17, we had to find my son a college, which was not easy. There were none that had courses in which he excelled—advanced eating, intermediate sleeping. You know how you send away money with each application? I'd shove in an extra ten. You never know who's on the other side opening envelopes—it works! He went away to a university in Africa. And he belongs to a marvelous fraternity, called the AA—Academics Anonymous. I'll tell you how it works. If he gets a desire to study, he calls up another dumb kid and they both stay on the phone till they lose the desire.

My son brought home his marks from college. I found out I have a clean, well adjusted, controlled, stupid kid. But I'm not worried. I had him psychologically tested and I found he's absolutely fit for retirement!

My son isn't that bad. How bad can a kid be that grows his own hats?

My daughter is 24 and I was always worried about what kind of boy she'd bring home. One day she came home with one and I knew this was going to be my future son-in-law—because as I helped him off with his coat, his mittens were pinned to the inside.

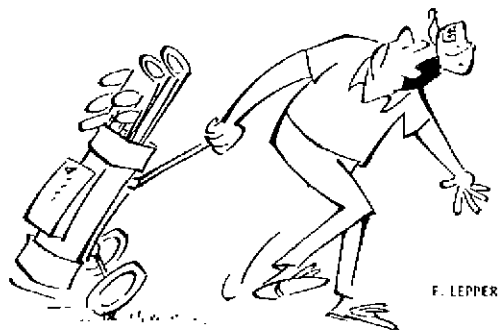

When we were planning my daughter's wedding somebody said: "You know when you send invitations you're not supposed to send respond cards"—so I put in pledge cards!

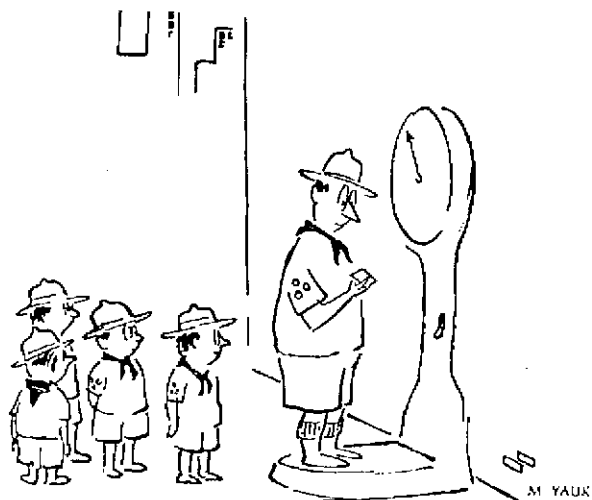

"Hey, sis, it's the one you said is better than nothin'."

It's to Laugh

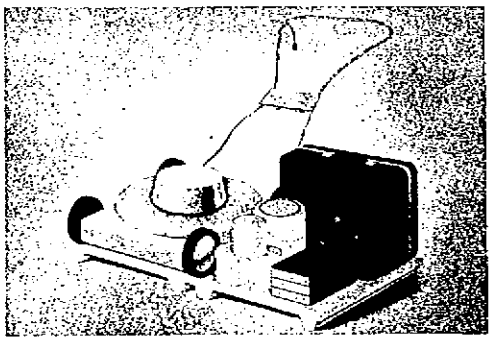

"Fore!"

"You are a born leader of men."

Begin with chilled cranberry juice cocktail garnished with mint sprigs. Serve brussels sprouts with the loaf and hot crescent rolls (the heat and serve kind). Add an attractive arrangement of raw vegetable relishes—radishes, scallions, fringed celery, carrot curls, ripe and green olives. End with strawberry sundaes, packaged cookies and iced or hot tea or coffee.

Air bag is designed to cushion impact, save lives. In this test, dummy passenger is shown a split second after crash. Some experts fear, however, that surprise shock and noise can be dangerous, making driver lose control.

Air Bags for Your Car: Lifesaver or Menace?

by E. D. Fales Jr.

Before you know it Detroit auto makers will be installing some remarkable—and in some cases startling—new lifesaving devices in your cars. The idea is to cushion the impact of a crash and let you and your family survive.

Several new devices called "passive restraints" are on the planning boards. Some are just better crash cushions, or nets, or "crash blankets."

One idea now being pushed by U.S. government experts, and fought in the courts by Ford, Chrysler and American Motors (General Motors is waiting for the government's response to a petition it filed in April), is the highly controversial "air bag." Some experts call it frightening, dangerous. An English crash analyst calls it "mad, fantastic." Henry Ford II has called it "baloney."

The air bag is a big empty balloon that's folded and hidden under your instrument panel, or under your steering wheel, or in the back seat. In the present state of the bag's development —when your car hits something (or something hits your car hard enough to send a shudder through it)- -this empty balloon inflates with a bang like a shotgun going off in your ears and suddenly the bag slams against your face and body—hard.

If everything works right—you're alive. Instead of being smashed against the front of your car (or going through your windshield) you land on a nice air mattress.

No certain answers

But what happens to the glasses you're wearing, or the baby your passenger is holding, or a child on a back seat? What happens to the cigarette or pipe you're smoking? Suppose the bag fails to fire, or goes off by accident?

Actually, no one knows for certain. For the surprising thing is that, although millions are being spent to put such bags in your new cars starting perhaps in 1973, the burgeoning young air-bag industry has found it difficult indeed to get people willing to test them.

And so most tests have been with dummies, a professional test driver or two, and a few intrepid young women who have tried the bag out at very slow speeds--10-12 mph—and were not too happy with their experience.

Meanwhile, test dummies have been blown out windows, doors have been bent, instrument panels smashed.

True, the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT), which has ordered "passive restraints" for your car, has not specifically said air bags. Nevertheless, air bags are what is meant and most of the engineers say that air bags are coming. The big question is: how soon?

The original U.S. order said 1972. But when Detroit protested that it could never get ready, the DOT "relented."

Its next order called for "passives" —which in effect meant air bags—in 1972. (Passives are any device which you don't have to fasten, but which automatically protects you in any crash against a hard barrier up to 30 mph.)

Detroit protested again and the way it now stands, passives would have to be in some new cars for front-seat occupants in 1973 and 1974, and all cars would have them for back-seat passengers as well by 1976.

What are the facts about air bags? The questions and answers that follow may help you to judge.

Not specific

Q. Has the government specifically ordered air bags into use?

A. No. It's ordered any "passive" system that will protect you in crashes between 15 and 30 mph. But air bags are the only system most experts are really talking about.

Q. But isn't 30 mph too slow to count?

A. Not at all. Few crashes happen any faster. (That's because you get your brakes on.)

Q. Why is the government fooling around with safety restraints at all?

A. Because Congress told the DOT to make cars safer, and officials honestly think passives will work better than seat belts (or the hated shoulder belts that drivers don't use).

Q. Will they work better?

A. There can be no clear answer because there are hundreds of kinds of collisions. In many head-on wrecks they could work fantastically well. Whether they'll work in side collisions, rear-enders, or rollovers depends on new designs engineers are trying to perfect.

Q. Does it protect my whole body?

A. One plan protects you from head to waist. Another protects only waist to feet—and this is important in a crash. With this type, your upper body would not be cushioned by an air bag but by the new "energy-absorbing" steering wheel—which is really very good.

Plus lap belts

Q. Do I wear my lap belt?

A. The whole idea was to get rid of belts. But lab tests show that without a belt, you could slide under. So now the government says: yes, your car must still have lap belts.

Q. What makes the bag puff up?

A. A little tank of compressed gas so powerful that some air-bag men call it a "bomb." When your car hits something it fires a small high-explosive charge. This knocks out a plug, lets the air rush out.

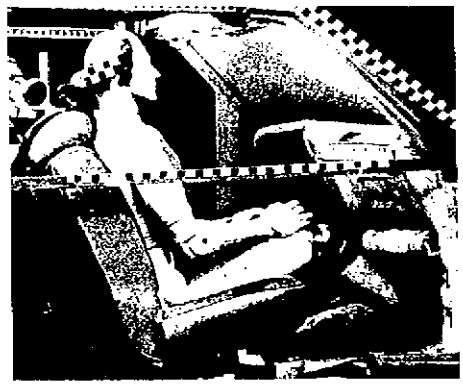

Q. What happens to me then?

A. When you're hurled forward, the bag bangs up to meet you.

Q. Is this really such a good idea?

A. In principle, it's superb.

We (New England Labs. of Norwalk, Conn.) have a special time release capsule which is an aid to appetite control. It's called B-Slim. Each B-Slim capsule contains 134mg. of a substance called sodiumcarboxymethylcellulose—to help make your stomach feel full. However, as we mentioned it does cause a slightly uncomfortable stuffy feeling in some people. (In spite of this, B-Slim is becoming one of our most popular products.) It may affect you this way or it may not. In either case, B-Slim can help control your appetite. Each capsule also contains Benzocaine to help dull your appetite.

And since people who are watching their weight don't always get all their vitamins, each capsule also contains 100% of the adult daily requirements of vitamins B_1, B_2, and C.

And now B-Slim has helped so many people that we confidently make this offer: if you'd like to try B-Slim, send us the coupon and three dollars. We'll send you 18 B-Slim caps. Take one a day. If at the end of 18 days, you haven't lost at least 10 pounds, let us know and we return your three dollars by return mail. No quibbling. No questions. B-Slim is distributed by us exclusively by mail. If it helps you (and chances are it will) we hope you will tell your friends. P.S. add 25¢ if you want your caps mailed first class.

This coupon is a mailing label: print and trim carefully. The sooner you mail it, the sooner you're on your way to losing weight.

Q. Will there be separate bags for my passengers?
A. The government requires two to start, one for the driver and one for two passengers beside him.
Q. How does the passenger bag work?
A. It's bigger, covers the body from head to knees.
Q. How about the back seat?
A. A still bigger bag (to come later) will shoot out of the front seat (or down from the ceiling), and protect three passengers.
Q. Suppose my baby is in a "safety seat" back there? What will happen?
A. Nobody knows.
Q. Have air bags been used in real accidents?
A. No, not as this report is written.
Q. Have they been tried by test drivers?
A. Maybe a few times.
Q. Have air bags been tested by ordinary drivers under ordinary conditions?
A. No.
Q. What happened when the test drivers' bags went off?
A. This reporter has seen one film of a "road test." The bag was deployed in a moving car. It fluffed up instantly in the driver's face, then he quickly brushed it aside—as one would brush at mosquitoes. It collapsed in a split-second and he went on driving. No problem. But (1) he was a test driver; (2) he knew it was going to happen; (3) it was a convertible car with the top down, and (4) his car was not whirling into a collision! The young women who tested them were caught by surprise and took their hands off the wheel.

Diverse factors

Q. But would the bag save my life—or my family's lives?
A. If your car hit just right it probably would. If your car got plowed into from side or rear (as many do) or slid against another car while whirling backward it would not. (This protection may come later.)
Q. Could the bag itself injure me?
A. It's possible.
Q. Will I have to pay more?
A. Detroit claims two bags could add $200 to your car's cost. Government men say $100.
Q. How many cars will get them in 1976?
A. Possibly 10 million.
Q. With all that production isn't there a chance I'd get a lemon?
A. Yes. In fact, in the first public demonstration the bag didn't work on the first try.
Q. Might an air bag go off by mistake?
A. Detroit says yes, several thousand times every year.
Q. Could something besides a collision set it off?
A. A boy with a bat might find a way to hit the bumper just right. Result: possibly $400 damage inside the car. To stop this, bags can be made so they won't "fire" under 15 mph. But this means you're without protection in slow collisions—which also kill.

The shoulder harness is a proven lifesaver, but most people are reluctant to wear them. Above is American Safety's lap and shoulder combination model.

Q. Suppose I buy a used car in 1977. Will its old air bags still work?

A. No one knows.

Q. Suppose our car bumps a car ahead and the bags go off. Will I lose control?

A. You might.

Q. Well, suppose our car then bounces on and hits another car, or a truck, or a utility pole? Will the bags work again?

A. No. You've lost all protection from the bag. It won't refire.

Q. What are Detroit and government officials doing about these problems?

A. Running extensive laboratory tests. Detroit doubts it but the government thinks the bugs can be ironed out before 1973 (and the noise reduced). They plan to put air bags in 12,500 government cars next year, and this should start producing some real-life-accident facts within hours.

Q. Shouldn't car installations for the public be held off until there are lots of such real-life tests?

A. Some experts say so. But others say: in spite of the dangers, what about the lives that could be saved by going ahead now?

Q. Would air bags create a hazard in junked cars?

A. Millions of "heaps" might still contain those gas tanks. "And there's no doubt: they're real bombs," one expert says.

Q. Well, aren't there any other good "passive" ideas?

A. Others—not known to be as good—include: (1) a nylon blanket that springs up in front of you, and (2) a seat that folds plastic arms around you (as a mother enfolds a child in danger).

Q. Aren't there better alternatives to the whole air bag idea?

A. Yes. One is an "ignition interlock" that won't let your car start until the belts are fastened.

Another is a "safety car" that cuddles you like an egg in an egg crate.

But this will surprise you: the best safety device yet invented may prove to be that simple shoulder harness—the gadget that almost nobody uses.

Astonished experts now say its value to you and your family may be almost beyond belief. In case after case, they see people crawling out alive from wrecks that even a year ago would have killed everybody.

That's because they wore shoulder belts!

So here, unknown to drivers, may be the real "miracle lifesaver" we've all been waiting for.

Here's an ingenious new safety device—an ignition interlock. The motorist simply can't start his engine unless the car's safety belts are fastened.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

NIXON AND KISSINGER

CREDIT NIXON One of the major achievements of President Nixon's Administration is the thaw in the U.S.-Red China relationship. Personal credit must go to Richard Nixon for this development.

On Feb. 1, 1969, less than two weeks in office, Nixon called in his Metternich, Henry Kissinger, ordered him to explore all ways of opening the Chinese door. He then set about easing trade and travel requirements to Red China, tactfully signaling Mao Tse-tung that China would be welcome into the family of nations.

Despite objections by Vice President Agnew who may well be dropped from the 1972 Republican ticket in favor of John Connally (Nixon would very much like to carry Texas in the next election, a feat he's been deprived of in two previous campaigns), the President is determined to meet Mao halfway, stroke by stroke in the new expanding game of Ping-Pong diplomacy.

Meanwhile, in the Chinese Communist department stores of Hong Kong, there's been a run on table-tennis paddles, the price rising from $1 to $1.50 each, and in U.S. industrial circles a growing interest in the possibility of doing business with Red China.

For example, the textile industry, which has not been allowed to import any Chinese camel hair or cashmere into this country since 1950, is wondering now whether a ban on such products will be lifted. American importers of these fibers hope the ban will come down in time for the Christmas trade.

COMMENTARY Is the United States becoming a "dossier society" in which a person's political affiliations, traffic tickets, sex life, credit rating, misdeeds and quarrels with his wife are recorded in some gigantic data bank?

What right, for example, does the U.S. Army have to spy on civilians and politicians who are against the war in Vietnam, the massacre at My Lai, cost overruns on the C-5A, the corruption, drug addiction, and incompetency in the U.S. Army?

How many secret intelligence files on civilians are maintained in the Army's computerized data bank at Ft. Holabird, Md.? Is there one on George Wallace, Adlai Stevenson III, Ralph Abernathy, Billy Hargis, H.L. Hunt, and James Reston?

More important, who in the first place authorized the Army to spy on civilians? Was it that great leader of impeccable morality, Lyndon Johnson? Was it his fiery liberal Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who, incidentally, moved on his own to try Dr. Benjamin Spock? Was it Nicholas Katzenbach?

Is the average American citizen entitled to know when, why, and if he is being placed under surveillance by an agency of his government?

As The Wall Street Journal, not a particularly radical publication, recently editorialized: "Why does Attorney General Mitchell continue to insist that he has the right to eavesdrop on U.S. citizens in national security cases without the court approval normally required in other eavesdropping situations?"

And while everyone concedes that Richard Helms, head of the CIA, is an honorable tennis player who never cheats on the close calls, why should one be satisfied to "take it on faith," as he suggested in a recent speech, that he and his agents are fundamentally decent men sincerely dedicated to their country?

Does the CIA never goof? Does the FBI never err? Was John Mitchell smeared with the chrism of infallibility as an infant?

In a free society those who exercise power must be held accountable by those on whom they exercise it, or the society will not long remain free.

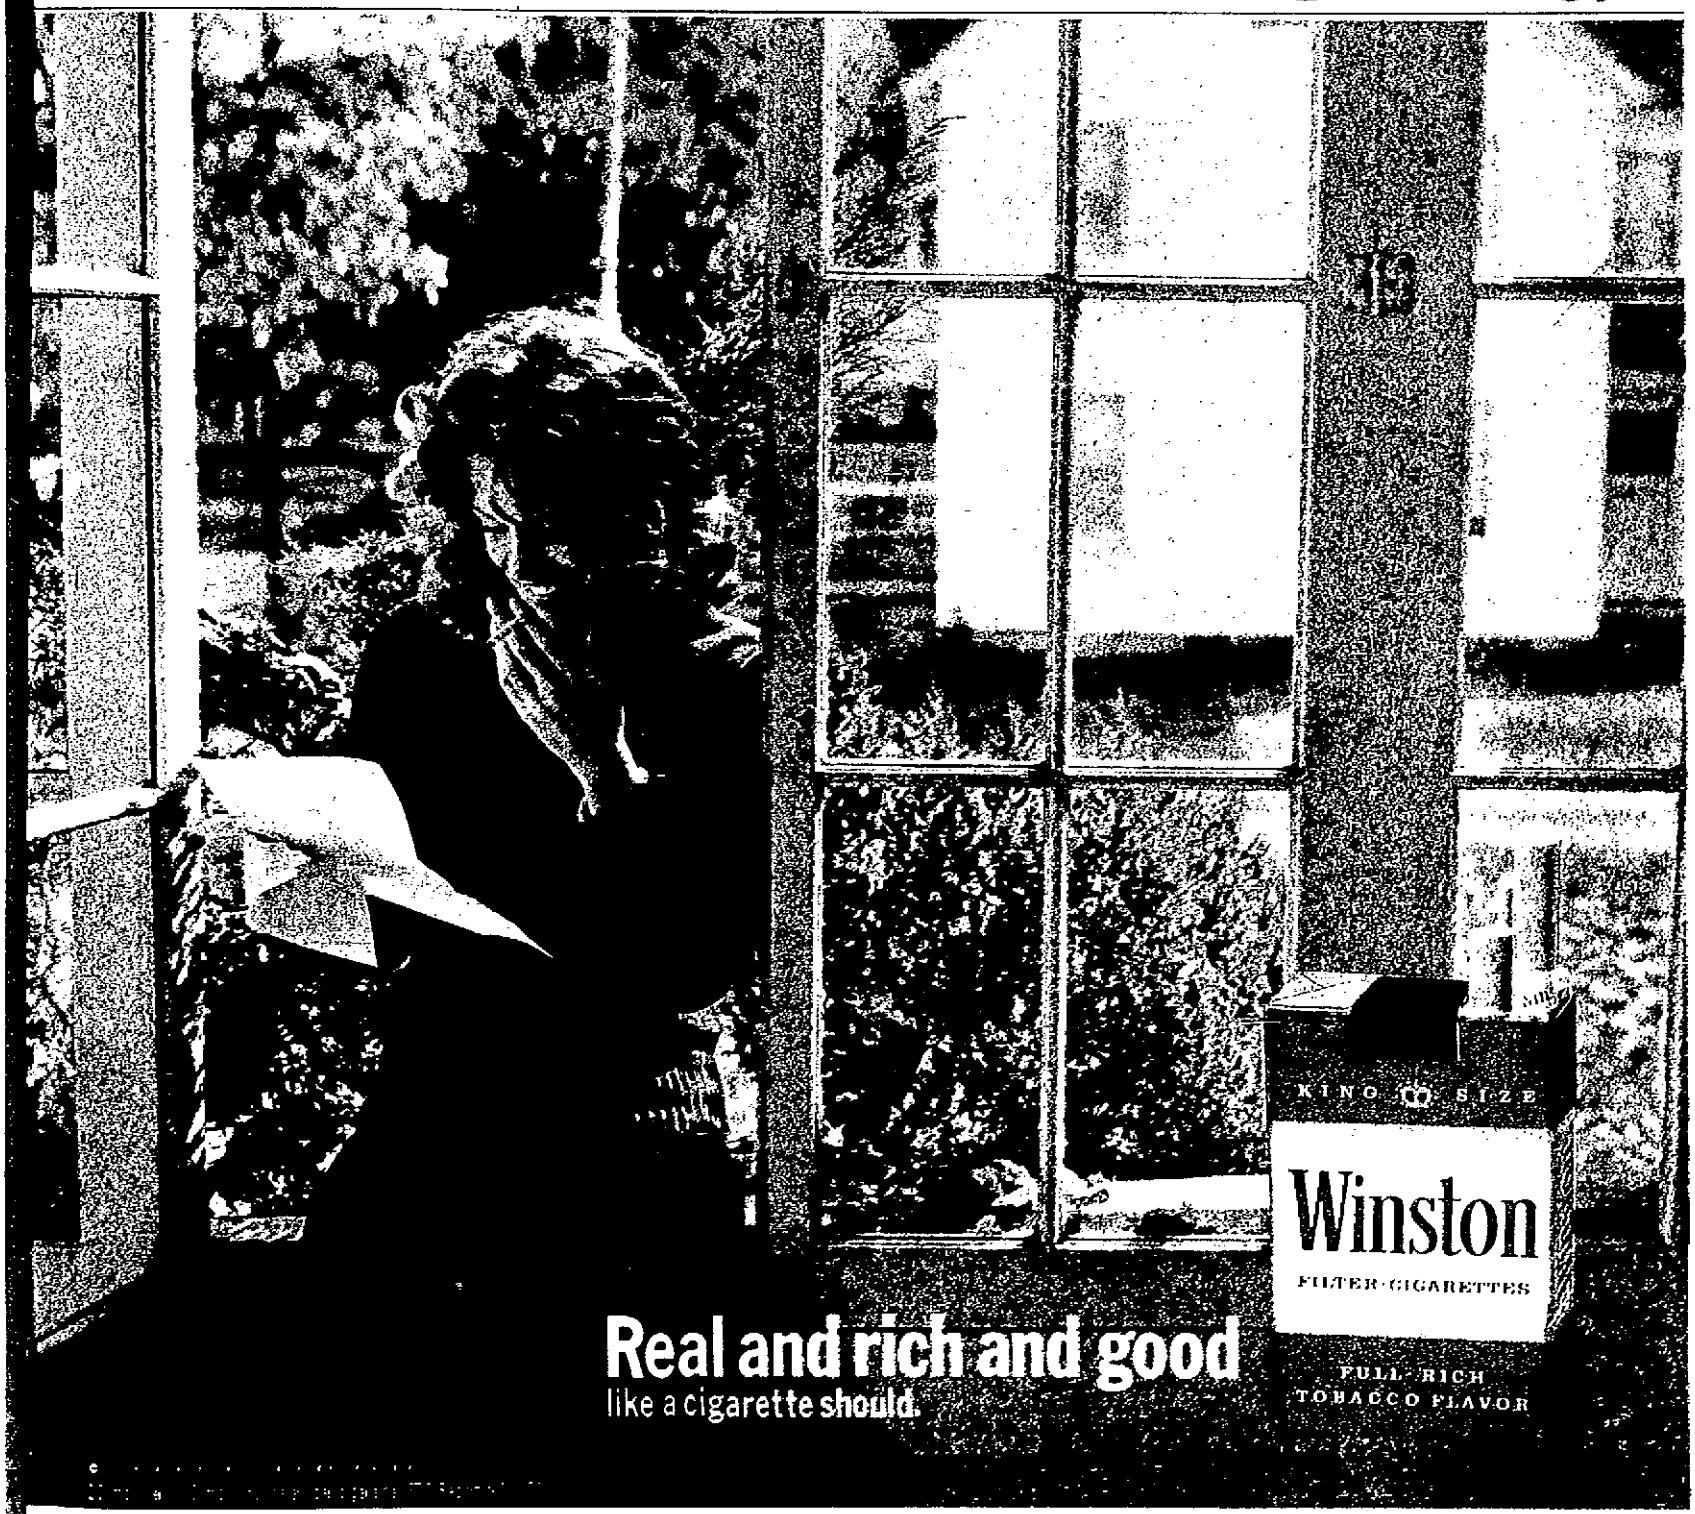

TRAINING TROOPS As the U.S. withdraws most of its troops from South Vietnam, so, too, do the other four nations which have provided combat forces in Vietnam: Australia, New Zealand, South Korea, and Thailand.

Australia and New Zealand have already replaced part of their combat forces with military training units, and South Korea and Thailand will follow suit providing we foot the bill.

WINSTON'S DOWN HOME TASTE!

TOUGH TO EDIT Several weeks ago Jack Anderson devoted his Washington Merry-Go-Round column to the extracurricular life of Al Capp, 62, the cartoonist-lecturer.

Anderson's syndicate distributed the column to the 650 newspapers which carry it daily.

Many of these newspapers refused to publish the column because it cited Capp's alleged behavior with a variety of college coeds.

The story was researched in depth by Britt Hume, a brilliant young investigative reporter on Anderson's staff who obtained affidavits from two of the coeds involved.

In New York, San Francisco, Miami, Madison, Raleigh, Tuscaloosa, and many other cities, newspaper editors ran the column because they believed Capp was a public figure in the news, a lecturer on morality, a cartoonist of prominence, and that other newspapers would carry it.

Other editors declined on the grounds that the details were objectionable for a family audience, that no formal charges had been launched against Capp, that he had not been arrested on a criminal complaint, and that he denied the exposé in Anderson's column.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., however, The Times ran it on page 2B one day later, with an explanation by Del Marth, the newspaper's ombudsman.

Marth explained to readers that The Times had delayed printing the column on its release date because the charges against Capp were three years old and none of the coeds in the cases had pressed charges against Capp in court.

Marth asked readers to fill out an accompanying coupon and to vote on how they felt about The Times running the column. After ten days the vote was 598 in favor of printing the column, 349 against.

"Those in favor of publishing," explains Marth, "wrote letters saying the reading public is entitled to the truth. 'We're not children. Let us decide what to read and not to read. Your responsibility is to publish, not censor.

"Those who were against publishing the column," Marth continues, "said, 'We count on the newspaper showing some responsibility. We expect you to filter out a great deal of the trash and filth.'"

Many of the leading newspapers which declined to print the Anderson column on Capp have a standing rule which prohibits disclosure of an individual's sex life unless it becomes a matter of news via an arrest or a complaint.

In the case of Al Capp, a complaint was filed against him on May 7th, approximately two weeks after the Anderson column was released. A 20-year-old coed at Eau Claire State University in Wisconsin charged Alfred Kaplin (Capp's real name), 61, of Cambridge, Mass., who draws the "Li'l Abner" comic strip, with a variety of sexual offenses. Through his attorney Capp denied them all, claimed he was being victimized by the "revolutionary left who would try to stop me by any means from speaking out on campuses."

Once County Judge Thomas H. Barland issued a warrant charging Capp with a morals offense, however, that development constituted "news," and the papers which refused to carry the Anderson column on Capp, carried the wire service reports on him.

If no warrant had been sworn out for Capp's arrest, do you think the newspapers involved should or should not have carried Jack Anderson's column?

BING CROSBY

GARY CROSBY

BING CROSBY'S SON AND NAMESAKE WITH MOTHER (L) AND DINAH SHORE

IN FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS Harry Lillis Crosby, better known as "Bing," age 67, has fathered seven children, four by his first wife, Dixie Lee Crosby, and three by his second, Kathy Crosby.

His oldest son, Gary Evan, seen frequently on television and in films as a character actor, will be 38 on June 27th.

Bing's namesake, Harry Lillis Crosby, age 12, not only sings but strums a guitar, recently appeared with Dinah Shore on her TV program, Dinah's Place, along with his mom, Kathy.

People took me for forty, before I lost 68 pounds.

By Yvonne Kitchel—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Here I am in the kitchen, after another party where the food brought me closer to 202 pounds.

This was taken on a fun trip to New York City. It was great, being only 134 pounds —slim enough to wear a fashionable pantsuit.

FUNNY how you go for years seeing your face in a mirror and shutting your eyes to the rest of you. But the day you walk along a street and someone takes you for your mother's sister instead of her daughter, you suddenly realize being fat has made you "forty" long before your time. It was then I knew I'd better come down off my 202 pound peak, if I wanted to lose those ten unwanted years.

I'm sure people who never have a weight problem must wonder how others of us can let ourselves get so out of shape. Well, in my case, I can only blame my appetite and happy, contented life. You see, I've been married ten years, have three beautiful children, a husband whom I adore and all the reasons in the world to enjoy frequent get togethers with my parents and in-laws. And in Friendswood, Texas, that means a big feed. How we women cook! Particularly around the holidays. Of course, I used to sample everything, not thinking then what I was doing to my figure. But I know now. Because all a woman has to do is gain about ten pounds a year for ten years and she can nearly double her size.

From time to time I'd try to reduce, of course. But my doctor refused to give me diet pills because of my high blood pressure. He'd just keep saying: "You've got to lose. Because once you get past 30, it gets harder and harder."

So, I'd try again, but there'd always be another party. Then somebody would say: "You have such a pretty face, Yvonne," and I'd smile and take a second helping. Strangely enough, the heavier I got, the more that compliment hurt. Because in my heart I knew they were really thinking: "But why don't you reduce!"

Finally, the day came when I outweighed my six-foot husband. I'll tell you, I felt a desperation I'd never known before. Particularly when I thought I'd have to spend the rest of my life shopping for clothes in Houston's fat-lady's store.

Really, if it hadn't been for my neighbor, I wonder what I'd have done. She suggested Ayds* (they'd worked for her), so I bought a box at the drugstore. The vanilla caramel kind. It was just before Thanksgiving, too. But I knew if I didn't get control of my appetite then, I never would. For holidays were always my downfall.

Well, I got through Thanksgiving with the help of Ayds and enough willpower to resist all the goading from others to eat and be happy. And by Christmas, I had the best present of all. I'd lost 15 pounds.

What exactly had I done? I'd taken Ayds as the directions say. One or two before meals with a hot drink really helped curb my appetite. I also took Ayds between meals — around four o'clock in the afternoon, when I'd get that empty feeling — or in the evening watching television. They have only about 26 calories apiece, and with four flavors to choose from, I was much better off eating a couple of Ayds than munching on salty crackers or potato chips all night.

Actually, reducing on the Ayds Plan helped me change my whole way of cooking. Instead of frying shrimp and chicken in deep fat, I began to broil my meats and eat lots of vegetables. I even had light desserts. And the scales began to show encouraging results. My doctor was just delighted and, of course, so was I.

Right now, I'm down 68 pounds, thanks to the Ayds Plan. And I'm determined to stick to it and go even lower. Because I never again want to look ten to fifteen years older than my husband. Which so many fat women do.

Oh yes. I must tell you of one other really exciting thing that has happened to me since reducing with the help of Ayds. I have a new career. I've got my realtor's license and have no inhibitions about facing the public. Why, now that I look 32 again, I feel like I could sell the whole world.

Living With Arthritis

There are almost 100 varieties of arthritis, ranging from a mild nuisance to the cruel, crippling, disabling affliction of acute rheumatoid arthritis. And, though we can put men on the moon we haven't yet developed a cure for arthritis. Because of this, many victims are desperate, eager to grab at any hope for relief. This makes for lush pickings by quack doctors and the peddlers of more than 1200 arthritis "remedies," most of which are useless.

Now, Dr. A. B. Corrigan, a distinguished Australian physician, president of the Australian Sports Medical Federation, has written a definitive book—Living With Arthritis. In direct manner, Dr. Corrigan tells the arthritis story as it is, stripped of ambitious claims and long-standing fallacy. Because we regard the book as of great value to many victims and their families, PARADE is offering it to readers for only $1 a copy.

Case history

Dr. Corrigan makes his points partly through relating the case of Janet Morris, a 32-year-old mother, who begins to find housework difficult because of pains in her joints. Her doctor puts it on the line in a talk to her husband: "Your wife has rheumatoid arthritis. We cannot promise an absolute cure but in most cases we can control the disease. A lot depends on your wife's determination to improve and her intelligent participation in a campaign we must work out together."

Janet did cooperate with her physician, and an encouraging part of Dr. Corrigan's narrative is how he set her on the road to living with the disease. The book tells which medications are useful, which are risky, which are actually dangerous. It outlines proper examination and the importance of exercise. It answers many questions. Should an arthritis patient drink? Should he reduce his weight? Is the disease hereditary? It also lists the many self-help devices that can be used by an arthritis victim, such as bath seat, long-handled sponge and pencil holder that fits over the hand.

Cause unknown

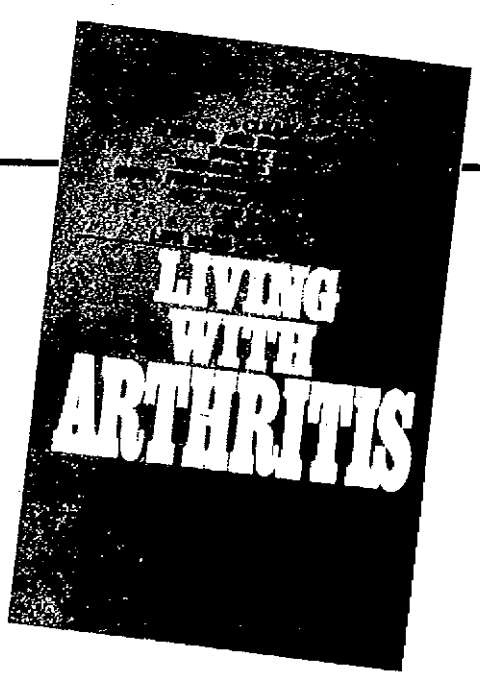

Says Dr. Corrigan: "Ninety-five percent of medical knowledge about rheumatoid arthritis has been acquired since World War II, but a lot remains to be learned. The cause of the disease is still not known. Nor is it possible to predict its course in any one victim.

"A hopeful note—most people who originally think they've been struck by rheumatoid arthritis are suffering from something else for which there is a cure. Even for those who do have the disease the outlook is generally not too bad. Statistics show that, with treatment, 70 percent of patients improve, and that only 30 percent continue to have major problems. Between 12 and 15 percent become totally incapacitated."

Arthritis is one of the most democratic diseases, common to Eskimos and tropic dwellers. It can strike anywhere. Buy Living With Arthritis today and find out all about it for only $1.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Campus Spies

How do you know that the bearded long-hair sitting next to you in class isn't really an undercover agent for the FBI, the local police department, or Army intelligence?

The cute little coed in your botany class who attends all the radical meetings, and campus demonstrations—could she possibly be a paid informer?

The answer is you can't be sure, because today, an alarming number of spies have infiltrated the nation's collegiate and high school campuses.

Take Thomas Tongyai, better known as "Tommy the Traveler," most notorious of the pseudo-student undercover agents.

SDS 'ORGANIZER'

A year or so ago Tommy appeared at Hobart College in Geneva, N.Y., a self-proclaimed organizer for the SDS (Students for a Democratic Society).

At Hobart, Tommy's behavior indicated that he was a wild-eyed student revolutionary. He threatened one student's life, assaulted a student dean, succeeded in converting two freshmen to his philosophy of violence, teaching them how to use an M-1 rifle and how to construct firebombs.

In May, 1970, when the ROTC building on campus was firebombed, Tommy's two protégés were arrested. Tommy, however, maintained his cover until he personally led a marijuana bust on campus, apparently under pressure from his employer, the sheriff of Ontario County, to "produce some results."

A grand jury appointed by Governor Rockefeller reprimanded the sheriff—for employing an "inexperienced" agent– but Tommy, who refused to reveal his true identity or his employer over the years of underground work, got off on $25 bail on a complaint of harassment.

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE?

Two questions arise: (1) Who were the real campus conspirators? (2) Would Hobart's ROTC building have been firebombed had Tommy not instigated it?

The distinction between undercover agent and agent provocateur is even less clear in the case of the Seattle 7 on trial for conspiracy. Horace L. Parker, an FBI informer posing as an anti-war businessman, began to infiltrate the Weathermen and other radical student groups in July, 1969. Under oath, Parker admitted that he provided the Weathermen with drugs, incendiary chemicals, dynamite, guns, and a sticker proclaiming "Serve the People, Stop the Pig"—all at FBI expense. When asked if he had ever encouraged anyone to violate the law, Parker replied in the affirmative.

You can't tell the spies from the students: "Tommy the Traveler," above, acted like a wild revolutionary on campus to do a job as undercover agent.

Another disturbing example of FBI campus infiltration is the case of Boyd Frederick Douglas, a federal prison inmate at Lewisburg, Pa., who received special permission to attend classes at nearby Bucknell University.

Douglas, 30, a three-time loser, was quite a man-about-campus at Bucknell. He obtained an apartment near the university which he shared with a draft-card burner. He was active in the peace movement, dated the coeds, went to drinking and pot parties.

The FBI, however, had bigger fish in mind for Douglas than student radicals. One of the convict-student's fellow inmates at Lewisburg was Father Philip Berrigan, the rebel priest serving time for destruction of draft records. The government has now charged Berrigan with conspiracy to kidnap Henry Kissinger and destroy public utilities in Washington, D.C. The government's principal informant in the alleged conspiracy is Boyd Frederick Douglas.

WIDESPREAD NETWORK

In addition to outside infiltrators, federal, state and local agencies employ bona fide members of the campus community as informants. The FBI documents stolen recently from the agency's Media, Pa., office, reveal a widespread campus network of FBI informants, including the secretary of the registrar at Swarthmore College, the assistant chief of Rutgers' campus patrol, a brother at Villanova Monastery, the dean of student affairs at Lincoln University, the secretary to the director of studies at Quaker Upland Institute.

Some of these people undoubtedly gave information to the FBI motivated by patriotism, some for motives of personal revenge, and others for pay. The FBI has authority to recruit informers as young as 18, and to pay them either a fixed stipend or piecemeal according to the value of the information they divulge.

Take the case of 23-year-old Robert A. Harris, formerly a student at the University of Illinois who moonlighted as an FBI informant. Harris came to the attention of the FBI when he reported a campus neo-Nazi leader to the local police. For 11 months he reported to the FBI on campus radicals, for which he received $75 in expenses. Only when he was asked to provide information about the sexual habits of SDS members did he break with the investigative agency.

ACTION AT SWARTHMORE

In response to the publication of the FBI's Media papers, Swarthmore College President Dr. Robert D. Cross announced that any member of the faculty, staff or student body revealing confidential information to any outside agency would face immediate dismissal.

CONTINUED

Susan Stern and Joseph Kelly, accused in Seattle 7 conspiracy case—FBI informer infiltrated student groups and Weathermen.

Angela Davis, held as accessory in the courtroom slayings in which a judge and three blacks died, was fingered by a student working for the FBI while she was an assistant professor at UCLA.

Priests Daniel (l) and Philip Berrigan were jailed for destroying draft records. Father Philip is now accused in plot to kidnap Kissinger—priest's fellow inmate was an informer who had special permission to attend Bucknell U.

But many other colleges and universities have knowingly permitted outside agents to enroll or otherwise condoned their presence on campus.

After the week-long occupation of campus buildings at Columbia University three years ago, SDS leader Mark Rudd was arrested by a New York City undercover policeman who had infiltrated the radical movement and joined the occupation. University officials made the embarrassed disclosure that the policeman had been allowed to enroll as a student under short notice.

Some universities permit undercover agents on campus as a means of combating drug use. Recently, at the University of New Mexico, students discovered that two city narcotics agents were living in a men's dormitory with university permission.

At UCLA a few years ago, unknown to the university authorities, student William DiValle was an undercover agent for the FBI. It was he who became a member of the Communist Party and informed the FBI that Angela Davis was a fellow party member who should be watched.

Dr. Robert Cross, head of Swarthmore, has acted to curb undercover agents.

HAVENS NO LONGER

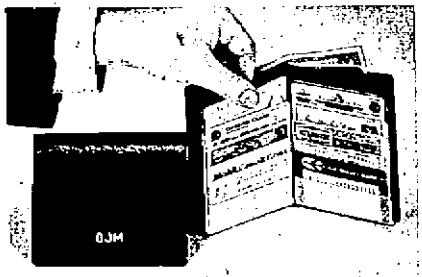

Regretfully, what it all adds up to is that American college and universities, once peaceful havens for students and scholars, have now become hotbeds of radicalism, revolution, drug addiction and their concomitant, spying.

At Yale recently, the work of one particularly effective spy was revealed in this mournful student quote: "He tripped with us, went to rallies with us, turned on with us. He dressed in purple and yellow and wore hip glasses . . . He was accepted and trusted . . . and in the end . . . busted our friends."

Who or what is responsible? And what if anything can be done? Will the college scene in the U.S. ever revert to its peaceful past?

The war in Vietnam and the Johnson Administration's lack of responsiveness to students who opposed the war are popularly thought to be the sparks which ignited campus radicalism. Ill-equipped to control the radicals who bombed and burned colleges, school authorities had no alternative but to enlist or to acquiesce in the security measures provided by other arms of the government.

It may well be that undercover agents, whether attached to the "Red Squad" or the "Narc Squad," will become an integral part of the campus, indistinguishable from the general student population, and here to stay.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

NOT A MURMUR! WARNED THE OLD PHONY THAT ANY EXCITEMENT MIGHT BE TOO MUCH FOR HIS BUDDY. THEY SEEM TO BE BEHAVING, MADAM.

THE OLD MONK DEMANDS TO SEE FOR HIMSELF THAT THE LIBERATOR IS STILL ALIVE!

WHAT I HEARD WAS NOT A VOICE. A DIFFERENT SOUND...

HRRMMPH! WELL, HE'S BEEN WITH MY PATIENT LONG ENOUGH, ANYWAY.

OKAY, BUSTER, SATISFIED? NOW WHY DON'T YOU JUST POP OUTSIDE AND TELL THAT BLASTED MOB THEIR LIVING SAINT IS DOING JUST FINE?...

NOW WHERE THE DEVIL DID HE GO?

DUDGEON! THE WINDOW! IT'S OPEN. THAT'S THE SOUND I HEARD!

NO – NO!

THAT DEVIL!

DUDGEON! WHAT IS IT?

YOUR LIBERATOR'S DEAD AS A MACKEREL! HIS OLD PAL SMOTHERED HIM WITH A PILLOW!

EYIEEEE! I SHOULD HAVE REALIZED... OF COURSE! THE MONK BELIEVED THAT IT WAS NOT PROPER FOR THE LIFE-SPAN ALLOTTED THE LIBERATOR BY FATE TO BE CHANGED. HE INSURED IT WOULD NOT BE!

MADAM, THIS IS NO TIME FOR A LECTURE ON ORIENTAL PHILOSOPHY! DO YOU REALIZE...?

THAT THE MONK ESCAPED BY WAY OF THE WINDOW TO SPREAD THE WORD? I DO!

THE GUARDS, SERVANTS, MY MINISTERS, ALL GONE! SUCH NEWS TRAVELS FAST. WE ARE THE ONLY LIVING THINGS IN THIS HOUSE...

YIEEEEEE!

LEE, WHERE THE DEVIL HAVE YOU BEEN?

USING HIS WITS BETTER THAN WE HAVE, I TRUST...

PRIME MINISTER PUTTALEM FILLS TERRY IN ON THE DETAILS OF THE LIBERATOR'S MURDER...

LISTEN TO THE MOB. THEY KNOW. THEY WILL COME AT ANY TIME.

I FIGURED WE COULDN'T GAMBLE ON THE OLD MAN MAKING IT, MA'M, SO I SET UP SORT OF AN ESCAPE ROUTE.

THEN, AS THE SOUND OF SPLINTERING WINDOWS AND DOORS SIGNALS THE MOB'S INVASION...

Little Orphan Annie

"IF WE HAD NO DEFECT OURSELVES, WE SHOULD NOT TAKE SO MUCH PLEASURE IN NOTING THOSE OF OTHERS"
– LA ROCHEFOUCALD

SAHIB WARBUCKS, IS STILL RESTLESS! HIS HEAD IS WARM!

YES, PUNJAB... HE IS IN THE GRIP OF SOME MYSTERIOUS FEVER THE LIKES OF WHICH I HAVE NEVER WITNESSED BEFORE!

DISGUISED AS A BOY, ANNIE HAS MANAGED TO EVADE THE MALIGNANT DR. NO-NO AND HIS HENCHMEN....

MY HUNCH IS DR. NO-NO MADE "DADDY" SICK SO'S HE COULD TEND T' HIM... AN' MAKE HIM EVEN SICKER... AN'...

...IT'S TAMARA THAT ASKED HIM T' COME! SO IF DR. NO-NO'S A NO-GOODNIK, SO'S TAMARA!! AN' ALL THAT MALARKY 'BOUT BEIN' A "DEFECTOR" WAS FOR "DADDY'S" BENEFIT...

NOW THAT YA THINK 'BOUT IT, IT WAS KINDA QUEER THAT TAMARA COULD CLIMB INTA A LOCKED CAR TRUNK!! I THINK THE ASP SUSPECTED THAT, TOO! THE WAY HE WAS LOOKIN' AT THE CAR AFTER WE CAME HOME FROM THE BALLET!

WELL, WE KNOW THAT NOW... BUT THE BIG QUESTION IS... HOW'RE WE GONNA GET THE WORD T' "DADDY"?

THE BRAT HAS OBVIOUSLY TRICKED US! YOU THREE ARE TO SCOUR EVERY INCH OF THIS AREA AND IF YOU SHOULD FIND HER...

STRANGLE HER!!?

SILENCE HER FOREVER??

NO!! AND DON'T GUESS!! YOU HAVEN'T BEEN CLEARED FOR IT!! IF YOU FIND HER... DON'T HARM HER... DON'T TALK TO HER... DON'T EVEN TOUCH HER....

FOLLOW HER AND MAKE SURE THAT SHE DOES NOT RETURN HERE OR COMMUNICATE IN ANY WAY WITH WARBUCKS!! SHE SUSPECTS OUR TRUE MISSION AND IS THEREFORE DANGEROUS TO OUR PLANS!

BUT WHY PROTECT HER, DR. NO-NO?

SHE IS OUR ACE IN THE HOLE, AS THE AMERICANS SAY... SHOULD OUR PRESENT PLAN FALTER, WE CAN USE HER TO BLACKMAIL HER CAPITALIST PARENT!!

THAT LOOKS LIKE A SHACK OUT THERE IN THE FIELD, SANDY! IF NOBODY'S HOME, MAYBE WE COULD KINDA SPEND THE REST O' THE NIGHT THERE...

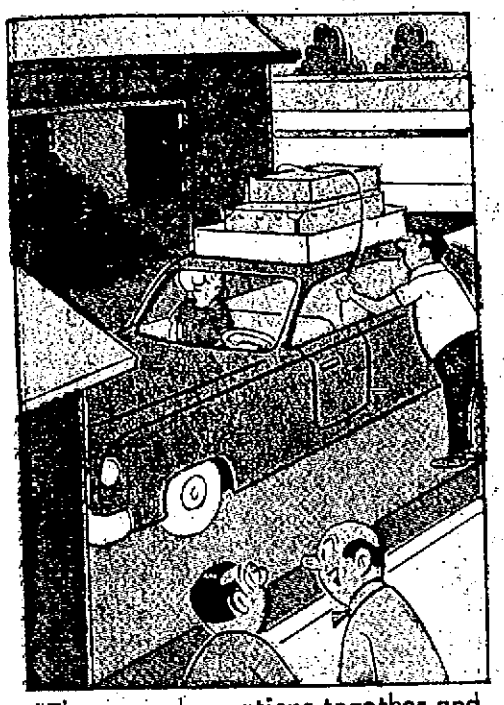

...AN' COME MORNIN' WE CALL THE HOUSE AN' TELL "DADDY" ALL 'BOUT TAMARA AN' THAT WEIRDO DR. NO-NO!! THEN WE'LL BE HOME FREE!
